D. C. Officials Stress Safety In Blackout For Tonight

Pedestrians Will Be Main Concern; Test Set for Sometime Between 9 and 11:30

Pedestrian safety will be the principal concern of District and defense officials in tonight's total blackout. Because traffic fatalities have always accompanied such tests in other cities, persons on the streets are urged to take no chances, but to remain as still as possible during the short period of darkness that will occur some time between 9 and 11:30.

Movement in the streets will be restricted to emergency vehicles, which will be moving at 15 miles per hour. However, since the headlights will be dimmed, and no traffic lights will be operating, intersection crossing will be highly dangerous, William A. Van Duzer, traffic director, warned last night.

Persons who are at home when the 38 air raid sirens blow the two-minute fluctuating signal for the beginning of the less than half-hour blackout are asked to darken their windows and stay in the house.

Autos to Be Halted

Motorists are supposed to draw up to the curb and seek shelter, leaving the ignition keys in the cars. As the only cars that will be allowed to move are those bearing red emergency stickers, police officials believe there will be little opportunity for car theft.

Meanwhile everyone in the metropolitan area is getting in line to make the blackout as nearly complete as possible, Lemuel Bolles, District director of civilian defense, announced. Even construction work on the new War Department Building in Arlington will stop for five minutes as a gesture of cooperation.

War College Ready

Chief Air-Raid Warden Clement Murphy said last night that none of the city's police, auxiliary police or air-raid wardens—who would not ordinarily be on duty—will be called to their posts until the alert signal is given tonight. This will offer a test to see how quickly they can go into action, he said.

The Army War College, Lieut. Gen. Lesley J. McNair's Army Ground Force headquarters, meanwhile announced that it is fully prepared for the blackout with the Long Fluctuating Blast To Signal Raid Alert

Air raid alarm signals for the District are:

ALERT—One long, fluctuating blast for two minutes.

ALL CLEAR—One long, continuous, nonfluctuating blast.

3 Die, Raising District Traffic Deaths to 40

The District's traffic death toll reached 40 for the year yesterday as a 60-year-old woman was fatally injured and two other persons died of injuries suffered in recent crashes.

Mrs. Louisa Fields, of 1134 Nineteenth Street Northwest, died at Emergency Hospital yesterday several hours after being knocked down by a Potomac Electric Power Co. truck near Nineteenth and M Streets Northwest.

The other two victims, both of whom died at Emergency, were:

Mrs. Cornelia Morrow, 47, of 1825 Nineteenth Street Northwest, and James Quick, 59, of 810 Sixth Street Southwest.

Walk, Do Not Run, to Cover If Caught in Street During Test

What to do during tonight's air-raid blackout test:

Pedestrians—Walk, don't run to the nearest cover. Get off the street and obey the instructions of officials showing proper credentials. DON'T try to cross the street.

Motorists—Pull over to the curb and park. Then seek shelter and obey same instructions as pedestrians. Leave the ignition key in your car; it can't be stolen, as only emergency vehicles are allowed to move.

Passengers on Streetcars or Buses—Either remain quietly seated or leave vehicle and seek shelter like pedestrians.

Home Occupants—Black out your windows, and remain indoors. DO NOT go out on the streets to add to the confusion and traffic hazards.

Occupants of Business and Industrial Establishments—Obey blackout regulations, but keep business going as usual without outside illumination or showing of indoor lights.

Drivers of Emergency Vehicles—Don't abuse the privilege of your emergency sign. Stay parked unless actually driving on duty, and when driving use dimmed lights. Don't drive over 15 miles an hour—slower if possible.

Freeze Labor Relations, Land Urges

Calls for Action to Bar Agitation, 'Keep Mind Of Worker on His Job'

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Chairman Emory S. Land of the United States Maritime Commission yesterday called for freezing of existing open and closed shop relationships in war industries to remove agitation and "keep the mind of the worker on his job."

The blunt-spoken head of war shipping production told the House Naval Committee there is "too damned much loafing going on in shipyards." He said both labor and capital must increase productivity 13 per cent this year and 25 per cent next to meet President Roosevelt's shipping goals.

Land testified that "the time is ripe for Congress by statute to create a national war labor policy," as Representative Vinson (Democrat), of Georgia, presented to the committee a modified version of the original Smith-Vinson bill imposing sweeping controls on war labor and war profits.

Bill Extends Work Week

Besides freezing open and closed shop relationships, the only major objective specifically indorsed by Land, the bill extends the work week in war industries to 48 hours before time and a half payments are required, limits war contract profits to $8000 plus 8 per cent of the cost in any single "profit period," and places a $5 ceiling on union initiation fees and $2 monthly on dues.

The revised bill puts Saturday, Sunday and holiday work on the same basis as any other day, when performed within a 48-hour week. It directs the War Production Board to put into effect a plan for payment of production bonuses at the end of every work week to workers "whose volume and efficiency of production" warrant the payment. Appropriations would be authorized to enable war contractors to pay these incentive bonuses.

Knox to Testify

The modified draft was prepared by Vinson and Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, as it became apparent that the original measure, outlawing the closed shop and entirely suspending the 40-hour week, lacked sufficient votes to clear the committee.

Freezing provisions of the new bill are embodied in less sweeping form in the Connally plant seizure

Canada's Price Ceiling Works, Gore Reports

Premier's Coming Visit Spurs Congressional Interest in Plan

Congressional interest in the Canadian plan of over-all price and wage controls yesterday was heightened by word of the imminent arrival in Washington of Prime Minister Mackenzie King of Canada.

The Canadian prime minister was reported en route to the Capital to attend the next meeting of the Pacific Council and incidentally to resume his periodic conferences with the President.

At the Canadian Legation it was pointed out that the President and the prime minister have an accumulation of things to talk about and doubt was expressed that price control was one of them. Economists of the two Governments, however, have recently kept in close contact on inflation control measures and with price levels climbing the Canadian system has come under especial study.

Roosevelt Still Undecided

President Roosevelt spent another day of intensive study of over-all antiinflationary measures and is expected to present his new program next week in a message to Congress or in the form of an executive order. At the White House it was emphasized that no decisions had been reached.

The No. 1 Congressional advocate of the so-called "Baruch plan" of over-all controls — Representative Albert Gore (Democrat), of Tennessee — meanwhile returned from Canada after a week's study of the Canadian system.

"Canada has definitely called a halt in the rise of prices and living costs while in the meantime our own prices and cost of living have steadily risen," Gore told reporters.

Canada froze prices at the highest level prevailing in a four-week period last fall. Wage rates were frozen at levels prevailing last October 24, with provision for upward adjustments to meet rising living costs and other factors.

Awaits Administration Plan

Gore said the Canadian cost of living index, which stood at 115.4 last November, had actually fallen to 115 in March. While sale prices, at 130 last November, have risen only to 130.8. In contrast, Gore said, the wholesale price index in this country advanced 16.2 points from February, 1941, to February, 1942. Between August of last year and February this year, he said, the United States living cost index rose

Revised Equipment Orders

Landis Blames OCD Delays On State When He Took Over

James M. Landis said last night that when he took over the job of Director of Civilian Defense—from which Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia, of New York, resigned—he found that specifications for civilian defense equipment "were in such shape that they had to be substantially revised" with the aid of the War Production Board.

This revision, Landis said, was "because they used altogether too much critical material."

Landis expressed his views in a statement which did not mention LaGuardia by name but followed an assertion by the New York Mayor that Landis had been lax in providing Civilian Defense equipment to municipalities. LaGuardia said "appropriations were obtained before I resigned on February 10" and that specifications were completed.

Landis said that when he took the office, the bill authorizing expenditure of one million dollars for the protective equipment had just been passed by Congress. The bill actually appropriating the money was passed February 21.

Although the legislation had been pending in Congress since September 1, Landis said he found upon taking office that the executive order to implement the statute had not been drafted and added that it was not signed by the President until March 6.

The OCD "almost immediately" allocated the funds to various branches of the Army for the award of contracts, Landis continued, including 20 million dollars for gas masks and 48 million dollars for fire-fighting equipment and other material.

Rep. Hoffman Sees 'Smear' In Axis Probe

Jury Questions Him; He Clashes With Woodrum in House, Attacks President

Gerald L. K. Smith gnaws at Anglo-American unity in a new magazine. See Page 5.

Representative Clare E. Hoffman yesterday was questioned twice before the special grand jury on Axis agents, and there were indications that the grand jurors will call him back before they finish their investigation of enemy-inspired propaganda.

Hoffman delayed giving his evidence while he raised a point of "personal privilege" in the House, where he professed to discuss recent disclosures about the kind of people who have been sending out official copies of his "Roosevelt Is a Judas" speech.

During an hour of invective on the floor of the House the scowling isolationist Republican from Michigan attacked President Roosevelt, condemned advocates of "Union Now," called Special Prosecutor William Power Maloney a "smear artist" and hinted that The Post found out things it had no business knowing, in the course of an investigation of defeatist activities in which his speech was found to be involved.

Doesn't Refer to Some Points

However, the shouting Hoffman had not himself a word to say—not a whisper—about three items:

The mailing of his "Roosevelt Is a Judas" speech in the same wrapper with the bulletin from the nameless leaders of a revolutionist group who urged their members to buy guns and ammunition.

The mailing of his speech by Charles E. Hudson, Jew-baiting, anti-British agitator, in the same envelope with a seditious postcard and an offer to sell copies of the Hoffman speech in wholesale lots.

The offering for sale of two pamphlets written by Hoffman, by the editor of a pro-Nazi magazine published in California.

These have been revealed by The Post in the last few days.

Fish Comes to Rescue

Once, when Hoffman was hard-pressed by questions from Majority Leader John McCormack, Representative Hamilton Fish came to his rescue, Hamilton Fish—who instructed his secretary to handle a franked mailing for the German agent, George Sylvester Viereck, and who saw the secretary go to prison for perjury about Viereck, and about depositing some concealed evidence in the storeroom used by Fish on Capitol Hill.

Members who invoke "personal privilege" usually exhibit what has been printed about them, so that members of the House may know what is being "replied" to.

Hoffman, however, selected four mild paragraphs from two out-of-

Churchill Reports

By the Associated Press

London, April 13.—At least three Japanese battleships, five aircraft carriers, a number of heavy and light cruisers and several flotillas of destroyers are in the Bay of Bengal at this moment, Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons today in a report which made clear the stark and deadly peril of India.

London observers quickly predicted that this mighty fleet soon would support an invasion, probably by the Japanese troops now smashing at the British-Chinese defenses in Burma.

Many Fleeing Madras

Indians already were taking heed for their personal safety, it being announced that 130,000 persons of the Madras population of 600,000 had moved inland since the air raid alarm in that southeast coast city Tuesday.

Disclosure of the operations of the Japanese battle force off India and Ceylon, in strength far greater than Britons had guessed, came in the Prime Minister's discussion of the loss last week of the British cruisers Dorsetshire and Cornwall and the aircraft carrier Hermes—all victims of planes from the Japanese cruisers.

One of the Japanese battleships is a 16-inch-gun vessel of the modernized Nagato class, 32,720 tons, Churchill disclosed.

British planes which sped out from Ceylon during the Japanese air raid on Colombo April 5 were unable to find the Japanese fleet because of thunderstorms and bad visibility, he said.

When the Japanese four days later struck at the British naval base of Trincomalee, every British fighter, bomber and torpedo plane available soared into battle, but near misses on one Japanese carrier constituted the only report of blows against the enemy fleet, Churchill stated, and added these bitter facts:

Some Ships Damaged Also

"But whether any damage was done I have no knowledge. Practically all our aircraft taking part in the attack (on the fleet) were knocked out, or seriously damaged, or became unserviceable."

Churchill noted that the Japanese raiders suffered heavy aircraft losses at both Colombo and Trincomalee, but announced that British

Officers of the Undersea Raider Seawolf

The story of the most successful submarine cruise ever made was told by the Navy yesterday.

It was the tale of the American submarine Seawolf, which has just returned from a long, lone prowl through Dutch East Indies waters, after torpedoing four Japanese warships and three other vessels.

News of the "saga of the Seawolf" was given in an announcement that the commander of the submarine, Lieut. Comdr. Frederick Burdett Warder, has been recommended for an award of the Navy Cross.

Previously, the Navy had disclosed that a single American sub had sunk a Japanese light cruiser, destroyer and a large transport, torpedoed and probably sunk another cruiser, another large transport and an unidentified enemy ship.

Yesterday the name of the submarine and its commander and

U. S. Rejects Vichy's Protest On Recognition

To Accept Free French Rule as Legal Where Effective, Welles Says

The United States last night advised the Vichy Government that it intended to "enter into relations with those French citizens who are in actual control" of French territories, either in Africa or in the Pacific area.

The policy was announced by Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles in a note rejecting the Vichy protest against United States recognition of control of French Equatorial Africa and the French Cameroons by the Free French forces under Gen. Charles De Gaulle.

But Welles assured Ambassador Gaston Henry-Haye that the course is being followed in fervent hopes that this country "may see the re-establishment of the independence of France and of the integrity of French territory."

France Promised Restoration

"The French people," Welles added "may rest assured that the Government and people of the United States will continue to maintain unimpaired their full respect for the sovereign right of the people of France. They may continue to be confident that by the victory of the United Nations those rights will be restored intact to them."

Welles pointed out that if the Vichy Government had been in control of the African territory in question, the United States would have communicated with it prior to es-

Keep 'em From Flying

By the Associated Press

Moscow, April 13.—Destruction of 322 German planes in the last week, bringing the total since March 11 to 1103, was announced tonight by the Soviet Information Bureau.

The midnight communique also reported capture of "a locality of great importance on the northwestern front" in one of several continuing Red army offensives which have regained some populated places.

Location of the important spot was not disclosed. A special announcement over the Moscow radio said 9000 German soldiers had been killed and 76 tanks destroyed on that front between April 1 and 10.

The communique listing the terrific German plane losses did not include in the total eight reported shot down Sunday.

It said the Russians lost 314 planes during the same period the Germans were losing the 1103.

An account today in Pravda, Communist Party paper, said the Germans were hurling hundreds of planes into a desperate gamble for superiority in the air, but were losing them at a ratio of 6 to 1 to the Russian defenders. It said Nazi air power was strained still further by

Cebu Still Silent

American-Filipino troops smashed back at the enemy on two fronts yesterday, forcefully demonstrating that the Battle of the Philippines has by no means ended.

Besieged Corregidor turned its big guns on fallen Bataan Peninsula for the first time during the day, hitting two enemy tank and truck columns and starting large fires.

At the same time, the gunners of the four Manila Bay forts sank a medium-sized Jap vessel and a flotilla of small enemy boats that probably were being concentrated for an assault on the island citadels.

Jap Warehouses Burned

Down in the southern island of Mindanao, American - Filipino patrols struck swiftly at eight Japanese warehouses stocked with food. The depots, near Digos on the Gulf of Davao, were burned, the War Department said.

There was no further word from Cebu, where a force of 12,000 enemy troops was landed Friday and Saturday. Beachheads were captured at six points, under cover of dive bombers and warship fire, and the city of Cebu—second city of the Philippines—apparently captured.

Yesterday, the War Department reported that communication between Cebu and Corregidor had been cut off for more than 48 hours.

This does not mean, however, that the American-Filipino forces are not still fighting. After stubbornly resisting the greatly superior force put ashore by the Japs they would probably retire to the interior to carry on guerilla warfare, military men here declare.

Raided 22 Times in Two Days

But the island forts were themselves under steady, heavy attack.

Enemy artillery mounted both on Bataan Peninsula and across Manila Bay on Cavite shores kept Corregidor and its satellite forts under a constant crossfire.

The morning Army communique reported ten Japanese air raids on Corregidor during the preceding 24 hours, making a total of 22 bombing attacks on the fortress in two

Dorothy Greene Killed as Car Runs Wild in Virginia

Harrisonburg, Va., April 13 (AP). Miss Dorothy Greene, 45, co-owner of Bear Trap Farm near here and a former leader in Girl Scout work in the District of Columbia, was killed tonight in the crash of a station wagon she was driving on the Valley Turnpike.

She apparently lost control of the machine on Liskey's Hill a mile north of Harrisonburg. It left the highway, sheared off a telegraph pole and plunged into Smith's Creek.

Miss Greene apparently was returning from Washington to the farm, near the George Washington National Forest at Stokesville, 13 miles southwest of Harrisonburg. The farm is a popular weekend resort for Washington officialdom and society.

Miss Greene directed the building in 1930 of Camp May Flather, District of Columbia Girl Scout camp near Stokesville.

31,000 to See Nats, Yanks Open Baseball Season Here Today

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Blessed by a nod from the White House in a war-torn world, major league baseball moves in again on the Nation's proceedings at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Boom Town Washington will cram Griffith Stadium's 31,000 seats for the opening battle between the Nats and the World Champion New York Yankees.

President Roosevelt, whose presence has highlighted the opening ceremonies for nine of the ten years he has been in the White House, again has been invited to throw out the first ball. It was Mr. Roosevelt's action, giving war-time baseball the green light as an essential to public morale, a month after Pearl Harbor, that swept away the uncertainty of the game's immediate future.

Griffith Stadium's gates will swing open at noon to admit buyers of the 7000 bleacher seats at 55 cents, which will go on sale at that hour. Fifteen minutes before game time, Washington's traditional opening game ceremonies will commence with Vice President Wallace, American League President Will Harridge and Club President Clark Griffith leading the march to the flag pole in company with the United States Army Band.

When the umpire in chief bawls a lusty "play ball!" following the ceremonial pitch, Manager Bucky Harris will send onto the field an almost completely remodeled Washington team that has whipped up a frenzy of fan interest by its exhibition game successes. The coldly calculating gentlemen who quote the odds, however, have labeled the Yankees as favorites to win today's game at 7½ to 5.

It will be Sid Hudson vs. Red Ruffing on the pitcher's mound—a May and December duo. The 24-year-old Hudson, only two seasons removed from the Class D Florida State League, is Manager Bucky Harris' pitching choice in deference to his consistently brilliant work for the club which he joined in 1939 as a gawky right hander.

Harris has been grooming Hudson for today's assignment for the past several weeks, but Manager Joe McCarthy only yesterday made the definite announcement that Ruffing would be the Yankees' opening game pitcher. He made the 37-year-old right-hander his choice after indicating previously that Spud Chandler would be on the mound for the Yanks.

A face-lifting job on the Washington club, necessitated chiefly by

Lieut. James Routh Reported Killed in Final Bataan Battle

The first Washington casualty in the final battle of Bataan was reported last night when Mr. and Mrs. James W. Routh, 2511 Q Street Northwest, were notified by the War Department that their son, James, jr., a first lieutenant in the Philippine Scouts, had been "killed in action" April 9.

LIEUT. ROUTH

The 24-year-old hero, who was graduated only last June from the University of California, had written his parents recently that he expected to come home safely since "they have come as close to me as possible with everything they have."

His parents last night sadly recalled the letter, in which their son mentioned that he had been slightly wounded and predicted courageously:

"We will take these boys yet."

Lieutenant Routh was killed on the day on which General Wainright reported to the War Department he had evacuated 3500 troops from the Bataan Peninsula to besieged Corregidor.

The young officer's father said his son always had been interested in Army life and had obtained his reserve commission in the R.O.T.C. unit at Southern California in his junior year. He was sent to the Philippines immediately upon his graduation and was promoted to a first lieutenant after war broke out.

Lieutenant Routh's parents have resided in Washington for three years. His father is director of research and statistics of the United States Housing Authority.

Official Soviet Paper Warns Japs Not to Try 'Sneak Punch' in Siberia

Pravda Tells Tokyo to Stop 'Blabbering'

By the Associated Press

Kuibyshev, April 13.—Mighty Russia, with hundreds of bombers and submarines 680 miles from Tokyo, sternly warned Japan today to observe strictly their year-old neutrality pact despite the "blabbering" of Japanese military leaders about a war in Soviet Siberia.

"It is necessary that Japanese military and Fascist cliques, whose heads have been turned by military successes, realize that their blabbering about an annexationist war in the north may cause damage in the first place and most of all to Japan herself," the official Communist newspaper Pravda said in a prominent editorial.

"If the Japanese side strictly observes the undertakings assumed, the Soviet-Japanese neutrality pact will preserve its importance for the peoples of both countries even in the present complicated international situation."

Pravda's blunt admonition was made on the anniversary of the historical accord.

The editorial cited numerous cases of Japanese aggression in which treaties with the United States, China and Great Britain were flouted.

"On December 7, 1941, Japanese troops suddenly attacked naval bases of the United States and Great Britain and war broke out in the Pacific," Pravda said pointedly.

The article noted also that "Japanese intervention in the Far East with the occupation of northern Sakhalin (in 1918), the seizure of Manchuria, and the events (Soviet-Japanese border clashes) at Khassan Lake and in the area of Khalkhingol River" previously had put Soviet-Japanese relations "to very serious trials."

"On November 25, 1941, Japan took part in the prolongation for five years of the Anti-Comintern Pact, the aggressive essence of which is universally known," the editorial said.

"On December 11 of last year a new tripartite pact was signed by Japan, Germany and Italy who mutually undertook not only jointly to war to the finish against Great Britain and the United States, and not to conclude a separate peace, but even after the victorious termination of the war to cooperate most closely in conformity with the tripartite pact."

While Russia's main armies of millions stood firmly in the west against Hitler, another self-sufficient force of perhaps 600,000 or more well armed men stood guard on the Siberian frontier facing Japan and her puppet territory.

The Russians have been warned repeatedly by the Chinese and British to expect a Japanese attack, the treaty nothwithstanding, this spring, probably timed with Germany's supreme effort in the west.

N. Y. Firm Gets Underpass Job

The last major contract for the improvement of Twenty-third Street to make it an arterial approach to Memorial Bridge was awarded last night when the Colmar Construction Co. of New York was given the contract to construct the Virginia Avenue underpass at Twenty-third Street.

The Colmar Co.'s bid was $145,444.40, which is nine per cent lower than the District Engineer Department's estimate of the cost. Construction is expected to begin within a few weeks, and is to be completed in the late summer.

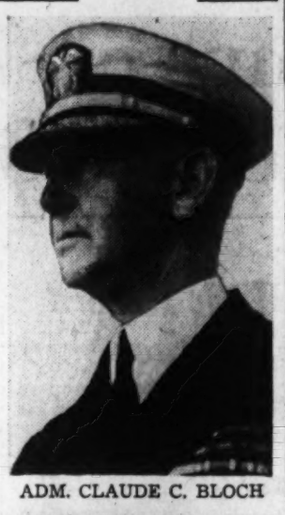
Adm. Bagley Takes Post In Hawaii



ADM. CLAUDE C. BLOCH

ADM. DAVID W. BAGLEY

The Navy announced last night that Rear Admiral David W. Bagley has assumed command of the Fourteenth Naval District and of the Hawaiian sea frontier, succeeding Rear Admiral Claude C. Bloch.

Admiral Bloch, a former commander of the United States fleet, has been assigned to duty in the office of the Secretary of the Navy. He is completing a two-year tour of duty in Hawaii and is due for retirement for age in July.

The report of the Roberts board which investigated the Pearl Harbor disaster mentioned Admiral Bloch only as the joint author, with Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short, then Army commander in Hawaii, of the joint coastal frontier defense plan for Hawaii.

Served Under Kimmel

He served under the direction of Rear Admiral H. E. Kimmel, then commander in chief of the Pacific Fleet, in preparing the plan, the Roberts report said.

In its findings, the report said "the responsible commanders in the Hawaiian area, in fulfillment of their obligations to do so, prepared plans which, if adapted to and used for the existing emergency, would have been adequate."

Short and Kimmel were relieved of duty prior to the investigation by the Roberts commission. That body held them responsible for the disaster. Their court-martial has been postponed due to the war, and the two officers retired.

Admiral Bagley, 59-year-old native of Raleigh, N. C., served here from 1933 to 1935, part of the time as assistant chief of the Bureau of Navigation.

Won Medal in Last War

He won the Distinguished Service Medal for his service during the first World War as commander of the destroyer Jacob Jones, when that vessel was sunk by a German submarine.

After the war, Admiral Bagley served as naval attache to the Netherlands and later as chief of staff to the commander, United States Naval Forces in Europe. He was commander of the battle force minecraft in 1937-38, afterwards serving as commandant of the Mare Island Navy Yard. Recently, he has had a command at sea.

Zipper Firm Denies Flouting Priority Rules

Talon, Inc., taking exception to accusations by the War Production Board, declared last night that it had never acquired or used a single pound of copper "contrary to priority rules or regulations."

A WPB order yesterday suspended priority assistance to the Meadville, Pa., firm until July 1 on the grounds that the company had on order three million pounds of imported copper when it requested priority aid last summer in securing copper.

In a statement, the company, a large producer of slide fasteners, asserted that it had of its own initiative disclosed "all pertinent facts" to the WPB and had "interpreted every order of WPB against our own interests where any doubt existed in our minds."

While saying "we resent any charge of lack of cooperation," the company commented, with respect to the penalty, that civilian production already had been shut off. "The suspension of priorities on a civilian production which no longer exists is obviously a highly technical penalty," it said.

some details of its highly successful cruise were revealed.

Veteran subamrine officers agreed that the accomplishments of the Seawolf were without parallel. Records of sinkings by the submarine fleets of the world are none too complete, and it is entirely possible a submersible may have accounted for a larger to total of ships in one cruise.

But no American or foreign sub has ever claimed such a bag of warships before, Navy men declared.

Vice Admiral Herbert F. Leary, commander of the Southwest Pacific Force, recommended that Commander Warder be awarded the Navy Cross for "heroism and especially meritorious conduct with the enemy."

Struck in Shallow Seas

"Lieut. Comdr. Warder attacked and sank a Japanese destroyer and one large transport which were part of a heavy screened force," the Navy stated. "The attack was pressed home in extremely shallow and narrow waters where very strong currents exist near the coast of Java.

"Off Christmas Island, Netherlands East Indies, he made repeated attacks on enemy light cruisers which were heavily screened by destroyers, sinking one cruiser and heavily damaging two others, one of which probably sank.

"All attacks were followed up to short ranges in face of active enemy opposition, and after each attack his submarine was the target of heavy, prolonged depth-charge counter-attacks by the enemy. Lieutenant commander brought his craft through unscathed."

The Seawolf, a sister-ship of the ill-fated Squalus, was built at the Portsmouth, N. H. Navy Yard in 1939. A craft of 1450-tons it carries eight 21-inch torpedo tubes and a three-inch deck gun.

Out Since February

The long-range craft set out on its patrol in the latter part of February, stayed out through March and returned to its undisclosed base a few days ago. Telling of its cruise, the Navy stated:

"On routine patrol off Bali, in February, the Seawolf attacked and damaged a large transport near Bali. Later in February, on the same patrol off Bali, the Seawolf sank a Japanese destroyer and a large transport, and damaged an unidentified vessel.

"The locale of the Seawolf's operations was then shifted to the vicinity of Christmas Island, south of Java, and there the submarine met with even more conspicious success. During the Japanese landing operations on the island near the end of March and during the early days of April, the Seawolf played havoc among the enemy cruisers."

Earlier a garbled report of the results of the action had been received and put out by the Navy. Later advices indicated that three cruisers were torpedoed during the Christmas Island landings.

"During the early morning of March 31," it was said, "a Japanese light cruiser was hit by one and possibly two torpedoes. Although positive confirmation is lacking, it is probable that this ship sank.

"During the night of March 31-April 1, a light cruiser was sunk by the Seawolf. On the afternoon of the next day, April 1, the submarine damaged a third light cruiser."

Besides Commander Warder, the Navy identified the Seawolf's officers as Lieut. William N. Deragon, of Rutland, Vt., and Ensign James Mercer, of White Plains, N. Y.

Warder, 38, is a native of Grafton, W. Va. He was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1925, and has been on submarine duty since 1928.

its necessary use for transport because of bad ground conditions.

Reds Drive 21 Miles Through Nazi Lines

Kuibyshev, April 13 (U.P.).—Russian shock troops have driven a spearhead 21 miles through the German lines southwest of Moscow and weathered fierce counterattacks which "failed to remove the Soviet threat to a large city stronghold," the army newspaper Red Star reported tonight.

London reports said the Russians had driven across the Desna River, near Bryansk, and had practically encircled the city, 210 miles southwest of Moscow, 70 miles east of the White Russian border. The reports were attributed to Stockholm newspapers, quoting the Moscow radio.

(Three strong German counterattacks were launched in a desperate effort to recapture a vital settlement on the Bryansk front, but were repulsed, a Kuibyshev dispatch to the British Exchange Telegraph reported.)

Maj. I. Protkin said in a dispatch to the Red Star that the enemy counterattacks on the southwestern front before the large city converted by the Germans into a key base were supported by 70 "spring tanks" and 60 planes, including squadrons of dive-bombers.

The dispatch said the Germans, reinforced by reserves, were struggling in several sectors southwest of Moscow to slash off Red army wedges. A 21-mile salient was established by one Soviet unit, but it was "localized" by German infantry and tank attacks against its flank.

(Stockholm dispatches to London also said the Red army had made a deep penetration of the German lines around Rzhev, after capturing Manjalova, 9 miles east of Rzhev.)

A Soviet communique reported that another German attempt to raid Murmansk had been thwarted by the Red air force. Six Russian planes intercepted 15 German dive-bombers and 13 fighters headed for Murmansk, the high command said, shooting down 3 and turning back the rest.

plane losses, though less, were serious and that damage also was done to shore establishments and ships in harbor.

"The naval operations were under command of Admiral Sir James Somerville," said Churchill, "an officer who for the past two years has been engaged in the western Mediterranean and has almost unrivaled experience of the conditions of modern naval war.

"Without giving the enemy useful information, I cannot make any statement about the strength of the forces at Admiral Somerville's disposal nor of the reason which led him to make the dispositions of his fleet, for which he is responsible.

"Nothing in these dispositions or in the consequences which followed from them has in any way weakened the confidence of the admiralty in his judgment."

Cheers greeted this statement, which was underscored by the announcement soon afterward that Admiral Somerville had been named commander of the Eastern Fleet. He replaces Vice Admiral Sir Geoffrey Layton, commander in chief of Ceylon, who has been temporary commander of the fleet since December 11.

Commanded at Dunkerque

Admiral Somerville is the man whose makeshift fleet of all sorts of ships and boats rescued the British army from Dunkerque in May and June, 1940. He participated in the destruction of the German battleship Birmarck in the Atlantic last May.

Churchill frankly acknowledged that it was quite impossible to supply continuous air protection to all British ships at sea, saying:

"Unless these risks are taken, there is no means of carrying on the immense business of convoy and sea war which falls upon the Royal Navy."

Compared with criticisms after loss of the Prince of Wales and the Repulse and the escape of the German battleships Scharnhorst and Gneisenau and cruiser Prinz Eugen, today's questioning in Parliament was mild.

Churchill agreed to an early statement of the present course of the war but insisted it be at a secret session.

Suggestion that Britain follow the American Pearl Harbor precedent by appointing a commission to inquire into military reverses was dropped amid applause when Ian Hunter, conservative member, asserted:

"The United Nations must be more concerned with the offensive in the future than with what happened in the past."

It was suggested that where the enemy was known to be in preponderant strength the Admiralty might use the old strategy of sending out only submarines and surface raiders.

Churchill replied, "We have the Pacific Ocean and the Indian Ocean with the Japanese occupying an intermediate position between the two. It is possible to use large forces on one side and small forces on the other, or vice versa."

Of the Indian political situation, Churchill declined to make a statement until Sir Stafford Cripps returned from his fruitless mission of trying to arrange dominion status for India.

Touching briefly on the Malayan campaign, Churchill said that a full report had been received from the Australian Lieut. Gen. Henry Gordon Bennett, but that it was not suitable for publication and the government was still seeking further facts assembled on the campaign.

Antiaircraft gunners on the islands kept the bombers at a respectful altitude, however, and the forts sustained only minor damage. There were "some" casualties among the defenders, the communique reported.

Japan is evidently making a determined bid to subdue the forts quickly. As long as they remain in American-Filipino hands, strategically important Manila Bay is of no use to Japan.

Two Army Freighters Lost

The loss of two freighters of the Army Transport Service—the Liberty and the Meigs—was announced by the War Department yesterday.

The Liberty, a 24-year-old vessel of 6211 tons, was torpedoed off Bali January 11, the Department said. A Japanese submarine sent two torpedoes into the craft 12 miles off the Dutch East Indies island and it was beached.

All of its crew and passengers were rescued by Dutch planes.

The Meigs was bombed and sunk in the harbor of Darwin, Australia, by Jap planes on February 19. One members of its crew was killed and eight were wounded.

Among the wounded was the vessel's captain, F. S. Link. The department first reported him to have died of his wounds, but later said he was alive and recovering.

The fate of the 36,000 American-Filipino heroes on Bataan was still unknown. Last night's communique declared that there is "still no communication between Corregidor and our troops in Bataan."

A Tokyo broadcast reported an announcement from Japanese imperial headquarters that their forces had completely occupied the peninsula. It declared that the occupation was completed "after an eight-day general offensive, the main body of the enemy forces, which had been offering stubborn resistance, being completely annihilated."

Until yesterday, the island forts had refrained from firing on Bataan, even though enemy batteries there were shelling them constantly, for fear of hitting our own troops.

They first turned their guns on the harbor of Mariveles, at the tip of the peninsula, where the Japs had gathered a fleet of small boats, and then on Bataan itself, hitting the tank-truck columns.

The report of the sinking of a medium-sized Jap vessel by the harbor forts said merely that it was "off the Bataan coast" and did not specify whether in the China Sea or Manila Bay. Officials here, however, believe it must have been in the bay.

Navy Saves 290 as Refugee Ship Is Sunk

By the Associated Press

Charleston, S. C., April 13.—A passenger ship with refugees from the war zone in the Far East was torpedoed and sunk off the Atlantic Coast Saturday afternoon without the loss of a life.

Quartered here until arrangements could be made for their transfer, the 290 survivors, apparently none the worse for their experience, praised the Navy forces responsible for their rescue and described the calm on board when their vessel was attacked.

Sinking of the ship was announced today by the Sixth Naval District public relations office.

Only one casualty was reported. Bertram J. R. Barton, member of the executive council of Jahore, India, was treated in Charleston Hospital for injuries received when he jumped into a lifeboat. The remaining pasengers and members of the crew, and a cat and three kittens, were transferred to safety without an injury.

Attacked at 4:30 p. m., the survivors were picked up an hour and a half later by a United States Naval vessel.

The oldest person aboard was Mrs. Charlotte Pugh, 86, of Mountain Ashe, South Wales. The youngest was Peter Wickett, 7-month-old son of Mrs. D. J. Wickett, of Singapore. His mother is known in England as Vera Wood, operatic singer.

Another Group Reaches Nassau

Nassau, Bahamas, April 13 (AP).—Thirty survivors of a torpedoed ship reached Nassau Saturday afternoon. Two of their companions were killed and ten were missing.

The vessel, whose size, identity and nationality were not revealed by the British colonial government, was sunk Monday, April 6, and the men were rescued the following day.

6 Ships Sunk Off Brazil

Fortaleza, Brazil, April 13 (AP).—Axis submarines sank four United Nations merchantmen, including two United States tankers, off northern Brazil last week, and there has been no word of survivors from two of the vessels, dispatches received here and officially approved for publication said today.

The vessels were identified as the United States tankers T. C. McCobb, 7452 tons, and Eugene V. R. Thayer, 7138 tons; the 7800-ton British merchantship Empire Peregrine, and the 2161-ton Norwegian freighter Balkis.

Survivors and Brazilian maritime officials said all were torpedoed in the same general area and their accounts agreed there had been no word thus far of survivors from the T. C. McCobb and the Empire Peregrine.

Of the Eugene V. R. Thayer's crewmen, 26 were landed at Camocin, Ceara State—13 from a lifeboat and 13 by United States planes. Nine crew members were reported missing and some accounts said they had died in a lifeboat.

A Swedish ship rescued 24 survivors of the Balkis, the Norwegian consul here said. He added that the captain, first officer and five other crewmen, among them a stewardess, were killed in a machine-gun attack on lifeboats by the German U-boat which sank their ship last Friday.

Honolulu, April 13 (AP).—A secret hazardous and important mission over enemy territory brought Distinguished Flying Crosses to four officers and five enlisted men at Hickam Field today.

Citations accompanying the awards credited the men "with heroism and extraordinary achievement while participating in an aerial flight."

No details could be divulged for the present.

King's Cousin Made Admiral, Air Marshal And General for Job

By the Associated Press

London, April 13.—Lord Louis Mountbatten, adventurous cousin of King George, is the leader of Britain's invasion-trained Commandos, and master-minded their recent continental raids at St. Nazaire, Bruneval and Vaagso, it was disclosed today.

Lord Mountbatten, a debonair fighting man of the royal navy since he was 13, has been in charge of the Commandos since March 18 with the acting rank of vice admiral and honorary ranks of lieutenant general and air marshal in the navy, army and air force.

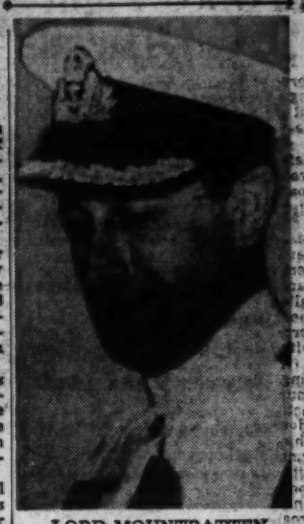
The 41-year-old Mountbatten thus became the youngest admiral in recent British naval history and the first to hold fighting rank in all the three services which take part in the combined operations of the Commandos.

He apparently succeeded to actual leadership of Britain's shock troops October 19, when Admiral Sir Roger Keyes, World War hero of Zeebrugge, was relieved and Mountbatten became an "adviser for combined operations" with the rank of commodore, first class.

Named to command the Illustrious while she was under repair in the United States, he was called home from Honolulu in a few weeks to undertake a mysterious "special assignment." He plunged at once into planning the hair-trigger timing of the successful raids on German-held Norwegian and French coasts, and spent days with maps, models and photographs. He is said to have had to overcome considerable opposition from cautious officials before he got permission to give the word "go."

Although Mountbatten has had one destroyer sunk from under him by enemy bombs and another torpedoed, his only injury in this war came from the bite of a United States Navy goat at the American dockyard where the Illustrious was repaired.

The colorful commander owns a penthouse above lordly Park Lane in London and is a millionaire several times over. His marriage in 1922 to Edwina Temple, granddaughter of the financier Sir Ernest Cassell, linked 24 million dollars to his own fortune.



LORD MOUNTBATTEN

Born at Windsor, the great-grandson of Queen Victoria, Mountbatten is an English descendant of German antecedents. His father, Admiral of the Fleet Prince Louis of Battenburg, was Britain's first sea lord at the beginning of the World War, but relinquished his position and title because of his German ancestors and changed his family name to Mountbatten.

The younger Mountbatten served as midshipman on Admiral Beatty's flagships Lion and Queen Elizabeth and finished as a sublieutenant of a submarine flotilla.

He accompanied the Prince of Wales on his Australian and Indian tours, specialized in radio, became wireless officer of the Mediterranean fleet and finally found scope for his fighting spirit in the second World War.

Jap Troops Launch New Attack in Effort to Drive Wedge in Burma Defense

Chiang's Visit Cheers Forces In Grave Fight

By the United Press

New Delhi, April 13.—The main force of Japanese troops, after driving to within 40 miles of the Burma oil fields, has veered northeast in heavy force in an attempt to drive a wedge between British imperials defending that sector and Chinese troops battling along the Mandalay road to the east, it was revealed tonight.

The Chinese, under United States Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, have abandoned Yedashe, 18 miles north of fallen Toungoo, in bitter hand-to-hand fighting, and have fallen back 22 miles north along the Mandalay Road to keep their forces on a direct line east of the withdrawing British.

(A communique issued in Chungking said that in the area north of Toungoo, the Japanese, under protection of aircraft and tanks, had advanced but were stopped by Chinese troops. It said that up to Sunday morning, the Chinese army still was in the vicinity of Kyangin, about 10 miles north of Toungoo, where "vigorous fighting' is in progress.)

The British and Chinese sectors are about 70 miles apart, separated by the Pegu Yoma foothills.

Position Is Grave

Communiques pictured the grave Allied position in Burma as follows:

The Japanese column driving north from Prome against the Irrawaddy oil fields turned east at a point about 20 miles south of Magwe and 40 miles south of the main oil field. It lunged across the Pegu Yoma, backed by strong artillery and air support and reached a point southwest of Taungdwingyi, which is one of the few east-west roads connecting the oil field area with the Mandalay Road.

At the same time, a supplementary Japanese column continued driving directly north toward the oil fields and it has reached Singbaungwe, 38 miles south of Magwe.

Planes Attack Two Groups

The Royal Air Force attacked two Japanese concentrations along the new invasion route east of the Irrawaddy and the American volunteer group, attached to the Chinese army, was constantly in action in the Toungoo area.

Military spokesmen said the recent lull in Allied air activity—which the A.V.G. broke by shooting down or damaging at least 35 enemy planes since last Wednesday was caused by a shortage of ammunition and other supplies which has now been remedied.

The A. V. G. struck at Japanese bomber concentrations yesterday, shooting down three Jap planes and destroying three bombers on the ground at an airdrome north of Toungoo, but both the British and Chinese communiques reported intense Japanese aerial bombardment over the entire front.

The United Nations gained a new, tiny ally in the Burma battle today when the King of Nandang, a tribal territory in India's Assam State north of Burma, declared war on Japan and promised the British "wholehearted and unflinching support."

R. A. F. Pounds Ruhr Valley, Crosses Alps to Turin, Genoa

By the United Press

London, April 13.—R. A. F. fighters lashed out in strong force against Occupied France this afternoon, only a few hours after the last of the night's bombers returned from a devastating sweep that extended all the way from Germany's Ruhr Valley to Italy's Mediterranean coast to Genoa.

The afternoon sweep over France was "entirely unopposed," the air ministry said.

German planes crossed the east and northeast coasts of England tonight, bombing four areas, including one in the North Midlands, it was reported authoritatively. The Midlands raid was the first inland attack since November 1 last year. At an east coast town considerable damage was done to houses and it was reported that three persons were killed.

Britain's night raiders made a double crossing of the Alps—a 1500-mile flight—to strike at Italy's royal arsenal and Fiat works at Turin, and the harbor area of Genoa.

Conforming with reports that Turin officials were trying to cope with 2000 blackout offenses a month, British fliers found the whole city lighted up on their arrival. The lights went out when the first bomb struck, but there was no anti-aircraft firing and no Italian fighter planes appeared, returning pilots said.

The industrialized Ruhr got the heaviest bombing of the night, but British bombers and fighters spread havoc through northern France and the low countries for six hours, concentrating on German air fields and the docks at Le Havre. It was one of the most sustained night attacks of the war.

Ten bombers and one fighter failed to return.

Newspapers referred to the R. A. F. cross-Channel sweeps as "the Battle of Occupied France," contrasting it with the "Battle of Britain" of 1940. German antiaircraft guns along the French coast were in action all night, blasting at the R. A. F. planes coming and going.

(The Rome radio broadcast a communique saying there were "no damage or casualties" in the British raids on northern Italy. The Berlin radio said there were "some civilian casualties but no damage to military objectives or war industries" in the raid on western and northwestern Germany, and that five British planes were shot down.)

(A Vichy dispatch said an unidentified plane dropped three bombs in the suburbs of Cannes, French Mediterranean resort city west of Genoa, during the night. The plane first droped a flare to light its target—an airplane factory, Vichy reported.)

Every one of the raiders returned from northern Italy. It was the eighteenth raid on Turin, the last one having been on September 10, 1941. R. A. F. bombers had not visited Italy since September 28.

Quisling Assumes Church Direction

Bern, Switzerland, April 13 (AP).—The puppet premier, Vidkun Quisling, has taken over personal direction of churches in Norway after failing to force the rebellious clergy to resume the pulpits from which they resigned en masse a week ago, reports reaching here said today.

The head of the German-controlled government acted shortly after his ultimatum demanding the return of the 1100 resigned pastors expired. He created a council of the church headed by himself.

Germans Press Vichy for More Collaboration

By the Associated Press

Bern, April 13.—The Germans turned on new pressure tonight to seek to promote greater collaboration between France and the Axis before a threatened British-American invasion of occupied Europe materializes.

German occupation authorities were reported to have ordered suspension of travel over the demarcation line, separating occupied from unoccupied France, a procedure usually reserved for periods of tense negotiations.

Pivot man on the pro-Axis team was again collaboration-minded Pierre Laval, former vice premier of the Vichy government who was reported to have conferred three times since Saturday with Marshal Petain.

German dispatches said Laval was renewing his attempts to get back into the French cabinet, possibly as foreign minister, after he had encountered stubborn refusal from Petain in his first try early in April.

The Germans, on the basis of Berlin dispatches, recruited French editors in Paris to promote the campaign for renewed collaboration with Germany. German Ambassador Otto Abetz was said to have held a long conference recently with Laval in Paris and was reported on a visit to Berlin today.

Most of the Axis-inspired propaganda was directed against the threat of British and American thrusts into German-occupied territory in western Europe although at least a part was concerned with Germany's desire for protection from the west before the Nazi spring offensive against Russia begins.

"The Reich government, especially the army command, would like to be assured of a protected rear before starting an offensive in the east," a neutral dispatch from Berlin said.

Report Implies Jap Gen. Homma Is Still Alive

New York, April 13 (AP).—The Tokyo radio broadcast today an announcement by Japanese imperial headquarters that Lieut. Gen. Masaharu Homma had been appointed commander in chief of Japanese expeditionary forces in the Philippines.

To the non-Axis world the news in this was the implication that Homma was still alive. It had been generally accepted that he had held the command in the Philippines at the start of the invasion and that he had committed hara-kiri in chagrin over his failure to crack Gen. Douglas MacArthur's Bataan line.

Yank, Aussie Fliers Damage 2 Big Jap Ships

By the United Press

Melbourne, April 13.—American and Australian fliers heavily raided Japanese airdromes at Lae, in northeastern New Guinea, today and added three more Japanese planes to a victory string that stands at 36 since Friday, war dispatches said tonight.

The raid on Lae was the second in three days. Other bombers, including United States Flying Fortresses, damaged two large Japanese ships and destroyed or crippled 33 enemy planes in weekend raids along the 2400-mile invasion arc fringing northern Australia.

Although details of the Lae attack were not available, a dispatch from Port Moresby, New Guinea, said it was "successful and heavy" and that both bomber and fighter planes joined in it. The attack was made during the morning with Japanese airdromes and planes on the ground taking another pasting.

In dogfights over the target area, two Japanese Zero fighters probably were shot down and a third was damaged, with all Allied planes returning safely to their bases, dispatches said.

An official communique described a successful attack on an enemy ship at Rabaul Sunday which resulted in speculation that a highly important enemy naval unit was put out of action.

Reconnaissance planes sighted the enemy ship at Rabaul, main Japanese base on New Britain Island, and a large force of Allied bombers were sent out, the communique said.

Despite "the most vigorous anti-aircraft fire from the ship itself and other ships in the harbor and from the shore," a direct hit was scored on the enemy vessel by a heavy bomb which crashed near its stern, and two near misses threw debris and water in the air, it said.

Japanese planes which attempted to interfere were driven off, and one of them was seen emitting smoke, but its destruction could not be confirmed. All Allied planes returned safely to their bases.

It was believed that when complete details are received, more Japanese planes might be added to the following bag since Friday: Rabaul, 16 planes damaged or destroyed in four raids; Lae, 15 destroyed or damaged in two raids; Port Moresby, five shot down or damaged during a Japanese raid.

Axis Probe Questions Hoffman Who Charges 'Smear' in House

town papers. Both publications referred to the "Roosevelt is a Judas" speech and to the use of 30,000 of Hoffman's franks by Viereck's Nazi propaganda organization.

Subtitled "A Judas"

Hoffman gave his speech the subtitle, "A Judas," and in the course of it he said:

"Ever since the President had his conference with Churchill on the high seas, we have been hearing from editorial writers, radio commentators and New Deal spokesmen of the United Nations. Now comes a member of the President's Cabinet, Ickes; a member of the Supreme Court, Roberts; both of whom have sworn to uphold the Constitution, and add their indorsement to the Judas - like betrayal of our people . . ."

Hoffman did not read this paragraph, as he did others about other persons, when he was telling the House yesterday that his address did not contain "any reference to the President as a Judas."

"I did not do any such thing," Hoffman emphasized when Representative Clifton A. Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, commented, "I think it may probably be assumed you meant to class them with Judas."

"If the gentleman did not call him a Judas," Woodrum snapped, "that is about the only thing the gentleman has not called the President."

It was Woodrum who broke into Hoffman's diatribe and brought up the strange company in which The Post found some of the 145,000 reprints Hoffman ordered from the Government Printing Office.

"What we would like to know," said Woodrum, "is how the gentleman's speeches got into that circular."

Woodrum Insists

"When the gentleman," Hoffman answered, "suggests that there is a disloyal thought in my mind, he is just drawing on his imagination." He went on to discourse about "Administration waste" and fan dancers, boondogglers, bowlers and horseshoe pitchers.

"None of my speeches has even been circulated by any subversive group," Woodrum remarked after awhile. Then he repeated, "How did the gentleman's speeches get into that circular?"

"That is easily answered," said Hoffman. "You may as well ask, how does any one get a copy of the Bible when he goes to a hotel?" He continued at some length, until Woodrum broke in:

"How did this association get quantities of the gentleman's speech?"

"The Files Are Open"

After some further rambling, Hoffman said a woman came to his office and addressed a number of franked speeches to a list of friends. He went on:

"Others that were sent out were all sent out at the request of the people who were contributing to or paid the cost of them. Undoubtedly the district attorney here, if he wants, or anyone else who wants to know who paid for them, can come over to my office and get that information. The files are open. The letters are open that they whote asking for them . . . undoubtedly from patriotic Americans."

Some of the people who got hundreds or thousands of copies of Hoffman's reprints were waiting to greet him, when he got to the chambers of the special grand jury on Axis agents about 3 p. m.

They included Charles B. Hudson, who mailed out the speech with the seditious card, who was sentenced to jail for three months last week for refusing to tell who printed the card. Apparently Hudson told when he was questioned again, because Special Prosecutor John T. M. Redden said Hudson would probably be released this morning.

They included David Baxter, the Californian who is being hailed as the "man of the hour" and the Nation's new leadership, by the little Jew-baiting papers which slander the President, predict successes for Hitler, blame America for the Pearl Harbor attack, and echo Hudson's slogan, "End the War Quickly." Baxter's works are mailed out in the same wrapper as Hoffman's speech and the "buy arms" bulletin issued by the secret leaders of the Social Republic Society, who say they will grab control of an imminent revolution in this country.

They included Mrs. David Stanley, who presided at a meeting two weeks ago where pamphlets were distributed blaming the President for the Pearl Harbor attack and calling him a "traitor."

Sedition Suspect There

They included Hermann D. Kissenger, the Kansas City lawyer who contributed to the bund paper and was arrested for sedition 10 days after Pearl Harbor.

They included Gerald B. Winrod, the anti-Jewish, Hitler-heiling editor of the Wichita, Kans., magazine, The Defender—whose defeatist policies are of a piece with those of the others.

Besides these "undoubtedly patriotic Americans," who have been called by the grand jury to give evidence in the Department of Justice effort to track down the source of suspected enemy propaganda, Hoffman has sent his speech to others.

How many of these people there are, and who they are, and what they paid, if anything, for the "Roosevelt Is a Judas" speech, is something that Hoffman alone can tell, and that he did not tell the House yesterday.

McCormack Questions Him

Hoffman did tell the House that Prosecutor Maloney had said he would defeat every isolationist in the House. Majority Leader McCormack promptly challenged this, asking who told Hoffman. But the man from Michigan would not tell. Not the House, he said, and not the Judiciary Committee.

It was after half a dozen vain questions by the majority leader that Fish got up to help his colleague.

During his remarks, Hoffman passed out samples of his "Roosevelt is a Judas" speech, pointing out that it bore the formal title, "Don't Haul Down the Stars and Stripes." He did not pass out samples of the seditious card or the "buy arms" bulletin with which the speech has been sent through the mails.

Later in the afternoon, Hoffman was warmly greeted by the other witnesses assembled at Judiciary Square. With his entrance, the men and women waiting to be questioned perked up and for the next few minutes merry laughter could be heard through the locked doors. This happy merriment continued, even after Hudson was taken into the room in handcuffs.

Others who testified before the grand jury yesterday were Dillard Stokes, of The Post; Mrs. Stanley, Winrod and Hoffman's secretary, Miss Helen Boyer.

Although he would not tell the press any more than the House, anything about his distribution of the speech, Hoffman did have one comment to make at Judiciary Square. Pausing before the correspondent of Tass, the official Soviet agency, the Congressman said: "Good looking mustache."

Safety Stress For Blackout

main buildings and quarters light-proofed. Recently an air-raid siren was installed atop one of the buildings there.

Senior air-raid wardens of office and bank buildings will meet this afternoon at 1 p. m. in the United States Chamber of Commerce to receive last-minute instructions for the air-raid test.

It also has been announced that all activities in the public schools not having to do with the blackout will be canceled tonight. Among groups affected by this order is the regular meeting of the Stamp Collector's Club who planned to meet in the Thomson School.

The James E. Strates Shows, a carnival now playing in Anacostia Park, will be closed to avoid confusion that might result from the attendants trying to reach their homes during the test, said F. F. Gillen, acting superintendent of National Capital Parks.

The Pan American Day concert scheduled for the Pan American Union Building will not be canceled, but all blackout regulations will be complied with. These regulations will actually enhance the occasion, Union officials say, since "soft glow of dimmed lights and mellow music of Latin America will intensify the beauty of the stately Hall of the Americas."

Agencies Plan Raid Drills

Government agencies, regarding the occasion as an air raid practice as well as a blackout, will hold drills in those departments where work is going on at the time the alert is sounded. Workers will go to the air raid shelters in each building, while the lights are extinguished or the windows otherwise blacked out in the Federal Triangle and upper Constitution Avenue section. The Navy Yard will have a token blackout of five minutes.

According to their usual custom during blackouts, the District Commissioners will tour the darkened streets, in company with Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, chairman of the Senate District Committee; Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of Virginia, chairman of the House District Committee; James M. Landis, executive director of the Office of Civilian Defense, and Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, District provost marshal. The tour will include a visit to the Communications Control Center in McMillan Park.

Volunteers to Be on Duty

Some 75,000 protective service volunteers will be on duty in Washington and the adjacent counties. Besides performing their regular patrol and station duties, some of them will be given sealed orders of hypothetical situations, such as might occur during a real raid. These orders will be carried out and reported on after the blackout.

Total Price Ceiling Works, Gore Says

Gore, who unsuccessfully offered the Baruch plan of across-the-board ceilings as an amendment to the price control bill in the House, said he plans no immediate legislative move.

"I want to see what the Administration proposes to do, and I hope it will prove adequate," he said.

In the Senate there was increasing demand for swift imposition of over-all controls in some form. Last week, Senators Pepper of Florida, O'Mahoney of Wyoming and Hill of Alabama (Democrats) called for comprehensive action. Yesterday Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, said that "not only ought this anti-inflation program be submitted to Congress with all speed but the powers already granted should be exercised immediately."

Clark said he believed that if Congress had followed the Baruch plan, "billions of dollars" might have been saved, and drastic legislation would have been avoided.

Representative Steagall (Democrat), of Alabama, chairman of the House Banking Committee which framed the original price bill, said he believed the Office of Price Administration has power to put a general ceiling on prices and probably the only additional legislation neeeded is to bar inflationary wage increases.

The President disclosed to his press conference last week that he was drafting a general anti-inflation program. Stephen T. Early, White House secretary, told reporters yesterday that much spade work has been done. White House engagements were being kept at a minimum to permit time for intensive study.

While no decisions had been reached, the program was expected to be "all out," generally freezing prices, halting wage rises, extending priority curtailment in the consumers' field and probably increasing tax goals.

Clark Would Antedate Ceiling to Beat Chiselers

Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, cited for the Senate yesterday a recent encounter with rising prices in a Washington store in a speech calling for legislative action.

The Senator said that a few days before Mrs. Clark had looked at cotton quilts and was told the price was $4.50. When Mrs. Clark examined the quilts again—this time with her husband—the price, said Clark, had been marked up 50 per cent.

The Senator said he observed that the price of another article Mrs. Clark intended to buy also had been raised. Inquiry, he stated, disclosed that clerks all over the store were engaged in marking up prices.

Speaking of a pending new program for inflation-control, Clark said that this practice of marking up prices was being "described in all quarters" as an "effort to beat the (price) ceiling."

He argued that any legislation placing a ceiling on all prices should be antedated to "beat the chiselers."

measure, due up in the Senate next Monday. The Connally bill freezes labor relations only in plants taken over because of management or labor stoppage of production, but amendments will be offered to make the freezing rule general. Admiral Land indorsed the Connally bill when it was originally proposed.

The chairman of the Maritime Commission, who will be followed before the Naval Committee today by Secretary of the Navy Knox, said he thought some form of freezing of existing labor-management agreements offered "the simplest, the easiest and the quickest solution that will be just to labor, to capital and to the people of the United States."

He said it would "do away with what I call this daily agitation . . . whether it be by labor or capital and get out of the mind of the worker everything but his job."

Favors Voluntary Policy

Land said the question of wage adjustments, in relation to rising living costs, should be left to a board, "the smaller the better."

He said there was a definite need for a national labor policy, achieved voluntarily if possible, but "failing that, by statute."

He withheld his views on suspension of the 40-hour week, but said it "is purely an economic question and it is up to Congress."

Questioned on his testimony that "loafing" occurs in every shipyard, Land said he did not believe it is organized loafing, that it occurred in management as well as labor. He said that only with the right attitude on both sides can the 13 per cent production increase be met.

"We are up against a long, hard war and the sooner we realize it the better," he testified. "If we can't lick ourselves we haven't much chance to lick Hitler and the Japs."

Land said the Maritime Commission has been promised sufficient steel by the War Production Board to meet the 8-million-ton ship goal this year and next year's 15-million-ton objective.

U. S. Saves $250,000,000

Edmund Toland, special investigator for the committee, testified that since the Vinson group began its investigation of profits on war contracts, the Government has renegotiated contracts downward for a total saving of 250 million dollars or 100 million dollars on Army contracts and 150 million dollars on Navy contracts.

He said the committee was commended in letters from War and Navy Department chiefs for its exposures of high bonuses and salaries paid by Jack & Heintz, Inc., of Cleveland. The company has since cut salaries and discontinued bonuses, he said.

The profits section of the new Smith-Vinson bill requires payment to the Secretary of the Treasury of all net profits in a given profits period in excess of $8000 plus 8 per cent on all war contracts aggregating over $100,000. These payments would be covered into the Treasury. Contractors would have to state under oath at the call of the Secretary the aggregate contract costs within a given profit period. The Secretary could disallow any item of cost he deems "unreasonable or not properly chargeable to such contract."

The bill's policy preamble declares it inconsistent with the expeditious and successful prosecution of the war and prejudicial to the armed forces for any war contractor to derive excess profits or for any labor organizations to indulge in labor practices banned by the bill.

U. S. Rejects Vichy Protest on Consul

tablishment of the consulate general at Brazzaville, which brought Vichy's protest.

But, he pointed out, Vichy "is not in control of that territory" and he said this country will continue to recognize those actually in control "until the final victory of the United Nations is won, and the people of France are once more in full and sovereign control of their own destinies."

Earlier in the day Acting Secretary Welles issued a warning to Bulgaria, Rumania and Hungary that further assistance to Germany against Russia will bring a formal declaration of war against them from this country.

Nazi Peace Feeler Rebuffed

He likewise served notice to the world that America is supremely uninterested in the "peace balloon" which Germany purportedly is sending up through representatives in Stockholm.

In view of this country's announced policy, Welles said, the United States is not interested in Stockholm reports that a private representative of Hitler is seeking to make contact with British representatives in Sweden to talk over nebulous peace suggestions.

The American warning to the three central European satellites of the Nazis, represented a new move to ease pressure on Russia prior to Hitler's anticipated spring offensive. Welles emphasized that use of Bulgar-Rumanian-Hungarian man power by the Nazis against the Soviet Union, would be the especial factor which would provoke a declaration of war from this country.

U. S. Bomber Group Scores in 15 Raids

War Sidelights

Rickenbacker Sees 300,000 Fliers Needed

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Mitchel Field, Long Island, April 13.—The United States must have at least 300,000 pilots to win the war, Col. Eddie Rickenbacker, World War ace, said here today, addressing Army Air Corps newly fledged pilots.

Col. Rickenbacker, who just completed a tour of air bases, said the war will last five to ten years. He predicted that air power would dominate every victory and asserted that the sooner high school boys were taugh military science, particularly aviation ground work, the better would be the Nation's chances to win.

Contrasting the rattletrap equipment and sketchy training he and his comrades got in the last war, Col Rickenbacker said:

"I had 35 hours in the air when I first went into combat. After six months' fighting over the lines I still had only about 375 hours altogether. You fellows are veterans, with 350 to 500 hours already. You'll be going into battle the finest trained fliers in the world.

"And you'll have the best equipment. The records in the Philippines, in Malaya, in Java, in Burma, show that, ship for ship, the planes you will fly are better than anything you'll meet—with one exception. The German Messerschmitt 109-F is a high altitude ship that's the best there is over 35,000 feet, but when you get 'em below that you'll have the best of it.

"You have a lot of heavy machine guns and maybe a cannon thrown in where we had two .30-caliber guns that usually jammed. You have armor plate and parachutes that we never had. You have the best ammunition, the best of everything. I envy you your opportunity to go out and defend your country."

Texan's Outfit Sunk Or Damaged 20 Ships, Destroyed 40 Planes

By Lee Van Atta

International News Service Staff Writer

Melbourne, April 13.—Maj. Richard Carmichael, of Austin, Tex., revealed today how a single group of American bombers under his command sank or damaged 20 Japanese ships, including 5 heavy cruisers, and destroyed some 40 enemy planes in 15 raids north of Australia.

In addition, his bomber crews wrought terrific damage to Japanese airports and military installations in 40 days of hard-hitting action over New Guinea and New Britan islands.

Maj. Carmichael has just arrived at Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters to take over the post of United Nations director of bombardment after his most successful spell of duty as commander of the American bombing group smashing at the enemy bases above this Commonwealth.

Carmichael's group was the one which arrived in Honolulu during the December 7 attack that opened the war in the Pacific. It was immediately made ready to dash to the west and reinforce Lieut. Gen. George H. Brett's United Nations air forces.

Aussies Will Fly Anything

The biggest raid carried out by this formation was an attack on the Japanese-seized ports of Salamaua and Lae on the northeast New Guinea coast. The assault was made with the support of Australian Air Force units and United Nations naval detachments. Seven Japanese ships and 15 enemy bombers were blasted in this raid.

Carmichael said that the work of the "Aussies," flying anything flyable just for the opportunity to hit the Japs, showed "magnificent courage."

The first major raid staged by Carmichael's group was aimed at Rabaul, on the north coast of New Britain, and netted what the officer called "good results" against airdromes and shipping, as well as dock installations.

It was during this attack, Carmichael related, that Capt. Raymond Swenson of Minnesota and Capt. Harry Brandon of Little Rock, Ark., shot down two jap Zero fighters apiece. The major described this action as "one of the worst bomber versus pursuit plane fights ever seen."

40-Minute Chase

The Zeros chased the bombers flown by Carmichael, Swenson and Brandon for 40 minutes, Swenson and Brandon being obliged to protect Carmichael's plane. Two of Carmichael's four engines were shot out by the torrid fire of the enemy fighters.

"They kept coming at us, wave after wave," the major recounted. "Their guns wrecked engines of both Swenson's and Brandon's ships, as well as two of mine.

"Three members of Swenson's crew and two of Brandon's were wounded. But each of them managed to shoot down two Zeros before our bombers' superior firing range forced the enemy to go off."

Carmichael is a tall, handsome Texan, generally credited with having been in direct charge of the first air offensive against the Japanese after the enemy's victories in the Philippines and Netherlands East Indies.

Cruisers "Caught Off Guard"

Carmichael emphasized the blasting of Japanese ships as particularly important in view of Japan's long sea communications, requiring considerable tonnage and much naval strength to maintain. Among the 20 enemy vessels either sunk or crippled by his bombers, he said the five heavy Japanese cruisers were "caught off guard" in the areas of Rabaul and Koepang, capital of Dutch Timor.

He spoke words of the highest praise for the heroic men of his group.

The gunnery work of Staff Sergt. Karl Johanssen was described by Carmichael as "among the most brilliant of the war to date." Johanssen alone has bagged a total of more than ten Japanese pursuit planes.

Carmichael, a West Pointer of the class of 1936, was accompanied by his deputy group commander, Maj. James Twaddle, of Philadelphia.

Much of the responsibility for the future successes or failures of American bombardment missions in the South Pacific area is due to rest on the shoulders of these two men.

Rothrock Gets Flying Cross For Record Hop to Scotland

ROTHROCK

Major James H. Rothrock, resident of Washington on and off for 15 years, last week received the Distinguished Flying Cross at Mitchel Field, shortly after being promoted to major in the Army Air Corps, it was announced by the War Department.

He and other Army men were cited for excellent service and bravery under adverse conditions while making record time in a special flight from Bolling Field to Prestwick, Scotland, early last July.

Born in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Major Rothrock was graduated from the New Mexico Military Institute, sometime later going to West Point, although he was not graduated. Later he entered the Air Corps Flying School at Kelly Field, Texas, and received his wings as a second lieutenant in the Army Air Corps Reserve in 1931.

After finishing the course at the flying school he was assigned to active duty with the Army Air Corps in Panama for two years.

Early in 1934, Rothrock with two other lieutenants crashed into the sea off Rockaway Point, Long Island, while flying mail for the Army. After floating about in the icy sea for hours they were rescued by the Navy destroyer Bernadou. One of the men had died.

Less than two months later Rothrock left the United States with 25 other American pilots for Colombia, where he remained for two years as an instructor in the Colombia air force.

Returning from Colombia, Rothrock left the Army and worked as a photographer with International News Photos and Harris and Ewing in Washington.

After resuming Army flight duty in 1940, he was stationed at Langley Field and was commissioned a captain. That same year Rothrock made good-will flights to Brazil and Argentina with other Army men.

In 1941 he was stationed for a while in Bangor, Me., before joining the Army ferry command. For about four months last year he was engaged in ferrying bombers to England. He is now stationed at Bangor, Me.

Besides his mother, of 3809 S Street Northwest, Maj. Rothrock has two brothers residing in Washington and one in New York. His wife, the former Alice Cook, is the daughter of Col. George Cook, medical officer at Fort Sheridan, Ill. They have a 5-year-old son.

Smith, Huey Long Henchman, Enters the Defeatist Lists

(Editor's note—Scores of verminous little sheets, each with a few thousand readers, are gnawing away at the faith and unity of our people, whispering defeat and clamoring about "freedom of the press." Their common policy—"made in Germany"—is to turn Americans against one another, and to split America from the United Nations. This is the seventh article of a series about these papers.)

By Dillard Stokes

Post Staff Writer

An erstwhile henchman of Huey Long is Gerald L. K. Smith, who went into the rabble rousing business on his own account a few years ago and now boasts that he has three million followers.

Smith calls himself more modestly, however, "national chairman of the committee of one million." But even as the Social Republic Society has a hidden leadership which will "never be known to the American people," Smith is forming, his letters say, an "inner circle" which will be a "wheel within the wheel" of the committee.

Two weeks ago, Smith sent spinning out to both wheels a new magazine, called The Cross and The Flag.

In an article headed, "Who Started the War?" Smith called Winston Churchill "the most successful warlord in modern history."

For Secretary of State, The Cross and The Flag proposed Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, whose franks were used by the propaganda organization of the German agent, George Sylvester Viereck, who is now in jail.

"We don't like the idea," says Smith, "of the President playing politics with a wartime Cabinet."

Like the rest of the vermin press, The Cross and The Flag professes lip loyalty to the cause of winning the war and feverish devotion to the principle of the free press.

In this magazine Smith demands that the fleet be brought home to fight a defensive war, leaving the seas clear to the submarines of Germany and Japan.

To "charter subscribers" of The Cross and The Flag, Smith has sent a 30-page booklet with an American flag on the cover and the title, The Hoop of Steel.

Both this screed and The Cross and The Flag are carried by the United States mails.

U. S. Must See Monetary Perils, Professor Warns

"Money connot win this war; but money can lose it," Dr. Edward Campion Acheson, associate professor of finance at George Washington University, declared at the monthly dinner meeting of the Eastern Shore League at the Cairo Hotel. He spoke on, "Is Victory for Sale?"

"Any one who thinks he can have his cake and victory, too, is living in a fool's paradise," he said, emphasizing the fact that income and sales taxes to prevent inflation must be imposed exactly insofar as the American people will not lend their purchasing power to the Government through the purchase of bonds.

"Victory is not for sale," Dr. Acheson concluded, "but we will be selling ourselves forever if we do not speedily recognize the seriousness of the monetary situation and act before inflation can disrupt our production organization."

Yank Weds in Ulster

Belfast, April 13 (U.P.)—Private Herbert Cooke finally was married today in the first wedding between an American doughboy and an Irish colleen since the Yanks began arriving in Northern Ireland earlier this year.

The bride was Thelma Smith, daughter of a Belfast cafe proprietor.

The wedding originally was scheduled for Saturday, but was postponed because, according to Cooke, he had not received permission from his superior officers.

Immediately after the ceremony, the couple left on an 18-hour honeymoon. Cooke is due back in camp tomorrow. He would not say whether he received permission to wed today.

Text of U. S. Reply to Vichy On Dealings With De Gaulle

The text of the note given the French Ambassador, Gaston Henry-Haye, by Sumner Welles, Acting Secretary of State, regarding recognition of those in control of French territories, follows:

Excellency:

I have received your excellency's communication of April 9, 1942, containing certain observations of the French government at Vichy with regard to the announcement of the establishment of a consulate general of the United States at Brazzaville.

In this connection your excellency informs me that your government trusts that the Government of the United States will make it known publicly that this step on the part of the United States should not be interpreted as having any political implications, and that it should likewise not be interpreted as being a step in derogation of the "exclusive rights of the French government over the territory in question."

The considerations advanced in the communication addressed to me by your excellency provide an appropriate and welcome opportunity for the Government of the United States to reiterate with the utmost clarity its policy with regard to France and with regard to the French people.

Many Ties in History

From the earliest days of the independence of the United States of America the relations between the people of France and the people of the United States have been founded upon ties of more than ordinary friendship and confidence. The government of France, and many citizens of France, assisted the people of the United States in achieving their freedom. The great principles of liberty, equality and fraternity proclaimed by the French revolution have been an inspiration to the American people throughout their national existence, and the traditional understanding between our two nations has in no small part been due to their common faith in democratic institutions and in their like devotion to the cause of human freedom.

Only 25 years ago the armies of France and of the United States were fighting side by side against the same ruthless aggressor who has now once more invaded France.

As this Government has informed your excellency's government upon several occasions, the Government of the United States recognizes the sovereign jurisdiction of the people of France over the territory of France and over French possessions overseas.

The Government of the United States fervently hopes that it may see the reestablishment of the independence of France and of the integrity of French territory.

But only by the total destruction of the present criminal regime in Germany, and by the complete defeat of the armies of Germany and of the dictatorships which have aligned themselves with Germany, can that hope be realized. That is a fact well known to all of the people of France, including even that handful of Frenchmen who, in contempt for the high tradition of liberty and individual freedom which has made France great, have sordidly and abjectly, under the guise of "collaboration," attempted to prostitute their country to that very regime in Germany which is bent upon nothing less than the permanent enslavement of France.

Armistice Shackles Recognized

At the present moment continental Europe is in great part occupied by German armies. Your excellency's government is bound by the terms of the armistice agreement into which it entered with Germany in June, 1940.

Marshal Petain has had occasion to appreciate the full understanding of the Government of the United States of the difficulties under which he and his government have been suffering because of these reasons, and the sympathy of the Government and the people of the United States for the people of France in the tragic situation in which they have been placed.

A part of France's territories overseas remains under the effective jurisdiction of your excellency's government. Still other territories of France are under the effective control of French authorities who do not recognize the jurisdiction of the French government at Vichy, but who are fighting actively on the side of the forces of freedom.

This latter situation is the case in French Equatorial Africa and the the Cameroons where the Government of the United States has recently appointed a Consul General at Brazzaville. This is the step to which your excellency's communication under acknowledgement refers.

Were the French government at Vichy in effective control of the territory in question, the Government of the United States would necessarily have communicated with your excellency's government prior to the establishment of this consulate general of the United States, in accordance with the convention between our two countries of February 23, 1843, to which reference is made in your excellency's communication.

The French government at Vichy, however, is not in control of that territory.

U. S. Guided Accordingly

Consequently, until the final victory of the United Nations is won, and the people of France are once more in full and sovereign control of their own destinies, the Government of the United States, in accordance with the policy above set forth, will continue, with regard to French territories in Africa or in the Pacific areas, to maintain, or to enter into, relations with those French citizens who are in actual control of such territories.

The German invaders by deceit, and by their habitual propaganda of falsehood, are daily seeking to sow doubt and mistrust of their traditional and proven friends among the French people That effort has failed, and will continue to fail. The people of France have never doubted the sincerity of the people of the United States

The French people may rest assured that the Government and people of the United States will continue to maintain unimpaired their full respect for the sovereign rights of the people of France. They many continue to be confident that by the victory of the United Nations those rights will be restored intact to them.

Accept, Excellency, the renewed assurances of my highest consideration.

SUMNER WELLES,
Acting Secretary of State.

Ersatz Bus Designed to Aid Transportation

Harris & Ewing

MAY BE SOLUTION TO WAR WORKERS' PROBLEM—As one answer to the problem of transporting hundreds of thousands of war workers from central points in cities to outlying industrial plants, representatives of the Office of Defense Transportation, with the aid of officials of WPB and a number of private companies, have designed and built in less than 30 days a simplified type of oversized bus-trailer made of noncritical materials. The trailer (top) has a seating capacity three times that of a regular city bus and twice that of streetcars. Guy A. Richardson, director of the division of local transportation, ODT; Frank B. Eastman, director of ODT, and Frank H. Shepard, special assistant to Eastman (left to right, lower), inspected the bus-trailer yesterday on The Mall. Seats stretch the width of the van, except for one aisle

Senators Lose Extra Clerk

The Senate decided yesterday that it cannot afford to give all of its 96 members extra clerks, and reversed the action of its appropriation committee providing for 112 additional employes who would have been distributed on the basis of State populations.

The 27 million dollar legislative supply bill, carrying almost half a million dollars for additional clerk hire was turned back to the appropriations committee on motion of Senator Willard F. Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, chairman of the subcommittee which had approved the increase.

Senator Tydings explained that "several items" in the measure should be reconsidered and obtained unanimous consent to recall the bill from the calendar.

House opposition to more clerks for every Senator was believed responsible for Tydings' move.

However, Senators from "the six or seven largest States" will receive some extra clerical help because of the volume of mail they receive, it was learned.

2 Isolationists Face Primary Test Today

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 13.—The first large test of public interest in politics in war time will be offered to the Nation tomorrow when nominees for the United States Senate and other offices will be selected in the Illinois primary election.

The first State-wide primary of 1942 features contests for the Senatorial nominations, with Senator C. Wayland Brooks pitted against State Treasurer Warren Wright on the Republican side and Congressman Raymond S. McKeough running against Paul H. Douglas in the Democratic race.

Brooks Former Isolationist

Politicians will watch the results to gauge the comparative strength of the two parties and to ascertain whether citizens preoccupied by the war and busy in war production will go to the polls in normal numbers.

In the main Republican ring, Senator Brooks, a prewar isolationist, had the backing of State Chairman Ben Berve and John T. Dempsey, head of the party's Cook County committee. Like other aspirants, he pledged full support of America's war effort. His opponent, Wright, indorsed President Roosevelt's foreign policies in a speech four days before Pearl Harbor.

The Chicago Democratic organization, captained by Mayor Edward J. Kelly and County Chairman P. A. Nash, faced two major challenges. One came from Douglas, professor of economics at the University of Chicago, who attacked the "Kelly-Nash machine" throughout his campaign. His chief rival, McKeough, was supported by the Kelly-Nash forces. Both Douglas and McKeough are Roosevelt adherents.

The other widely watched test is in the contest for the Democratic nomination for State treasurer. It puts W. D. "Don" Forsyth, who carries the Kelly-Nash indorsement, against Edward J. Barrett, former State treasurer and State auditor, an independent entry.

Representative Day In Contest

One of the briskest bouts in Republican ranks is for the nomination for Congress-at-large. It involves Stephen A. Day, incumbent and erstwhile isolationist; Denison B. Hull, former chairman of the Chicago chapter of the Fight for Freedom Committee; Charles R. Vincent, a Chicago businessman, and Dr. Bert Roan, of Bushnell.

Candidates will be nominated for United States Senator, Congress-at-large, State treasurer, and superintendent of public instruction on a Statewide basis, for Congress in 25 districts and for the Legislature and various county offices.

Danzanskys Divorced

Special Dispatch to The Post

Reno, Nev., April 13.—A divorce was granted here today to Mrs. Cordia Virginia Lane Danzansky from Sigmund Danzansky, of Washington. The grounds were cruelty. The Danzanskys were married May 25, 1940.

La Follette, Clark Enter Radio

Senators La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, and Clark (Democrat), of Idaho, are listed as directors of a company headed by a former radio director of the Democratic National Committee, that has applied for a license to operate a radio station in Republican Kansas, but parties concerned last night agreed:

1. That the move has no political significance.

2. That there isn't a chance, because of priorities, that the station will be built during the war.

The Jayhawker Broadcasting Co. applied to the Federal Communications Commission in February for a license to operate a 1000-watt transmitter at Tecumsh, Kans., near Topeka, where the only radio station is owned by Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas.

Herbert L. Pettey, who served the national committee as radio director before appointment as secretary of the then Federal Radio Commission in March, 1933, and who now is general manager of Station WHN, New York, is listed as president of the company.

William Dolph, vice president of Station WOL in Washington, is listed as vice president on the application. Dolph is a brother-in-law of Pettey. Mrs. Helen S. Mark, widow of LeRoy Mark, late head of WOL, is carried as treasurer.

Both Senators La Follette and Clark said they purchased stock in the company simply because they thought it would be a good investment. They denied there was any connection between organization of the company—to compete with Senator Capper's station—and the 124,000 majority Kansas gave Wendell Willkie in the Presidential election.

Herbert Bingham, company attorney, said the directors and officers were all "good friends" and were equal stockholders. He added that there wasn't a "Chinaman's chance" that the application would be approved by the Federal Communications Commission during the war.

Tax Credit For War Reserve Proposed

Accountants' Expert Also Favors Income Levy at the Source

By the Associated Press

Walter A. Cooper, New York, chairman of the committee on Federal taxation of the American Institute of Accountants, yesterday urged before the House Ways and Means Committee that taxpayers be permitted to make deduction for the establishment of special reserves to cover costs and business losses resulting from the war.

Cooper also recommended that all income taxes be withheld at the sources.

Arthur H. Kent, San Francisco attorney, told the committee that since it was difficult to determine foreign war losses, Congress should permit companies to consider them as ordinary losses and should authorize a seven-year period for filing refund claims.

Kent also suggested that recovery of a loss should not constitute income if no deduction had been taken in a prior year.

Other Proposals Protested

Protests against proposed levies came from other witnesses.

Harold Bozell, president of the General Telephone Corporation, New York, said added taxes proposed on telephone tolls would require an army of typists to maintain records.

Harold S. Lansing, representing the National Vending Machine Association, testified a proposed $50 yearly tax on the devices was "confiscatory."

A group headed by Hal G. Sours, director of highways in Ohio, protested that the Treasury's proposals to increase both the gasoline and lubricating taxes would result in a serious hardship to States which rely on such taxes to finance highway department operations.

Joseph E. Keller of Washington, representing a group of petroleum associations, expressed opposition to the Treasury proposal to raise the lubricating oil tax from 4½ cents a gallon to 10 cents. He said that the tax rests chiefly on war uses and therefore any increase in the levy "would greatly increase the cost of the war program."

Opposes Tax on Candy

Keller appeared on behalf of the National Petroleum Association, the Pennsylvania Grade Crude Oil Association, the Western Petroleum Refiners Association and the American Petroleum Industry's committee.

H. R. Chapman, of the New England Confectionary Co., Cambridge, Mass., opposed the Treasury's proposal for a 15 per cent manufacturers' excise tax on candy. He said it would constitute a "discrimination against candy manufacturers, an important segment of the food industry," and against "the consumers of candy as a food."

Francis E. Kelly, a former lieutenant governor of Massachusetts, proposed that the Government conduct a national lottery to raise three billion dollars to five billion dollars in revenue yearly.

War Game Kills 14

London, April 13 (AP).—Fourteen officers and men, including a brigadier, were killed, and 40 to 50 others were wounded today in an accident involving a dive-bombing during maneuvers in southern England.

Details were not supplied. Live ammunition has been introduced into recent maneuvers to give a tuch of realism and accustom participants to actual war conditions, informed sources said, expressing the view that some casualties were in evitable because of the scoe of the exercises.

G. E.-Krupp Tie-up Disclosure Expected

Connection Involved Patents on Steel-Cutting Materials, Senate Committee Attaches Say

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

The first of a series of disclosures covering operations of giant cartel agreements—alliances of United States and Axis industries which Senator LaFollette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, yesterday charged with impairing, if not hamstringing, American war preparations—is due to be made in the Senate Patents Committee today.

The first chapter of the story of the General Electric Co. and the Krupp manufacturing interests in Germany, producers of munitions for Hitler's armies, is scheduled to be told the committee by John Lewin of the antitrust division of the Justice Department.

Committee attaches yesterday said the General Electric-Krupp connection involved patents on steel-cutting materials which they described as one of the bottlenecks in manufacture of machine tools in this country.

Key to Victory

In opening hearings yesterday on a bill to authorize the President to issue licenses to manufacture, during the war, materials whose production is controlled by patents, the committee received statements from Senators LaFollette, O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, and Bone, of Washington (Democrats), who are joint sponsors of the measure.

President Roosevelt, in a letter to Bone, the committee chairman, declared freeing war production from patent restrictions to be "vital."

"Patents are the keys to our technology; technology is the key to production; production is the key to victory," Mr. Roosevelt said.

He urged the committee to devise a "wise patent policy to guide us toward that victory for democracy which we all so devoutly wish." The President said he would follow the hearings "with a great deal of interest."

"I believe the hearings on this bill will show that the efforts of our own and other anti-Axis countries to prepare for war were impaired if not hamstrung by giant cartel agreements which crossed national boundaries and thwarted announced governmental policies," La Follette stated.

"These hearings will show how willingly and frequently some groups in our country have allied themselves with Nazi corporate empires; how little they have been guided by the democratic ideals and traditions of America; how readily they have resorted to an authoritarian 'business' type of sovereignty."

Standard Oil Victory

La Follette declared the recent Justice Department consent decree against the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey to be a "real victory" for the company, that while freeing 2000 patents it failed to free "patents applied for" which extend processes covered by original patents.

The Standard Oil Co. denied as untrue La Follette's charges that the concern "effectively prevented" any "substantial" development of synthetic rubber production in this country and that the consent decree merely guarantees that Standard will hold patents for its German cartel partner, I. G. Farbenindustrie, with "immunity against interference granted by the decree" until it can "render an accounting to I. G. Farben, and return the patents."

Standard's statement, however, declared that the company could see "no objections" to approval of the bill.

Attorney General Francis Biddle, whose assistant Attorney General, Francis Shea, will be another witness today, declared in a letter to Bone that United States patents "have been utilized by our enemies as a means of restricting the manufacture of commodities vital to our security."

"Direct Economic Attack"

Biddle, who urged that the bill be given "favorable consideration," declared patent obstructions to have been "a direct economic attack against us by our enemies."

Cartel arrangements, charged Bone, have made "vital" secrets available to actual and potential foes of America. He suggested a sacrifice of property and property rights "somewhat comparable to that of the men who serve in our fighting forces."

"We seem to imagine that though men are sent to the front, materials, money and machines can somehow be manipulated by those who control them, or own them, for their own profit," O'Mahoney declared.

Debt May Hit 200 Billions, Schram Says

By the Associated Press

Nashville, Tenn., April 13.—The national debt may eventually reach Two hundred billion dollars, but "the American system * * * is quite equal to any burden which it may have to carry," Emil Schram, president of the New York Stock Exchange, said here tonight.

In an address preparted for delivery to the board of governors of the national asociation of stock exchange firms, Schram declared that "on the basis of presen estimates, the debt will have risen to about 110 billion dollars by Junt 30, 1943.

"It is entirely possible that, should the war last that long, we will have an aggregate debt of approximately 150 billion dollars by the middle of 1944. It may eventually run to 200 billion dollars, or even higher, depending upon the speed and energy with which we can turn our maximum powers upon the enemy.

"Whatever the cost of victory may be, the American people are prepared to pay it. * * * War is never cheap—but it is a million times cheaper to win than to lose.'

Schram said he was "equally confident that this system (the American system), permitted to function freely, will be found entirely adequate in the post-war crisis . . . we will not have won the war if, in defeating the forces of aggression, we permit our free instittions to be wrecked or undermined."

Asserting "it is absurd to talk about our economy becoming less capitalistic" after the war, he added: "our postwar economy will require, as its basic prerequisite, enormous amounts of the savings of the people to capitalize future economic progress.

"I have never looked upon Government spending, whether for war or for peacetime needs, in any sense other than as 'economic blood letting.'"

Schram said the nation's war production "is surpassing what were regarded as extravagant estimates only a short time ago

Forms Ready For Gauging Sugar Rations

The sugar rationing program gathered further momentum yesterday with the release of forms on which more than one million sugar retailers and wholesalers will register at high schools throughout the country on April 28 and 29.

The forms, released by the Office of Price Administration, will be distributed at once, according to the Associated Press. They are expected to be available in every locality through local rationing boards, several days before the registration.

The aim of the retailers' and wholesalers' form is to assure equitable distribution of sugar by fixing an "allowable" inventory for each dealer. The "allowable" inventory is intended to be a reasonable working supply.

The allowable inventory will be determined, in the case of a retailer, on the basis of his gross sales of "all meats, groceries, fruits and vegetables and other items" in the week ending April 25, 1942, or on the weekly average of sugar delivered last November.

At the same time, housewives were kept in mind by the OPA with the issuance of a "question and answer" pamphlet designed to make the transition from unrationed to rationed sugar buying as easy as possible.

Typical questions and answers:

Q—Will each individual have to take his war ration book to the store to get sugar? A—No. Anyone may take your ration book, providing they are buying sugar for you or your family.

Q—Suppose I order sugar by telephone? A—Before the person making delivery can give you the sugar you must show him the war ration book and in his presence tear out enough stamps to cover the amount of sugar ordered. The person delivering the sugar will be given the stamps.

Q. What if I need more sugar than I get with my war ration book?

A. If it is absolutely necessary for you to have more sugar for home canning, illness or some other special reason, you must go to your local rationing board. It will decide whether you can have more sugar and how much.

Q. What do I do if my war Ration book is lost or stolen? A. Report the facts to the local ration board at once.

Q. Does these war ration stamps permit me to get sugar for nothing? A. No. the war ration book gives you the right to buy a certain amount of sugar. Rationing safeguards your share, but you do not have to buy sugar if you don't need it.

Supreme Court Tempers Reynolds Estate Tax Claim

The United States Supreme Court yesterday partially overruled the Government's contention that it was entitled to collect approximately ten million dollars in taxes on the estate left by 20-year-old Zachary Smith Reynolds, North Carolina tobacco heir, when he died in 1932.

Justice Black delivered the opinion, which held that Reynolds' personal interest in trust property aggregating approximately 20 million dollars did not justify its inclusion in his gross estate.

The litigation was returned to the Board of Tax Appeals for a determination as to whether 37½ per cent of a majority part of the estate, which went to his brother and sisters, should be taxed.

Still another decision held local governments legally may prohibit commercial advertising on city streets through use of hand bills.

In a unanimous decision, the court upheld the order of Lewis J. Valentine, New York police commissioner, prohibiting F. J. Chrestensen, of Florida, from soliciting visitors to inspect his submarine tied up in the Hudson River through use of hand bills which, on one side, protested against the city's refusal to grant him wharfage facilities.

Plans Mapped To Fight Lewis Dairy Drive

By the Associated Press

The drive of John L. Lewis to organize dairy farmers as a unit of his United Mine Workers Union (C.I.O.) prompted leaders of some of the nation's major farm organizations yesterday to plan a vigorous resistance.

They met informally yesterday afternoon in preparation for appearance Friday before a House Judiciary subcommittee to support legislation which spokesmen described as intended to end "racketeering" by labor unions.

Edward A. O. Neil, president of the American Farm Bureau, one of the farm organizations involved, described the Lewis dairy farmer drive as a "racket" and said he and other farm group leaders would appear before the committee to support legislation to provide for the prosecution of labor rackets.

"We are for organized labor, but we think Mr. Lewis stepped out of his field when he stepped into the farm field," O'Neil told newsmen.

Farm groups with representatives here to draft the line of attack besides the Farm Bureau Federation were the National Grange, the Cooperative Council and the National Milk Producers Association.

Kathryn Lewis, daughter of Lewis, and secretary-treasurer of District 50, the Chemical and Allied Division of the U. M. W. A., which is organizing the dairy farmers, declared the views of the farm leaders were "ridiculous."

She said the "best answer" was that more than 30,000 dairymen have joined since the drive was started "because we are their friend and because we can help them get what they are entitled to—a fair price for their milk."

O'Neil charged the U. M. W. A. had opposed higher prices for milk but Miss Lewis said her organization was not opposed to higher prices to farmers but to consumers.

Free Farmers Map Plans

New York, April 13 (AP).—The nine directors of the Free Farmers, Inc., a group of farm organizations from New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Vermont who are opposed to John L. Lewis' campaign to organize dairy farmers, met n a closed session today to combat the efforts of Lewis to bring farm markets under the domination of the C. I. O. United Mine Workers of America.

Police Accused Of Castor Oil Mistreatments

The Justice Department announced yesterday that a West Virginia Federal grand jury will be asked today to investigate charges that city officials and police officers of Richwood, W. Va., cornered five members of a religious sect, forced them to drink enormous does of castor oil and led them out of town bound by ropes.

Attorney General Francis Biddle announced that Raoul Berger, of the department's criminal division, had been appointed special assistant to the Attorney General to aid in presenting the case at Charleston, W. Va., today.

The offense, it is alleged, occurred more than a year ago in the office of the town's mayor and in the presence of the police chief and a deputy sheriff after the group had requested police protection. Following the castor oil treatment, it is charged, city officials tied members of the group—believed to be Jehovah's Witnesses—with a rope obtained from the police department, led them through the streets to the city limits and warned them not to return lest they be "met by buckshot."

In administering the castor oil, the citizens were "avowedly" following the pattern of Mussolini's thugs, the department said.

The department charged that members of the sect were given 8-ounce doses, and that the leader was given 16 ounces. One ounce or less is the usual medical dose, a physician told The Post, and 2 ounces is almost the maximum in extreme cases. Even this dose may be extremely dangerous under certain circumstances, he said.

High Court Upholds Sweeney Libel Suit

Congressman's Action Against Schenectady Paper Declared Valid Under New York Law

By William R. Spear
Associated Press Staff Writer

The Supreme Court upheld yesterday a lower court decision declaring that under New York State law a false accusation of racial intolerance against a public official is libelous "per se"—that is, without any necessity of proving specific damages.

The decision was rendered last July by the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals in New York in connection with a libel suit brought by Representative Sweeney (Democrat), of Ohio, against the Schenectady (N. Y.) Union Star because of a published statement that he opposed the appointment of a man to a judgeship because the man was a Jew.

(Neither the Circuit Court nor Supreme Court passed upon the truth or falsity of the published statement; their decision merely means that the suit is to be tried on the merits.)

The Supreme Court, with Justice Jackson not participating, split 4-4 on the case. This automatically upheld the lower court. No formal opinion was issued, and the reason for Jackson's withdrawal and the individual stands of the other eight justices were not made public.

Suit Is One of Many

The suit was one of a number filed by Sweeney against various newspapers which published a column by Drew Pearson and Robert S. Allen in 1938 which represented Sweeney and Father Charles E. Coughlin as opposing the appointment of Emerich Burt Freed as a Federal district judge in Cleveland because Freed was a Jew.

The Federal courts took jurisdiction because of "diversity of citizenship," Sweeney being a resident of Ohio and the newspaper a New York corporation, but the decision in this case dealt only with interpretation of the New York libel laws.

The Federal District Court threw out the case on the ground that no cause of action had been stated. The Circuit Court reversed this ruling on the ground that if false the publication was libelous per se, saying that it took for granted, for purposes of deciding the question, that the statement about Sweeney was false. The case now goes back to the District Court for trial, at which the truth or falsity of the statement presumably will be an issue.

Circuit Court's Decision

The Circuit Court, in a 2-to-1 decision by Judge Harrie Brigham Chase, said that the test of libel per se in New York "is whether right-thinking persons would be reasonably expected to be induced by the publication to believe that it truthfully represented the plaintiff's attitude on the subject of Freed's appointment and would be likely to regard him as a consequence in such a way that his reputation was injured." It was an established principle in New York, Chase wrote, "that, when made of a public official, false accusations which may well lead right-thinking people to believe him unworthy of public trust and confidence are libelous per se."

And the court declared that "decent, liberty-loving people are greatly offended" by racial intolerance and that "those who hate intolerance are prone to regard the person who believes in and practices acts of intolerance with aversion and contempt."

In view of Hitler's persecution of the Jews, the opinion added, "the publication of statements such as those alleged may well gain for the person falsely accused the scorn and contempt of the right-thinking in appreciable numbers."

Judge Charles E. Clark, dissenting, held that under New York law "the right of comment on a public official has been safeguarded in a practical way by 'a somewhat different rule' than in ordinary cases." For a statement about a public official to be libelous per se, he contended, "the charge must go to the extent of definite impropriety in office." He said that the statement about Sweeney "charges rather bigotry and prejudice than corruption or impropriety in office."

The New York State Publishers Association, in a brief filed with the Supreme Court, asserted that the Circuit Court's decision "will limit and shackle the force of the press as an instrument of public welfare" and that it "represents an unprecedented extension of liability for the publication of comment on public officers and public affairs contrary to the fundamental rights of the press." The American Civil Liberties Union took a similar position.

Briefs opposing the decision also were filed by the American Jewish Congress, the American Jewish Committee, the B'nai B'rith and the Jewish Labor Committee. They said that the decision made hazardous criticism by the press or by members of minority groups "charging public officials with bias against minorities."

Liquidation Tax Upheld

The court in another case held that a corporation organized to liquidate the assets of another corporation is subject to a Federal capital stock tax imposed on corporations "carrying on or doing business."

Justice Murphy delivered the unanimous opinion on a claim for refund of approximately $18,000 taxes paid from 1936 to 1939, inclusive, by the Washington, Baltimore and Annapolis Realty Corporation. The corporation was formed in 1935 to liquidate property of the Washington, Baltimore & Annapolis Electric Railway Company.

U. S. Sub Escapes 45 Depth Charges in Raid

By Clark Lee

Associated Press Staff Writer

Melbourne, April 13.—"What if there are three of them? They're flying the Japanese naval flag, aren't they?"

With those words a young American submarine commander recently ordered a direct attack on three enemy destroyers somewhere in the southwestern Pacific.

One destroyer usually is considered a handful for opposition by a submarine, but the American commander tackled three of them and brought his vessel safely to port somewhere in Australia.

The submarine was coming to the surface just at dusk to recharge its batteries and freshen its air when it sighted the enemy destroyer squadron a short distance away.

The submarine could have stopped short of the surface and been undetected, but the commander ordered full speed toward the target.

The submarine fired two torpedoes which barely missed one enemy destroyer and then crash dived. While the submarine still was diving the Japanese attacked, dropping 45 depth charges which shook the submarine again and again, threatening to cave in its sides.

During the next nine hours the destroyers circled, loosing explosive charges. One extinguished lights in the submarine and did some damage to machinery.

An officer aboard said there never was a sign of panic. The work of repairing the damage went on efficiently, interrupted time and again by explosions.

Finally the machinery was in working order and the submarine, after the longest dive in its record, came to the surface and found the enemy gone.

Whale of a Yarn From Uruguay

Montevideo, April 13 (U.P.).—The Uruguayan fishing industry today was puzzled as to what to do with a 50-foot whale which swam up the river Plate from the Atlantic and lay stranded on a sandbar off Colonia.

The whale, estimated at about 70 tons in weight, is worth about $500 dollars in oils and blubber, ichthyologists said, but Uruguayans are not whalers and they lacked equipment and experience necessary to carve up the sea monster.

Drive Starts For 7 Million To Help China

A report showing that $3,238,012 had been raised in 1941 was issued by the United China Relief yesterday as committees in 844 cities started a new national drive to raise seven million dollars for the increased aid to the Chinese people during China Week, which began Sunday.

The report, the first annual one, states that services rendered through the fund to China's war victims, wounded soldiers and civilians during 1941 covered five major fields—medical and public health work, child welfare, educational aid, economic reconstruction and relief of major disasters resulting from military operations.

Hasten Reconstruction

American contributions, according to the report, facilitated China's reconstruction by assistance to more than 2400 industrial cooperatives producing some 200 different commodities and employing more than 100,000 workers.

American funds also supported work relief projects employing more than 27,000 workers engaged in repairing dikes and roads and rebuilding destroyed towns and villages, and restored about 10,000 artisans, tradesmen and farmers on a self-supporting basis.

In Washington the new national drive drew unanimous indorsement of the District Commissioners who called attention to the fact that the funds raised are to be used to meet a need not now provided for under America's lend-lease program.

Meanwhile, an organization meeting to further the drive was scheduled for this noon at Carlton Hotel under the chairmanship of Dr. Wilson Compton, head of the District of Columbia United China Relief drive. Special guests will be Rear Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, and Mrs. Maurice T. Moore, of New York, writer and lecturer, who recently returned from the Orient.

Pan-America Celebrates Its Unity Today

Ambassadors and Ministers of 20 American republics will be received by President Roosevelt at the White House this noon in what will be the keynote to thousands of programs on the twelfth annual Pan American Day.

In a statement expressing the spirit of the occasion, Dr. L. S. Rowe, director general of the Pan American Union, declared, "It is gratifying and inspiring to find 21 nations of this continent moving forward with unity of purpose and policy.

"Cooperation, mutual helpfulness and solidarity of interest have become the watchwords of the Western Hemisphere."

After the Presidential reception, the Washington observance of Pan American Day will be rounded out with a concert beginning at 9:30 p. m. in the Hall of the Americas in the Pan American Union.

Guest artist will be Elsie Houston, Brazilian soprano, who is widely known for her folk music. Francisco Mignone, one of Brazil's outstanding composers and pianists, will accompany the soloist when she sings his selections.

Also on the program will be the United States Marine Band Orchestra. The concert will be broadcast over a national network and sent by short-wave to Latin America.

April 14 was selected by resolution to commemorate the first International Conference of American States, meeting in Washington April 14, 1890. The conference led to the creation of the body known as the Pan American Union, official international organization of the twenty-one American republics.

G. E.-Krupp Tie-up Disclosure Expected

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

The first of a series of disclosures covering operations of giant cartel agreements—alliances of United States and Axis industries which Senator LaFollette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, yesterday charged with impairing, if not hamstringing, American war preparations—is due to be made in the Senate Patents Committee today.

The first chapter of the story of the General Electric Co. and the Krupp manufacturing interests in Germany, producers of munitions for Hitler's armies, is scheduled to be told the committee by John Lewin of the antitrust division of the Justice Department.

Committee attaches yesterday said the General Electric-Krupp connection involved patents on steel-cutting materials which they described as one of the bottlenecks in manufacture of machine tools in this country.

Key to Victory

In opening hearings yesterday on a bill to authorize the President to issue licenses to manufacture, during the war, materials whose production is controlled by patents, the committee received statements from Senators LaFollette, O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, and Bone, of Washington (Democrats), who are joint sponsors of the measure.

President Roosevelt, in a letter to Bone, the committee chairman, declared freeing war production from patent restrictions to be "vital."

"Patents are the keys to our technology; technology is the key to production; production is the key to victory," Mr. Roosevelt said.

He urged the committee to devise a "wise patent policy to guide us toward that victory for democracy which we all so devoutly wish." The President said he would follow the hearings "with a great deal of interest."

"I believe the hearings on this bill will show that the efforts of our own and other anti-Axis countries to prepare for war were impaired if not hamstrung by giant cartel agreements which crossed national boundaries and thwarted announced governmental policies," La Follette stated.

"These hearings will show how willingly and frequently some groups in our country have allied themselves with Nazi corporate empires; how little they have been guided by the democratic ideals and traditions of America; how readily they have resorted to an authoritarian 'business' type of sovereignty."

Standard Oil Victory

La Follette declared the recent Justice Department consent decree against the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey to be a "real victory" for the company, that while freeing 2000 patents it failed to free "patents applied for" which extend processes covered by original patents.

The Standard Oil Co. denied as untrue La Follette's charges that the concern "effectively prevented" any "substantial" development of synthetic rubber production in this country and that the consent decree merely guarantees that Standard will hold patents for its German cartel partner, I. G. Farbenindustrie, with "immunity against interference granted by the decree" until it can "render an accounting to I. G. Farben, and return the patents."

Standard's statement, however, declared that the company could see "no objections" to approval of the bill.

Attorney General Francis Biddle, whose assistant Attorney General, Francis Shea, will be another witness today, declared in a letter to Bone that United States patents "have been utilized by our enemies as a means of restricting the manufacture of commodities vital to our security."

"Direct Economic Attack"

Biddle, who urged that the bill be given "favorable consideration," declared patent obstructions to have been "a direct economic attack against us by our enemies."

Cartel arrangements, charged Bone, have made "vital" secrets available to actual and potential foes of America. He suggested a sacrifice of property and property rights "somewhat comparable to that of the men who serve in our fighting forces."

"We seem to imagine that though men are sent to the front, materials, money and machines can somehow be manipulated by those who control them, or own them, for their own profit," O'Mahoney declared.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

DAMAGE MAY REACH TWO MILLION DOLLARS—Here is the smoldering wreckage left in the wake of yesterday's disastrous fire which destroyed or damaged scores of buildings in the business district of Kewanee, Ill., a town of 17,000 inhabitants. Police Chief George Nelson said that the loss might reach two million dollars, including smoke and water damage. Good news with the bad: there were no known dead and only two firemen were hurt

Debt May Hit 200 Billions, Schram Says

By the Associated Press

Nashville, Tenn., April 13.—The national debt may eventually reach Two hundred billion dollars, but "the American system * * * is quite equal to any burden which it may have to carry," Emil Schram, president of the New York Stock Exchange, said here tonight.

In an address preparted for delivery to the board of governors of the national association of stock exchange firms, Schram declared that "on the basis of presen estimates, the debt will have risen to about 110 billion dollars by Junt 30, 1943.

"It is entirely possible that, should the war last that long, we will have an aggregate debt of approximately 150 billion dollars by the middle of 1944. It may eventually run to 200 billion dollars, or even higher, depending upon the speed and energy with which we can turn our maximum powers upon the enemy.

"Whatever the cost of victory may be, the American people are prepared to pay it. * * * War is never cheap—but it is a million times cheaper to win than to lose.'

Schram said he was "equally confident that this system (the American system), permitted to function freely, will be found entirely adequate in the post-war crisis . . . we will not have won the war if, in defeating the forces of aggression, we permit our free institutions to be wrecked or undermined."

Asserting "it is absurd to talk about our economy becoming less capitalistic" after the war, he added: "our postwar economy will require, as its basic prerequisite, enormous amounts of the savings of the people to capitalize future economic progress.

"I have never looked upon Government spending, whether for war or for peacetime needs, in any sense other than as 'economic blood letting.'"

Schram said the nation's war production "is surpassing what were regarded as extravagant estimates only a short time ago

Forms Ready For Gauging Sugar Rations

The sugar rationing program gathered further momentum yesterday with the release of forms on which more than one million sugar retailers and wholesalers will register at high schools throughout the country on April 28 and 29.

The forms, released by the Office of Price Administration, will be distributed at once, according to the Associated Press. They are expected to be available in every locality through local rationing boards, several days before the registration.

The aim of the retailers' and wholesalers' form is to assure equitable distribution of sugar by fixing an "allowable" inventory for each dealer. The "allowable" inventory is intended to be a reasonable working supply.

The allowable inventory will be determined, in the case of a retailer, on the basis of his gross sales of "all meats, groceries, fruits and vegetables and other items" in the week ending April 25, 1942, or on the weekly average of sugar delivered last November.

At the same time, housewives were kept in mind by the OPA with the issuance of a "question and answer" pamphlet designed to make the transition from unrationed to rationed sugar buying as easy as possible.

Typical questions and answers:

Q—Will each individual have to take his war ration book to the store to get sugar? A—No. Anyone may take your ration book, providing they are buying sugar for you or your family.

Q—Suppose I order sugar by telephone? A—Before the person making delivery can give you the sugar you must show him the war ration book and in his presence tear out enough stamps to cover the amount of sugar ordered. The person delivering the sugar will be given the stamps.

Q. What if I need more sugar than I get with my war ration book?

A. If it is absolutely necessary for you to have more sugar for home canning, illness or some other special reason, you must go to your local rationing board. It will decide whether you can have more sugar and how much.

Q. What do I do if my war Ration book is lost or stolen? A. Report the facts to the local ration board at once.

Q. Does these war ration stamps permit me to get sugar for nothing? A. No. the war ration book gives you the right to buy a certain amount of sugar. Rationing safeguards your share, but you do not have to buy sugar if you don't need it.

Supreme Court Tempers Reynolds Estate Tax Claim

The United States Supreme Court yesterday partially overruled the Government's contention that it was entitled to collect approximately ten million dollars in taxes on the estate left by 20-year-old Zachary Smith Reynolds, North Carolina tobacco heir, when he died in 1932.

Justice Black delivered the opinion, which held that Reynolds' personal interest in trust property aggregating approximately 20 million dollars did not justify its inclusion in his gross estate.

The litigation was returned to the Board of Tax Appeals for a determination as to whether 37½ per cent of a majority part of the estate, which went to his brother and sisters, should be taxed.

Still another decision held local governments legally may prohibit commercial advertising on city streets through use of hand bills.

In a unanimous decision, the court upheld the order of Lewis J. Valentine, New York police commissioner, prohibiting F. J. Chrestensen, of Florida, from soliciting visitors to inspect his submarine tied up in the Hudson River through use of hand bills which, on one side, protested against the city's refusal to grant him wharfage facilities.

Plans Mapped To Fight Lewis Dairy Drive

By the Associated Press

The drive of John L. Lewis to organize dairy farmers as a unit of his United Mine Workers Union (C.I.O.) prompted leaders of some of the nation's major farm organizations yesterday to plan a vigorous resistance.

They met informally yesterday afternoon in preparation for appearance Friday before a House Judiciary subcommittee to support legislation which spokesmen described as intended to end "racketeering" by labor unions.

Edward A. O. Neil, president of the American Farm Bureau, one of the farm organizations involved, described the Lewis dairy farmer drive as a "racket" and said he and other farm group leaders would appear before the committee to support legislation to provide for the prosecution of labor rackets.

"We are for organized labor, but we think Mr. Lewis stepped out of his field when he stepped into the farm field," O'Neil told newsmen.

Farm groups with representatives here to draft the line of attack besides the Farm Bureau Federation were the National Grange, the Cooperative Council and the National Milk Producers Association.

Kathryn Lewis, daughter of Lewis, and secretary-treasurer of District 50, the Chemical and Allied Division of the U. M. W. A., which is organizing the dairy farmers, declared the views of the farm leaders were "ridiculous."

She said the "best answer" was that more than 30,000 dairymen have joined since the drive was started "because we are their friend and because we can help them get what they are entitled to—a fair price for their milk."

O'Neil charged the U. M. W. A. had opposed higher prices for milk but Miss Lewis said her organization was not opposed to higher prices to farmers but to consumers.

Free Farmers Map Plans

New York, April 13 (AP).—The nine directors of the Free Farmers, Inc., a group of farm organizations from New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Vermont who are opposed to John L. Lewis' campaign to organize dairy farmers, met n a closed session today to combat the efforts of Lewis to bring farm members under the domination of the C. I. O. United Mine Workers of America.

Police Accused Of Castor Oil Mistreatments

The Justice Department announced yesterday that a West Virginia Federal grand jury will be asked today to investigate charges that city officials and police officers of Richwood, W. Va., cornered five members of a religious sect, forced them to drink enormous does of castor oil and led them out of town bound by ropes.

Attorney General Francis Biddle announced that Raoul Berger, of the department's criminal division, had been appointed special assistant to the Attorney General to aid in presenting the case at Charleston, W. Va., today.

The offense, it is alleged, occurred more than a year ago in the office of the town's mayor and in the presence of the police chief and a deputy sheriff after the group had requested police protection. Following the castor oil treatment, it is charged, city officials tied members of the group—believed to be Jehovah's Witnesses—with a rope obtained from the police department, led them through the streets to the city limits and warned them not to return lest they be "met by buckshot."

In administering the castor oil, the citizens were "avowedly" following the pattern of Mussolini's thugs, the department said.

The department charged that members of the sect were given 8-ounce doses, and that the leader was given 16 ounces. One ounce or less is the usual medical dose, a physician told The Post, and 2 ounces is almost the maximum in extreme cases. Even this dose may be extremely dangerous under certain circumstances, he said.

High Court Upholds Sweeney Libel Suit

Congressman's Action Against Schenectady Paper Declared Valid Under New York Law

Associated Press Staff Writer

The Supreme Court upheld yesterday a lower court decision declaring that under New York State law a false accusation of racial intolerance against a public official is libelous "per se"—that is, without any necessity of proving specific damages.

The decision was rendered last July by the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals in New York in connection with a libel suit brought by Representative Sweeney (Democrat), of Ohio, against the Schenectady (N. Y.) Union Star because of a published statement that he opposed the appointment of a man to a judgeship because the man was a Jew.

(Neither the Circuit Court nor Supreme Court passed upon the truth or falsity of the published statement; their decision merely means that the suit is to be tried on the merits.)

The Supreme Court, with Justice Jackson not participating, split 4-4 on the case. This automatically upheld the lower court. No formal opinion was issued, and the reason for Jackson's withdrawal and the individual stands of the other eight justices were not made public.

Suit Is One of Many

The suit was one of a number filed by Sweeney against various newspapers which published a column by Drew Pearson and Robert S. Allen in 1938 which represented Sweeney and Father Charles E. Coughlin as opposing the appointment of Emerich Burt Freed as a Federal district judge in Cleveland because Freed was a Jew.

The Federal courts took jurisdiction because of "diversity of citizenship," Sweeney being a resident of Ohio and the newspaper a New York corporation, but the decision in this case dealt only with interpretation of the New York libel laws.

The Federal District Court threw out the case on the ground that no cause of action had been stated. The Circuit Court reversed this ruling on the ground that if false the publication was libelous per se, saying that it took for granted, for purposes of deciding the question, that the statement about Sweeney was false. The case now goes back to the District Court for trial, at which the truth or falsity of the statement presumably will be an issue.

Circuit Court's Decision

The Circuit Court, in a 2-to-1 decision by Judge Harrie Brigham Chase, said that the test of libel per se in New York "is whether right-thinking persons would be reasonably expected to be induced by the publication to believe that it truthfully represented the plaintiff's attitude on the subject of Freed's appointment and would be likely to regard him as a consequence in such a way that his reputation was injured." It was an established principle in New York, Chase wrote, "that, when made of a public official, false accusations which may well lead right-thinking people to believe him unworthy of public trust and confidence are libelous per se."

And the court declared that "decent, liberty-loving people are greatly offended" by racial intolerance and that "those who hate intolerance are prone to regard the person who believes in and practices acts of intolerance with aversion and contempt."

In view of Hitler's persecution of the Jews, the opinion added, "the publication of statements such as those alleged may well gain for the person falsely accused the scorn and contempt of the right-thinking in appreciable numbers."

Judge Charles E. Clark, dissenting, held that under New York law "the right of comment on a public official has been safeguarded in a practical way by 'a somewhat different rule' than in ordinary cases." For a statement about a public official to be libelous per se, he contended, "the charge must go to the extent of definite impropriety in office." He said that the statement about Sweeney "charges rather bigotry and prejudice than corruption or impropriety in office."

The New York State Publishers Association, in a brief filed with the Supreme Court, asserted that the Circuit Court's decision "will limit and shackle the force of the press as an instrument of public welfare" and that it "represents an unprecedented extension of liability for the publication of comment on public officers and public affairs contrary to the fundamental rights of the press." The American Civil Liberties Union took a similar position.

Briefs opposing the decision also were filed by the American Jewish Congress, the American Jewish Committee, the B'nai B'rith and the Jewish Labor Committee. They said that the decision made hazardous criticism by the press or by members of minority groups "charging public officials with bias against minorities."

Liquidation Tax Upheld

The court in another case held that a corporation organized to liquidate the assets of another corporation is subject to a Federal capital stock tax imposed on corporations "carrying on or doing business."

Justice Murphy delivered the unanimous opinion on a claim for refund of approximately $18,000 taxes paid from 1936 to 1939, inclusive, by the Washington, Baltimore and Annapolis Realty Corporation. The corporation was formed in 1935 to liquidate property of the Washington, Baltimore & Annapolis Electric Railway Company.

U. S. Sub Escapes 45 Depth Charges in Raid

By Clark Lee

Associated Press Staff Writer

Melbourne, April 13.—"What if there are three of them? They're flying the Japanese naval flag, aren't they?"

With those words a young American submarine commander recently ordered a direct attack on three enemy destroyers somewhere in the southwestern Pacific.

One destroyer usually is considered a handful for opposition by a submarine, but the American commander tackled three of them and brought his vessel safely to port somewhere in Australia.

The submarine was coming to the surface just at dusk to recharge its batteries and freshen its air when it sighted the enemy destroyer squadron a short distance away.

The submarine could have stopped short of the surface and been undetected, but the commander ordered full speed toward the target.

The submarine fired two torpedoes which barely missed one enemy destroyer and then crash dived. While the submarine still was diving the Japanese attacked, dropping 45 depth charges which shook the submarine again and again, threatening to cave in its sides.

During the next nine hours the destroyers circled, loosing explosive charges. One extinguished lights in the submarine and did some damage to machinery.

An officer aboard said there never was a sign of panic. The work of repairing the damage went on efficiently, interrupted time and again by explosions.

Finally the machinery was in working order and the submarine, after the longest dive in its record, came to the surface and found the enemy gone.

Whale of a Yarn From Uruguay

Montevideo, April 13 (U.P.).—The Uruguayan fishing industry today was puzzled as to what to do with a 50-foot whale which swam up the river Plate from the Atlantic and lay stranded on a sandbar off Colonia.

The whale, estimated at about 70 tons in weight, is worth about $500 dollars in oils and blubber, ichthyologists said, but Uruguayans are not whalers and they lacked equipment and experience necessary to carve up the sea monster.

Drive Starts For 7 Million To Help China

A report showing that $3,238,012 had been raised in 1941 was issued by the United China Relief yesterday as committees in 844 cities started a new national drive to raise seven million dollars for the increased aid to the Chinese people during China Week, which began Sunday.

The report, the first annual one, states that services rendered through the fund to China's war victims, wounded soldiers and civilians during 1941 covered five major fields—medical and public health work, child welfare, educational aid, economic reconstruction and relief of major disasters resulting from military operations.

Hasten Reconstruction

American contributions, according to the report, facilitated China's reconstruction by assistance to more than 2400 industrial cooperatives producing some 200 different commodities and employing more than 100,000 workers.

American funds also supported work relief projects employing more than 27,000 workers engaged in repairing dikes and roads and rebuilding destroyed towns and villages, and restored about 10,000 artisans, tradesmen and farmers on a self-supporting basis.

In Washington the new national drive drew unanimous indorsement of the District Commissioners who called attention to the fact that the funds raised are to be used to meet a need not now provided for under America's lend-lease program.

Meanwhile, an organization meeting to further the drive was scheduled for this noon at Carlton Hotel under the chairmanship of Dr. Wilson Compton, head of the District of Columbia United China Relief drive. Special guests will be Rear Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, and Mrs. Maurice T. Moore, of New York, writer and lecturer, who recently returned from the Orient.

Pan-America Celebrates Its Unity Today

Ambassadors and Ministers of 20 American republics will be received by President Roosevelt at the White House this noon in what will be the keynote to thousands of programs on the twelfth annual Pan American Day.

In a statement expressing the spirit of the occasion, Dr. L. S. Rowe, director general of the Pan American Union, declared, "It is gratifying and inspiring to find 21 nations of this continent moving forward with unity of purpose and policy.

"Cooperation, mutual helpfulness and solidarity of interest have become the watchwords of the Western Hemisphere."

After the Presidential reception, the Washington observance of Pan American Day will be rounded out with a concert beginning at 9:30 p. m. in the Hall of the Americas in the Pan American Union.

Guest artist will be Elsie Houston, Brazilian soprano, who is widely known for her folk music. Francisco Mignone, one of Brazil's outstanding composers and pianists, will accompany the soloist when she sings his selections.

Also on the program will be the United States Marine Band Orchestra. The concert will be broadcast over a national network and sent by short-wave to Latin America.

April 14 was selected by resolution to commemorate the first International Conference of American States, meeting in Washington April 14, 1890. The conference led to the creation of the body known as the Pan American Union, official international organization of the twenty-one American republics.

Tonight's Blackout

Colonel Bolles took the right tack when, during final preparations for tonight's blackout, he emphasized the need for "deadly seriousness all along the line." Whether or not we realize it, a complete blackout like the one tonight between 9 p. m. and midnight is not to be compared in the same breath with the partial blackouts already experienced. This time all but a very few lights in exempted categories will be extinguished. This means that most street lights, which shone comfortingly during previous blackouts, will be out. Probably you won't even be able to see up and down your street—if you are at home during the blackout. This may not appear much of a loss. But it is a fact, as persons who have experienced complete blackouts elsewhere will testify, that the sudden switching off of customary public lighting in a thickly settled area has an extraordinarily eerie effect. If this were all, most of us would merely be in for a new emotional experience tonight.

But during the blackout—even though it is a practice one—public safety will be at stake as never before. To discourage criminal activity the police will have every available officer on duty. This is a necessary precaution. Equally necessary is community cooperation to prevent accidents. Persons who are obliged to be on the streets or who have been authorized to drive their cars during the blackout should in the common interest exercise superlative caution. For the grim truth is that fatalities and serious injuries are the invariable accompaniment of complete blackouts. In other words, tonight we shall try to find out how well prepared we are to screen our lights to carry on at home with minimum disruption of normal routine, and to cope with simulated "bomb blasts" and "fires." The blackout will be the first really serious test of our preparedness, and it calls for maximum cooperation on the part of every individual.

German Way

Willingness to learn from the enemy is the mark of the alert war administrator. For instance, the mobilization of man power is under serious discussion in Washington. What did they do in Germany? The answer appears in the current issue of the International Labor Review published by the International Labor Office in a timely article on the work of the German Employment Service which originally appeared in the Reichsarbeitsblatt.

If the writer of the article can be believed, much of the German success in this respect is due not to exercise of force, but to acquisition of very full information about the workers themselves. Following passage of the so-called work book act of 1935, the German employment offices began the issuance of work books to manual laborers and salaried employes. No fewer than 22 million books had been distributed by the fall of 1936. By the time the war broke out, virtually every employed person in the Reich had received a book indicating the nature of his occupation and activities. When war was declared the employment agencies had accumulated information enabling them to ascertain whether substitutes for workers called to military service could be found and ensuring the availability of additional workers for war industries.

Perhaps the Germans are not so much in love with their system of forced labor placements as we assume. For the article (obviously not intended for propaganda purposes) states that the Employment Service "has tried not to resort to requisitioning and the application of legal restrictions on change of employment except as a last resort." Last July, for instance, only 3 per cent of male workers and less than 2 per cent of female employes were working under requisitioning orders. In short, the German Employment Service stresses the indispensability of a comprehensive and up-to-date survey of the qualifications and occupational skills of the nation's labor force. A similar systematized knowledge of the labor force must be the chief dependence of every country seeking to achieve maximum output, though it may become necessary to apply some emergency pressure in time of war, if suggestions to labor fail to produce results.

Turning Tide

Ernest Bevin's weekend assurance was something that the free peoples of the United Nations as well as the silenced folk had been longing to hear. Britain's labor minister told a British audience that "the tide is on the turn." Then he went on to assert that "we shall soon be passing from the defense to the attack." Mr. Bevin does not say what he means by an attack—whether one which involves a lodgment on continental Europe or big-scale air and commando raids. Nor does he say when "soon" will be. These are questions which right now are in process of canvass in the Anglo-American war conferences in London. But the knowledge that the free world is on the eve of some kind of movement which will compete with the enemy initiative will be enough to cheer the "amateur strategists" on both sides of the ocean. Action on ground of United Nations' choosing is all that those amateur strategists, along with the fighting Russians, ever demanded.

For it is obvious to even the most inexpert mind that the next few months will be critical. Hitler is already on the move toward the oil of the Caucasus. Before long—if the signs point aright—he may elect at the same time to drive through Turkey en route to Iraq and Syria, in quest of other sources of oil and the Persian Gulf. Japan likewise seems to be by-passing Australia in an effort to join up with Hitler in the Persian Gulf. In her anxiety to effect a juncture she may elect to by-pass India as well as Australia; at any rate, the concentration on Ceylon looks that way. Such a juncture would at once solve the oil problems of the Axis and enable Hitler and the Japanese to interchange their resources and blend their strategy for the supreme effort to make world conquest a reality. That is the reason why our very survival may depend upon the early launching of an attack by the United Nations.

The conservatives insist that preparation on the Hitler model is an essential preliminary to the mounting of an offensive. To be sure, organization is Hitler's secret weapon. But our time is too short, and the enemy is too far advanced in his creeping merger, to permit of the thoroughness with which Nazi plans have hitherto been perfected. We have as yet neither the means nor the shipping for that purpose. In place of thoroughness there must be what the British Admiral Lord Fisher once called "considered rashness." Indeed, the more we study the Japanese campaign, the more we realize that the Japanese leaned on "considered rashness" rather than thoroughness. And their success has been so pronounced that by this time they have beaten even Hitler's record of victories. On the side of the United Nations, too, there has been an example of "considered rashness," namely, when after Dunkirk the British deprived themselves of tanks, and sent them to the Middle East. Similar risks must be undertaken again to ward off the imminent peril of the United Nations.

Our strategists in undertaking these risks should be backed by the maximum sacrifice of Britain and America. It is time we stripped our home defense for this more urgent business. Shipping, it will be said, is the bottleneck which prevents the flinging of more of our resources into the battle line. But have we conserved enough shipping? Is there not a whole lot of tonnage which is now being used on import business for civilian purposes that could be waived for six months? These are questions that the gravity of the world situation are raising. Those who insist upon an attack now must likewise be foremost in suggesting such sacrifice, and doubtless Mr. Bevin himself thinks of an attack "soon" only in terms of such a mobilization.

Economic Tie

Mutual interest has been and always will be the key to continental solidarity. For this reason the American people have reacted with satisfaction to the joint economic arrangements elaborated by Dr. Padilla and Mr. Welles, acting for Mexico and for this country. We are to help develop Mexico's industries which, in turn, will then be in a position to help speed this country's war effort. The vital principle of economic give-and-take could hardly be enunciated with greater clarity or conviction than in the joint statement of intention.

Yet it will not be the easiest thing in the world to work out the details of such an arrangement. For the diversion of strategic materials to Mexican use is involved, and these are scarce. Yet they will be needed for the specific projects provided for—the establishment of a steel and tin-plate rolling mill, for new rolling stock, for a high octane gasoline plant, and for the many tools and equipment necessary to facilitate Mexican production. To deal with the difficult problem of priorities and allocations Mexico will shortly set up a special office and organization here in Washington.

It should not be thought, however, that economic arrangements with Mexico will in any way impede the business of getting on with the war. Indeed, we are assured that "the paramount criterion will be the degree to which each specific project contributes to the war effort of the United States and the security of the hemisphere." This, of course, is essential. And it places a considerable burden of responsibility on the men who must decide about the disposition of war material to meet Mexican requirements.

Yet it is a fact that the material requirements of some of our other neighbors to the south are being met, in spite of production and shipping difficulties. So it is only reasonable to presuppose similar success in meeting Mexican needs. In any case, Dr. Padilla and Mr. Welles, both of whom possess a keen sense of the Americas' common destiny, have shown praiseworthy realism in their joint statement. It is the soundest sort of basis for closer collaboration between the two countries.

Rent-Boosting Tax

In the search for more revenue for this rapidly growing city it is reasonable and proper that the House Subcommittee on District Fiscal Affairs should explore all possible sources. If it does so, however, it probably will not recommend an increase in the local real estate tax. Regardless of the need for additional revenue, and regardless of what the House may think about the existing real estate tax rate, the present would be a most unfortunate time to change it.

An increase in the real estate tax this year would be roughly equivalent to a sales tax. In other words, it would be a tax on the living quarters of every family in the District. No doubt many real estate owners could absorb such a tax. Certainly that is the case with the bootleg operators who are reported to be making from 16 to 24 per cent profits out of renting slum properties that are not fit for human beings to live in. Actually, however, the present scarcity of dwellings would give real estate operators an excellent opportunity to raise rents to cover additional taxes if any change in the existing rate should be ordered.

More important is the danger of upsetting the present rent-control system. When Congress "froze" rents in Washington as of January 1, 1940, it made allowance for adjustments in cases of increased operating costs such as higher real estate rates would entail. But the task of adjusting all rents to a new tax structure would be a formidable burden for the rent-control administrator. To superimpose that job upon his present responsibility of ironing out inequities might easily produce a breakdown in the rent-control system. A general sales tax would be just as equitable as this proposed indirect tax on rents, and it would involve far less administrative difficulty.

What Congress ought to do, in any event, is to modify the District's lopsided income tax. As now interpreted by the courts, it applies to only those local residents who meet their obligations of citizenship here. Other residents obtaining equal benefits from the city, but claiming to be domiciled elsewhere and remaining aloof from the community life of Washington, need not pay the tax. In effect it has become a demoralizing levy on good citizenship. Regardless of what other sources of revenue are tapped, this atrocious discrimination against voteless residents of the Capital ought to be eliminated.

A LITTLE THING LIKE GRASS

How ill and fevered was the spring
October put to bed,
With solace for the ailing limbs
Of sumptuous gold and red.

How lean and shivering was the spring
That died one autumn night
And lay a weary winter through
In cerements of white.

I saw the scarlet sickness spread,
And, still ungrieved by it,
I watched the folded icy hands
Of one pale hypocrite.

Not April, nor the soul of man,
Is lost with bloom or breath,
And it is still a foolish thing
To pin your faith on death.

One day a little thing like grass
With living green will take
The barest sod, and crocuses
Correct your old mistake.

Typists Right Here

In Mr. Klutz' column of April 9, he calls attention to the fact that since the declaration of war 24,845 typists have been hired for Government service. Assuming that the civil service system of hiring is still in effect in this country, as we are fondly led to believe, that would mean that a person who was on the typist register since December 7, would have been hired immediately. Yet, although I passed a civil service examination for typist on September 14, 1941, I have not yet had any results from it beyond a bare announcement of my rating, which was 95.15 per cent.

There has been some talk lately about the discrimination in Government offices against women above 35 years of age, which might account for the difficulty I have experienced, but if at 37 years of age I can pass an examination with a rating much better than women almost 20 years my junior I believe I have a right to the same consideration in receiving an appointment. If the system means a thing, persons with the highest rating should be given first consideration, and it is hardly conceivable that 24,845 persons received ratings of 95.15 or higher. Just how are appointments made nowadays? Are people chosen at random, regardless of qualification, and if so, who makes the choice?

Before swelling the population of an already grossly overcrowded city, why not give appointments to people who are buying homes here and who have been Washingtonians for years? And unless the civil service system is to be branded an utter farce, how about giving appointments to those people who head the list, and who have every right to expect an appointment? If all women over 35 years of age are to be discarded in this war effort, we are going to be hard-pressed indeed. C. M. L.

Small Business

The tendency to go to extremes is evidenced in many directions. Too many men in officialdom seem to feel that "all out" war effort means that every one should be slapped on the Government pay roll, pronto, even though they merely mill around after they get there. Waste helps the enemy, whether it be waste of goods or waste of human effort.

While "business as usual" should yield whenever our war effort requires it, the wiping out of small businesses will give our next year's returns from income taxes an awful jolt, unless it is stopped.

Government officials seem to feel that if the rubber needs of the war machine and officialdom are met, civilian needs are of minor importance. This is not true. The thousand and one small industries whose activities yield the bulk of income taxes are absolutely dependent upon automobiles and trucks. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation will provide 700,000 tons of synthetic rubber this year for military needs. Why does it not spend double the money and produce double the amount of rubber so that civilian needs can be met. If that were done, the Government would still be well ahead, because the income taxes from saved small businesses would many times exceed the cost of additional plants. EFF GEE CEE.

Battleships

I was much interested to read a letter from King Whitney, jr., in your April 10 issue, which attempts to prove that the battleship is still supreme. Mr. Whitney admits that the battleship requires adequate air protection, which means that it is not an independent unit. He admits that its only utility is to attack other capital ships. His only illustration of its value is his statement that, if Britain had had battleships available in the Channel when the Scharnhorst and Gneisenau made their escape, the outcome might have been different. But Britain does not dare to keep battleships in the Channel for fear of German bombers.

Mr. Whitney concludes by stating that battleships do not have to fight to prove their worth, their potential might is their justification and "all they have to do is swing at anchor at their base." It might be mentioned that this was what the Italian battleships were doing at Taranto when they were sunk by British planes; also that the Arizona was swinging at its anchor when sunk at Pearl Harbor. Apparently these arguments of Mr. Whitney are the type used in Navy circles to justify our huge battleship building program.

From the history of this war it appears obvious that the aircraft carrier is by far the most important fleet unit. This is clearly indicated by the fact that the carrier has invariably been the first unit to be attacked by both sides in this war. There is nothing which can be done by the battleship which cannot be done equally as well and at a much greater distance by aeroplanes based on a carrier. The battleship is useless against land based planes as well as against shore batteries. But carrier based planes can successfully attack shore batteries as well as land based planes if they have numerical superiority.

An aircraft carrier supplies its own air protection and requires corvettes only as auxiliaries, while the battleship dare not venture from its land-based fighter plane protection unless accompanied by an aircraft carrier. The Germans learned this fact in the sinking of the Bismarck and are therefore keeping the Von Tirpitz safe in harbor. Battleships represent a huge investment of time, materials and labor, while small 40-plane carriers of the type used by Japan can be constructed probably in one-fourth the time and at one-third the cost. A fleet of these carriers could destroy a fleet of battleships while keeping a safe distance away from the battleships' useless 16-inch guns. Who then can say that the battleship is the backbone of the fleet?

If Japan builds aircraft carriers and we continue to build battleships, we may lose this war. Japan thinks so little of battleships that she has practically no use of hers. Apparently she agrees with Mr. Whitney that the battleship should be kept safe in harbor. Battleships are not even suitable to serve in convoy duty. What good are they in a war? HENRY C. PARKER.

Browder Case

This morning's issue of The Washington Post contains a letter in which your correspondent, Ruth McKenney, urges the immediate release of Mr. Earl Browder from prison. In the course of her letter she makes the statement that the Supreme Court, in affirming Mr. Browder's conviction stated that Mr. Browder's crime did not involve moral turpitude. Since Mr. Browder was convicted of using a passport obtained by a false representation, under oath, your correspondent's statement startled me. Accordingly, I have just reread the opinion of the Supreme Court and also the opinion of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, both of which courts unanimously affirmed Mr. Browder's conviction.

Your correspondent's statement is grossly inaccurate. There is nothing in the language of the Supreme Court opinion or in the language of the opinion of the Circuit Court of Appeals to suggest that either court considered Mr. Browder's crime to be one which did not involve moral turpitude. Neither court discussed the morality of Mr. Browder's acts but if either one had taken occasion to do so, it is perfectly clear that they would have judged such acts immoral as well as illegal.

Under the Passport Act it is illegal to obtain a passport by means of false statements or wilfully and knowingly to use a passport which has been obtained by means of false statements.

The record shows that Mr. Browder committed not less than six violations of the Passport Act. Each of four passports issued to him was obtained by the use of false statements and the making of such false statements was in each case a crime. The two uses to which he put the last passport he obtained were likewise crimes. To say that there is no moral turpitude involved in making false sworn statements in order to obtain passports or in using such passports when obtained, is to deny the sanctity of an oath and the meaning of morality.

Mr. Browder was convicted of committing two separate crimes and was sentenced to imprisonment for two years for each of his crimes, or a total of four years, and to pay a fine of $1000 for each of his crimes, or a total of $2000.

Some idea of the seriousness with which Congress views the crime of which Mr. Browder was convicted can be obtained from the fact that in March, 1940, it amended the section under which Mr. Browder was indicted and convicted by increasing the penalty to ten years imprisonment for each offense.

Naming the War

Many thought-given and high-sounding names are being proposed as the title for the present world conflict. Some are sincere; others are an attempt at being funny. But all such is futile. Our President has admitted that even he cannot think of a new, or sufficient, name. After all the proposals are in, the logical name remaining is The Second World War, because that is exactly what it is, as was ably presented by Mr. P. Smith in his letter in The Post on April 10. Wars between nations, or groups of nations, are of the past. They now are world involving. The First World War was a "war to end wars," but it didn't do it, nor will the present conflict.

Nothing is gained in kidding ourselves. The lion and the lamb will not lie down together. Human nature, whatever that is, per se will bring about future world wars. It is quite possible that many of the present younger generation will live to see the Third World War. Then again will be the unsolvable problem of giving it a fitting name, continuing ad infinitum.

The Post Impressionist

Generals Astride

How many Washington residents, if asked the question, could pass a test 100 per cent as to the number of silent generals there are represented on horseback in the city? What would you and you say? For the thrill of it let's settle any dispute by tracking them down. Suppose we start the adventure on a holiday and trust good weather will favor the outdoor exploit.

As a zero-mile post let's choose the George Washington equestrian statue at Twenty-third and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest. From this base let our steps move northward, stopping at Twenty-third and Massachusetts Avenue. Here may be found the realistic figure of Gen. Philip H. Sheridan, the great cavalry leader, on a lifelike horse "rarin' to go." The general is enacting his dramatic ride down the Shenandoah Valley on October 19, 1864. When meeting his retreating forces he exhorted them, "Turn, boys, turn, we're going back."

From here our itinerary leads eastward to Connecticut Avenue and Columbia Road. At this juncture the massive memorial to Gen. George B. McClellan, who distinguished himself at the Battle of Antietam, towers in height. Onward we move, reaching next at Sixteenth and Mount Pleasant Streets, the statue of Bishop Francis Asbury, attired as an itinerant preacher. He might be said to be a religious "general." During his missionary expeditions, it is reported, he covered on horseback nearly 6000 miles. This fact may account for the droop of the horse's head. This is the far northern terminal of our trip afoot and the onward course attracts us southward for a limited period.

The next sight to entice is the replica of Jeanne d'Arc, the French peasant girl who once earned a military rating because she led an army of men to victory. From this elevation, Meridian Park, the outlook is on downtown Washington. It is by far the most panoramic sight of the tour. Henderson's Castle, an old landmark, is prominent in the foreground. In the distance the Washington Monument appears veiled in a morning mist; also, may be seen numerous church spires and tops of modern apartment houses. We can't linger here, although the desire to rest may exist. Pressing our way down Sixteenth Street, at Rhode Island Avenue Gen. Winfield Scott takes a commanding position as if overlooking battlefields of other years. In military chronicles he was noted for "Scott's Anaconda," a derisive phrase used by the Northern press, during the Civil War, for his snakelike plan to coil around rebellious States and crush them.

From this location our steps move eastward to Logan Circle, located at Rhode Island Avenue and Thirteenth Street. Here Gen. John A. Logan is on imperial guard. It is a distinctive memorial for its all-bronze pedestal and pictorial history. We now move down Vermont Avenue. Where Massachusetts Avenue intersects we catch a glimpse of Gen. George H. Thomas. He might be said to be a pioneer of the hatless fraternity for he is without head covering. Turning southward, we meet Vermont Avenue, and at K Street are informally introduced to Gen. George B. McPherson, the "hero of Atlanta," in the Civil War. At the moment he may be in deep meditation or holding a reception to the neighborhood pigeons. A glance at a watch shows that two hours and a half have elapsed since starting, and our pedometer clocks the distance covered as 8 miles. By popular consent, it's time for lunch and the urge is accepted without argument.

Part two of our expeditionary feat points due east, and after a 20-minute walk our steps are halted at the base of the monument erected to Gen. Jose de San Martin, an outstanding leader of the South American revolution against Spain, located in Judiciary Square, Fifth and E Streets Northwest. The memorial is a "pledge of amity" from the Argentine Republic. At Fourth Street and Massachusetts Avenue Northeast, our farthest destination eastward, we face the equestrian statue of Gen. Nathanael Greene. He is noted as a general in the Revolutionary War and known as the man who saved the South. Next to Gen. Washington, biographers acclaim, he was counted as the greatest general of the Revolution. From here we face due west and step along Maryland Avenue to the Capitol plaza. In the area known as the Mall we gaze upon the massive monument to Gen. Ulysses S. Grant. This is considered the second largest equestrian statue in the world and is said to be exceeded only by that of Victor Emmanuel in Rome.

Movement now proceeds westward up Pennsylvania Avenue. From the statue array en route it might be christened "The Avenue of Equestrians." The first to stop our footsteps is that of Gen. Winfield Scott Hancock at Seventh Street and Pennsylvania Avenue. Gen. Casimir Pulaski, of Polish birth, is found at Thirteenth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue. According to annals, he rendered patriotic service to America in the Revolutionary War. At Fifteenth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue we look at the statue of Gen. William T. Sherman, who, in a justifiable moment of rage, declared, "war is hell." Following northward on Fifteenth Street and detouring a square, we turn into Lafayette Park, pausing before the statue of Gen. Andrew Jackson, the "patriarch" of the city equestrian statues. He seems balanced in glory as the horse he is riding prances for a wild dash somewhere. Records disclose that this was the first equestrian statue to be erected in the city, January 8, 1853, seven years prior to that of Gen. Washington. Thus the seventh President of the United States, Jackson, earned first honors in bronze memorials.

By watch time the complete circuit consumed four and a half hours and the distance covered approximated 14 miles. Not so bad for an adventure which had for its purpose the discovering of hidden equestrian statues about Washington. Besides the knowledge acquired the next best profit was the hours of exercise—not such a poor reward when current trends point to an early return of walking as a patriotic exercise.

Price Control—A Dissenting View

LIPPMANN

THE ONE clearest and most certain thing about price control and inflation is that these complex problems cannot be handled by Mr. Henderson's office alone, or by the Treasury alone. The problems arise inevitably in wartime because the supply of money which people have for spending is very much greater than the supply of goods and services which the people can buy with their money. It is necessary, therefore, to control both the supply of money and the supply of goods. If this is to be done successfully, there must exist some kind of economic general staff which is able to lay down policy in the whole field where agencies like the Treasury or Mr. Henderson's office operate. For while in theory the President has the power to formulate the general policy, in fact he cannot have the time and the knowledge to exercise this power personally, and he must therefore delegate it.

If the reports are correct that he is preparing to set up some such general staff, then we are on our way to getting a practical grip on this extremely elusive subject.

WHEN IT COMES to formulating the policy, the most widely accepted formula is that which is identified with Mr. Baruch. It calls for a general ceiling on the prices of all goods and service. There are, I realize, very few men now discussing the question who believe as I do that this formula obscures rather than clarifies the real issues. But there are some who do believe just that—who believe that the Baruch formula is at best a stop-gap device for the very short run—capable perhaps of holding prices temporarily until more effective measures can be thought out and applied—but that for the long run, because it is based on an economic fallacy, the formula will not work and has a strong tendency to divert attention from the necessary measures.

It is a fallacy, I submit, to teach the people to believe that if prices are forbidden to rise, inflation has been prevented. It is much more important to understand that frozen prices cannot prevent inflation; if there has been an inflation of the currency, if money is more plentiful than goods, frozen prices merely hide the inflation and dam it up until some later time when it cannot be dammed up any longer. For consider what has happened when a merchant has to sell his goods for less money than they would fetch in a free market: the merchant has had to accept dollars which are not so valuable as the goods he has sold. He has received depreciated money—which is the very essence of inflation—and the more depreciated money he has to accept, the more he will seek to get rid of the depreciated money and get hold of goods—which is the vicious spiral of inflation. It is, therefore, highly misleading to identify the control of prices with the control of inflation. It is just one more example of trying to control the temperature by controlling the thermometer.

THIS BASIC FALLACY leads to several bad practical effects. One is to make people think that in wartime a government can fix prices so that the consumer may expect to obtain the same goods for the same expenditure of effort. This is not possible in wartime. We have to make up our minds that even if the prices of goods are not allowed to rise, the amount of the goods we can buy must be reduced; that even if we stabilize prices, we cannot stabilize the standard of living. Under no circumstances must we let the illusion prevail that there is any kind of price control which will enable us to continue to consume as usual.

If, therefore, we keep prices from rising, which is on the whole but not in all cases probably desirable, then the amount of money which cannot be spent will accumulate increasingly. This accumulation of unspent and unspendable money is inflation itself—it is depreciating money which men will try not to keep and will turn into more valuable goods as fast as they can. So it is misleading to popularize the idea that price control prevents inflation. As such it in fact promotes inflation.

THE TRUE policy, I submit, must put its primary emphasis not on the control of prices, but on the control of supplies—the supply of money and the supply of goods and services. It is necessary to control the supply of money in order to keep money from depreciating; when there is too much of anything in relation to other things, that thing must fall in value. The supply of money can be controlled by taxes, by contracting credit, by voluntary and by compulsory saving.

It is necessary to control the supply of goods by rationing where the goods are necessities of life and where the supply is short and cannot be expanded. In other cases, however, control will best be exercised by allowing the prices to rise. This is where a rise in the price will discourage unnecessary consumption or where it will stimulate production.

No system of price control is a substitute for, or can be made effective without, the control of the supply of money and the control of the supply of goods and services. If reliance is placed upon ceilings, if attention is not concentrated upon taxes, credits, loans, rationing, and the deliberate manipulation of prices, the ceiling formula will be a snare and a delusion. If, on the other hand, the real measures of control are made effective, what Mr. Baruch is aiming at will be achieved. But it will be achieved not because prices have been stabilized but because the factors which make prices have been stabilized.

IT IS, of course, highly desirable and indeed imperative that money should not become too depreciated. But this can be done only by taking heroic measures to reduce the quantity of money through taxes and to reduce the circulation of money by saving and other devices to keep money out of circulation—for the duration not only of the war but to a considerable degree for the transition to peace. Even with the most heroic measures we must, however, recognize that money cannot be so valuable in an era where goods are scarce as in an era of abundance. For the whole world wants goods much more than it wants money, and nothing we can do about the price of goods will alter this condition.

We must recognize also, I submit, that while the rationing of necessities at moderate prices must be done as a measure of social justice and social order, it would be a mistake to assume that even in total war there is no usefulness left for the regulating effect of prices. The function of prices is to bring supply and demand into balance, and even in a total war there will be many commodities and services where free prices will serve us well. They will serve us well where, if prices rise, necessary consumption will diminish or potential production not necessary to the war will increase. This is a fairly large field, and price movements in this field ought not to frighten us. There could, for example, be no point in freezing the price of strawberries, which are produced locally for local consumption. If the price goes up, there will be more strawberries produced until the price of strawberries goes down again. This is the normal function of prices, and where the needs of the war do not intervene there is no reason to interfere with it.

5589 Gifts Sent To U. S. Since War

The Treasury disclosed yesterday that since the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor last December 7, it had received 5589 donations, aggregating $478,248.49, from Americans wishing to contribute directly to the war effort.

In a letter read in the Senate by Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, Undersecretary of the Treasury Daniel W. Bell said the donations included, besides money, rings, watches and even gold teeth fillings. Several persons, he added, had tendered their life savings.

Conscripting Labor

Tucson, Ariz.

THE WHOLE American people face a development in the national war effort which would abolish, temporarily, at least, one of our own great, traditional freedoms. Inevitably we shall have a form of conscription of labor, and this will mean that the Government will assign millions of men and women to jobs in factories and on farms, and that workers will have to go where they are sent, stay put and put in a day's work every working day. It is no sufficient objection to say that this is the way the Nazis do it. Granted that this is Hitler's way, it is the most efficient way to get the full benefit of the skill and energy of a nation's working people, and the enemy in this war, if victorious, would impose a worse system on us permanently. It goes without denying, also, that when this compulsion is adopted it will also apply to property. In fact, it has been applied to property directly or indirectly at many points already. The motor industry, for example, would have been commandeered if the management had not voluntarily abandoned automobile production to convert its great plant to war work.

PEGLER

We are a very independent people, as individuals, accustomed to travel at will and to jump the job for a better one or just to go fishing. We have not realized how important to us this freedom and independence have been because nobody ever threatened to curtail or revoke it, and the curtailment or revocation will not be accepted gracefully. The proposal will be bitterly debated, not only in Congress, but all over the land, but I am one of those who believe it must be adopted as a sacrifice and a measure of insurance against the horrors of such slavery as Hitler has imposed on the people of conquered Poland and conquered France. Slavery is a word that has been idly misused to describe the conditions of free workers in company towns, office help and even baseball players, and so has lost some of the terror which is in the true meaning of the word. Under Hitler slavery is literally slavery, and the man is unquestionably a monster who would have no such nonsense as an honorable and forgiving peace and a healing of wounds if he should win. The man who shrieked about Aryan racial purity and wept in humiliation and rage against the employment of African colored soldiers in the temporary occupation of a portion of conquered Germany did not hesitate to unleash the Japanese against the American people, who include, of course, many patriotic Aryans, as he would call them, who came here from Germany or were born here of German immigrants. Nothing is beyond him, and actual slavery is the condition to which he consigns all peoples whom he conquers. Not merely our Jews, whom he holds to be subhuman and with no rights which a human being is bound to respect, nor our Negroes, whom he frankly regards as beasts, but all Americans would be slaves except a few miserable Vierecks, who would be rewarded with special positions in which to assist his regime here.

Is conscription of work and compulsion to work and stay put until the war is won too great a sacrifice for a free people to impose on themselves? New Zealand has done it and, although I have read of no actual conscription of labor as such in Australia, the effect of a number of emergency rules in that very free and independent country has amounted to such conscription. If the enemy were that close to us we would not hesitate, perhaps too late then, to compel every able-bodied man and woman to fight or work, and there would be no argument about it.

Fortunately, in our case, the enemy is farther off, but he is nearer than most of us realize, and if we are to get the benefit of our skill and muscle the time to organize the effort is when we still have some sand in the glass, not when confusion and panic are exciting the people. We can be invaded, we can be cut apart and licked if we do not make a total effort, and if that should happen the Stars and Stripes would vanish, the United States would cease to be and no American now living would ever be free again.

Undoubtedly the unions will object as bitterly as any nomad riding the roads in his trailer with the wife and kids, following the sun through the seasons and taking his jobs where he finds them. This would be a calamity to the unions unless the Government should try to make the conscript workers join up and pay, which seems unthinkable. Their closed shop and right to strike, even their bargaining power, their whole reason for existence would vanish. But, as I see it, without such compulsion and organization of the industrial and agricultural man power, we are trying to fight a terrible enemy with one hand in our pocket.

Wartime Washington

By Merlo Pusey

Opportunity For A Clean-Up

NOTHING has been heard recently about the proposed investigation into living conditions that are menacing health in this wartime Capital. There was a great deal of excitement on Capitol Hill a few weeks ago because a group of Congressmen had discovered the stench that arises from Washington's rotten slums. The sight of dead rats and garbage littering alleys in which people live proved to be quite sickening to some legislators who had previously given no thought to the slums in the shadow of the Capitol. Then suddenly the whole mess seemed to be forgotten.

PUSEY

Now this silence is particularly lamentable because an opportunity is arising for members of Congress to do something about these breeding places of epidemics. It is true that Congress decided, in passing the Lanham Act for metropolitan Washington, that all the city's slums—even those occupying strategic areas where war workers might well be housed—must remain during this critical housing shortage. It is difficult to quarrel with that decision. But it certainly throws upon Congress a greater responsibility to prevent these hotbeds of disease and vice from endangering the health of the city. The time is not opportune for cleaning them out, but under the city's present crowded condition it is imperative that they be cleaned up.

Presumably a clean-up is what Chairman Randolph had in mind when he called the District Committee together some weeks ago for a survey of the menace which had shocked some of his colleagues. The committee broke up with the understanding that the subcommittee on public health in the District would look further into the question of tidying up the pigsties in which many Washingtonians live. Such an inquiry should be particularly helpful at this time, for Congress is now squarely confronted by the question of whether it will appropriate funds for this purpose.

SOME MEMBERS of the District Committee are known to be disturbed by the thought of an epidemic sweeping out of our vermin-infested slums and crippling the war effort here at the headquarters of the United Nations. Their uneasiness was manifested months ago and District officials were very sharply told that a clean-up must be effected. They replied, of course, that funds for such a clean-up had been consistently denied them. Certainly they would be delighted to try once more.

Two weeks ago I pointed out that Health Officer Ruhland's request for a deficiency appropriation of $412,085 for a four-month period has been cut by the Commissioners to $230,700 for a three-month period. A Senate committee has since slashed that fund to $144,000. Aside from adding 18 food inspectors to the Health Department's staff, this sum will merely permit Gallinger and Glenn Dale Hospitals to continue feeding their patients and supplying them with medicine. Rising prices and a heavier case load have brought about a 30 per cent increase in the fund required for food and medical supplies.

IN APPLYING this severe cut Senator McKellar's subcommittee raised the technical but none the less reasonable point that the House subcommittee on District appropriations should have an opportunity to pass upon items involving new service. The effect, however, is to postpone the inauguration of an effective health program in several fields where additional activity is desperately needed.

Yesterday Representative Mahon's subcommittee began hearings on the already obsolete District appropriations bill for the fiscal year 1943. The subcommittee has before it additional estimates for the Health Department totaling $420,225. An increase of that amount would make possible various improvements in the public health service now rendered. But the committee should not overlook the fact that this sum falls far short of the $712,000 requested by Dr. Ruhland to afford reasonable protection of health in Washington in this critical period.

Dr. Ruhland asked for an additional $24,180 to finance a determined attack upon venereal diseases which are shockingly prevalent in the Capital. That fund was cut to $16,260. Nearly $100,000 was slashed from the fund requested for public health nurses to aid in the fight against syphilis and other maladies. Still more devastating to the projected clean-up of cesspools from which contagion springs was the cut inflicted upon the item for sanitary inspection. Dr. Ruhland had requested $89,066 to permit complete reorganization of an inspection service that is now incompetent and utterly unequal to the task of enforcing even the present obsolete and inadequate sanitary regulations. The Commissioners cut this sum to $18,760—a small fraction of the amount needed if this vital service is to be rehabilitated.

AT PRESENT Washington has one sanitary inspector for every 70,000 inhabitants, and most of these inspectors are aging men who are unable to perform the work expected of them. No more need be said to indicate the impossibility of cleaning up the city's potential hatcheries for epidemics with the present force. Without a new staff of public health engineers to direct this work and inspectors to carry it out, the Health Department simply cannot be held responsible for any germ invasion that may attack Washington from the stronghold of vile, garbage-strewn alleys.

This issue is now squarely before Congress. Unfortunately, it is not directly before the House District Committee which has manifested a commendable interest in relieving the city from menaces of this sort. But that committee does have an opportunity to make its influence felt. Will it raise a furor while there is yet time to include in the 1943 appropriations bill funds to start the clean-up? Or will it let the opportunity pass and then raise a hullabaloo when it is too late to head off a wartime epidemic?

The time to strike at disgusting conditions that make Congressmen blush with shame for the National Capital is clearly when the appropriations bill is under discussion. Washington is eagerly waiting to see whether our city councilmen who are demanding a clean-up of syphilis, tuberculosis and perhaps typhus hatcheries actually mean business.

Russian Offensive

By Otto Strasser

German Officer Studies Red Army

RED ARMY authorities, under the leadership of Timoshenko, have for some time been transforming the Russian military machine into one designed for offensive rather than defensive action. This process was incomplete when Hitler struck last June, but it has been carried out since. It was divisions of this new army, fully trained in the revised tactics, which stepped into the breach before Moscow last fall and smashed the Nazi panzer spearheads. Russian offensives, notably those before Smolensk last September, and later before the city of Rostov, were regarded as experiments to perfect the new tactics, so that they might be adapted for use on a larger scale, in preparation for a giant offensive.

If such a statement were issued by the Russian propaganda bureau, it would be understandable. But actually it is the central thought of a memorandum written by a commander of a German artillery regiment on the Russian front—and, as such, it is of great interest and significance. Written after almost six months of fighting in Russia, I received it during the past week through an intermediate source. A new conception of the military factors which forced such a cautious tone in Hitler's latest address is seen here, for though written in December, this German officer refers to the coming Russian offensive of which "the Soviet Union is speaking with so much anticipation and confidence."

THE MEMORANDUM, opens with observations on the Red army's success in stemming the mighty Nazi drive of last October. "Today we know how very imminent was the fall of Moscow," the German artillery commander writes, "for it becomes clear from reports of the Russian press, and particularly the Red Star, now appearing daily, how utterably desperate the situation was, especially at Kalinin on October 16."

Referring to the battle around Kalinin, he continues: "There we saw a sudden turn of the tide when an Irkutsker division executed an almost impossible action. The destruction of the German panzer spearheads—a performance which would have been deemed incredibly rash at a less critical moment—brought about a change in the whole outlook of the war, a change which had hitherto seemed impossible.

"In future accounts of the Russian war one will speak of the miracle of Kalinin as one spoke of the miracle of the Marne or the miracle of the Weichsel to which Paris and Moscow, in 1914 and 1920, owed their salvation in the direst circumstances . . ."

THE SUBSEQUENT shifts in the Russian command were "carried out according to plan," taking Voroshiov from Leningrad to the unoccupied north, Budenny from the south, and transferring Timoshenko from the Central to the Southern Front. "Actually such a reorganization was decided upon in the session of the Highest Defense Council on August 16. Timoshenko was the only active general on the 'Council of Five' and he expounded his thesis in a three-hour lecture"—arguing that considered in the complete strategic picture, not Moscow but Baku is the metropolis in the Soviet Union.

"Timoshenko therefore requested," the memorandum continues, "the command of the southern armies which would have the protection of the Russian oil reservoirs, and the counteroffensive which he executed on the Central Front (before shifting to the south), bringing him to the gates of Smolensk in September, was to afford sufficient time and space to make possible the smooth transfer of the supreme command from Moscow to Timoshenko's closest friend, Schuko."

But that attack was something more, he contends: "An experiment of great scope. They wanted to test the preparedness of the Red Army for offensive action and correct striking deficiencies.

"Such experiments, seeking practical verification, are characteristic of modern Russia," the German officer points out. "Founded on the theories of Marx, Pawlow, Bechterew, etc., to a considerable degree it considers every phase of social life as a scientific process to be tested and improved. The world is looked upon as a great laboratory where individuals and masses are used as means of experimenting.

"In the same way Soviet military theorists believe that their theories can only claim truth when they have been proven by a series of experiments on a large-scale application." In this sense the Spanish Civil War and the Finnish campaign were experiments, watched by the Russian headquarters "like the engineer watches the first starting of a motor at a testing station. They did not pay so much attention to how or where these campaigns would lead as to the way they functioned."

BUT BECAUSE of the stubborn defense of Madrid, and later experience in Finland, the Russians drew an erroneous conclusion, the German commander claims. Their observations led them to believe that war could be won only if they fought defensively and therefore the Red army was moulded with a view to fighting on this strategy.

However, Germany's spectacular successes in 1939, and again in 1940, proved the contrary, and the Russians set out to effect a radical transformation of their army.

"Timoshenko has been the driving force in this direction," the German officer writes. "It was he who put into action the neglected parachute troops. He demanded an increase in the striking power of the air force and an extension of the mobile artillery. The way was paved for the construction of lighter types of tanks in place of the fortress-like, ponderous giants, so difficult to manoeuver. In the plants in Siberia a start was made on the construction of armored sleighs, capable of being driven to quick attack by airplane propellers."

The Russian offensive army was ready when the German attack on Russia began—with the exception of the troops in the Far East. It was these divisions, fully trained in the new tactics, the German officer contends, which were thrown into the Western Front "because they conceived of defense predominantly in an offensive spirit, and were able to meet the German forces at the gates of Moscow with their own tactics."

THE RUSSIAN counteroffensive in September, it is asserted, revealed the lack of a promptly functioning intelligence service and "the fact that the soldiers second in command were not sufficiently schooled in the fundamental rules of offensive attack." Subsequently definite progress was noted with Soviet artillery, as well as the effective work of mass tank attacks and the "Stormik" bombers.

Even the smallest unit of the Russian army, the German officer states, is now thoroughly instructed in the observation of three points: First, the surprise movement, creating a favorable fighting position and paralyzing the enemy; secondly, the flanking attack, seeking to break through to the greatest depth, followed by a rolling up of the front; finally, the necessity of every single man doing his utmost to keep the drive in full swing.

"The entirely unexpected offensive of Timoshenko at Rostov indicates that it had not attained the perfection and momentum of a German offensive," the memorandum concludes, adding, however, that "it did show definite improvement over the offensive on the Central Front in September.

"It is quite possible," the German officer wrote while that offensive was under way in December, "that Marshal Timoshenko will voluntarily bring his attack to a halt when he considers that the danger to the Caucasus has been eliminated and his experiment has been complete enough to permit adapting his tactics to a large-scale offensive of which the Soviet Union at present is speaking with so much anticipation and confidence."

It is not without significance, the memorandum concludes, that a favorite quotation in Soviet papers is that from the third book of von Clausewitz's works, discussing how, when the strength of the enemy's offensive has been exhausted, "it is then that one can leap from the defensive to the offensive."

Reporter Finds U. S. Uniforms Everywhere As A.E.F. in Australia Builds Combat Machine

By Allen Raymond

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Somewhere in Australia, April 13. Everywhere one goes in Australia he is confronted with the rising tide of America's war effort, rolling up infinitely more swiftly than it did in 1917 and 1918.

With the war in the Pacific only four months old, a sizable framework for an expeditionary force has been laid here, the advance guard of American soldiers who already have seen combat service in the Philippines and Java mingling with the newcomers. The whole atmosphere is one of "drive toward the front."

Within the last month I have flown more than 6000 miles, covering territory in the east, west, north and south. The uniform of the United States Army is everywhere. American methods of organization and construction are raising warehouses, surfacing airdromes and tossing up barracks and encampments where only a few weeks ago there were empty fields.

Pessimism Wanes

Whereas a few months ago the Australians seemed to be casting anxious eyes across the Pacific, wondering when planes would arrive and whether they would get here in time to stave off a Japanese attack, today this country's feelings are changing hopefully.

Saturday night the airplane in which I was traveling paused a few hundred miles out in the bush country. This cattle country is sparsely settled, but in a village near an airdrome a cafe was keeping open to cater to hungry Americans and at a hall in the town American soldiers were dancing with village belles.

Before that I had been many miles out into the desert, where the heat was stifling, and there seemed to be more flies than ever were raised by a curse on the Pharaohs. But there at an airdrome were more American fighter pilots, their heads encased in fly nets, who had just flown in a group of those pursuit planes for which all Australia had been crying.

There was no food there. The airmen were carrying only light rations, but there they were, on the way to meet the Japanese, who hereabouts are nicknamed either "Nippos" or "Tojos."

Becoming a Singing Army

The nearer one gets to the front, the better America's war effort looks to a reporter. A certain American outfit already is so acclimated that it has a regimental song, on the theme of "red dust" set to the tune of "Red Sails in the Sunset." Near there I encountered an American fighter squadron, which has developed its own song, with a chorus that goes "Hi Diddle Dee, a Pilot's Life for Me," and with as many verses as "Mademoiselle From Armentieres."

Only a person who has flown over bush and desert can realize how isolated from the rest of the world are these husky, handsome youngsters with lazy Southern drawls or sectional accents from the great Northwest of the United States. At one camp where I stopped, three Australian nursing sisters in uniform had motored with an American major 30 miles just to see American fighter planes. They were the first white women the camp had seen in weeks. They were the sensation of that day.

The American soldiers had salvaged a short-wave radio receiver from a damaged American freighter so they could get news broadcasts. The Australians are beginning to send educational speakers around to the camps, which is better than no entertainment, but on the whole the soldier's life in the wilderness is pretty dull.

Drudgery, Terror, Elation

The war out there seems to be made up of 98 per cent drudgery and boredom, occasional spasms of terror, if the camps are in the immediate vicinity of Japanese bombing targets, and moments of absolute ecstasy, if my experiences and observations are any criterion. I have been watching our fighter pilots and listening to them, and I have seen enough to believe that there is no sensation on earth as sweet as surviving the peril of active combat against the enemy.

The Australians and Americans have apparently learned a lesson from the number of planes that were destroyed on the ground in Malaya and Java, for the new airdromes here are much better camouflaged than those elsewhere were. I have a feeling, however, that the threat of invasion on any great scale lessens daily, altough nuisance bombings and even nuisance landings are still likely enough.

At one beautifully camouflaged airdrome I found antiaircraft gunners engaged in carpentry to make their dugouts more comfortable. Nicknames were being given to mounds of sandbags and earthworks, which were invisible from a few thousand feet in the air, yet which house antiaircraft guns and crews. One nickname was "Tojo's Surprise," another was "Bronx Arms."

Many Dutch Pilots Present

I have noticed, while traveling around the country, how many Dutch East Indies pilots have escaped from Java and are working night and day in the allied war effort which some day will win back their lovely land. The captain with whom I flew yesterday, who had put in 125 flying hours in the last six days, told me that the Dutch still were fighting up to five days ago in mountains near Bandoeng, Java, and in the jungles of Sumatra.

He said Dutch naval forces in Australian waters had been able to keep in touch with the fighters in Java by short-wave radio.

Many men in the Dutch Indies air force, he said, were in Australia, some engaged in transport work, some with the Australian air force and others forming units which will go into battle in American planes.

Another group of soldiers which has aroused my admiration consists of the Americans who are handling airdrome machinery of huge proportions. They take these tractor-drawn shovels, plows and rollers into virgin scrub forest and carve out fine airdromes.

At one place I stopped a few minutes before newly-made graves of two American soldiers, who had died in the performance of their duty. They seemed a long way from home. I certainly hope their countrymen will long remember them.

Answer to Cry for Tanks—

Tanks in mass production are rolling rapidly off the assembly lines today in the Cleveland Ordnance District. Here are the first pictures released by the Army showing construction of the M4, 1942 model of the medium tank

1. ON THE ASSEMBLY LINE (below), the M4s are ready to get their turrets and guns in a war-production plant in the Cleveland area. They will replace the familiar M3s of 1941

2. WELDING, instead of riveting, is being used to further speed production of the Army's new medium tank. Here a thick floor plate is under the workman's torch

3. BOGEY WHEEL UNITS are assembled by this workman. Wheels piled high in the background await their rubber tires. Tank tread rides the rubber-tired bogey wheels which assure efficient traction

4. FRESH OFF the assembly line, a M-4 takes the rough and muddy first circuit of the test track area. Designed by the Ordnance Department of the Army, these tanks are built under Ordnance technical supervision; combine high fire power with high speed and heavy armor

5. GIVING AN EXHIBITION OF POWER, test drivers took an M4 from the assembly line into deep mud near the tank arsenal. Although the topside of the tread is under water, the M4 is not mired—far from it. The M4 pulled out unaided. Field tests are designed to simulate war conditions

Folk Festival

Commissioner Elizalde Sponsors Filipino Group

FILIPINO STUDENTS—Estefania J. Aldaba, Gloria Cortes, Manuel Hizeon and Jose Santos will be among Filipino students' folk song and dance group

Over in the Philippines they are fighting desperately and valiantly—those Filipinos and our own men. Yet vital and tragic as affairs are in those gallant islands at this time, Senor Joaquin Elizalde, Commissioner from the Philippine Islands to the United States, recognizes the necessity to keep the cultural things native to his island people alive. If anything it seems more important than ever at this time to give Americans a more complete picture of the life of his brave people. So Senor Elizalde has arranged to sponsor, officially, the appearance of a group of young Filipino students in songs and dances of the folklore native to the Philippines in the program of the Ninth National Folk

JOAQUIN ELIZALDE

Festival, which The Washington Post Folk Festival Association is presenting in Constitution Hall May 6, 7, 8 and 9, with two performances each day.

This will be the first appearance of any Filipino group in the festivals and the world-wide importance of those islands in universal history at this time makes the numbers that this group will give even more interesting than in ordinary times, although they have a triple-fed culture in those islands that provides fascinating material at any time. It is the folk music and legend that lie close to the heart of a people and reflect the development of national character. The Philippines have three distinct periods in music—the pre-Spanish period, when Malayan traditions formed the background of a widespread culture prior to 1521; the Spanish period, when typical rhythms and ideas native to Spain were woven into the folk pattern of the islands from 1521 to 1898; and the third period, from then until the present, when modern American music and both the popular and our own folk music have been carried across the Pacific to the Philippines and done their share in adding variety to the music over there.

One of the basic legends of the Philippines has to do, quite naturally, with the origin of the islands. It seems they tell the story of a great giant—an island version of Atlas—who was carrying a great mass of land on his shoulders. At last, for some reason not named in the legend, the giant got angry and he flung the burden down into the Pacific Ocean. The mass broke into 7082 pieces and the Filipinoes say those pieces are the Philippine Islands.

The group that is coming to present folk music at the festival is made up of Filipino students who are attending the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor. Miss Pilar Ravelo, popular young Filipino newspaperwoman in Washington, says that their program will include folk dances such as the solo—"Rice Planting" (which is a work-song used in the islands to lighten the monotony of back-breaking labor in planting the wide fields with this principal staple of island food) and "Tinikling," a bird dance in which four young people will dance. There also will be selections by a group of four men in a stringed band and there may be some numbers for the bamboo pipes that are famous in the islands.

Speaking of bamboo, Miss Pilar told of a unique church organ—really the only one in the world—that is entirely made of bamboo and has a particularly lovely, flute-like tone. It was made by a Spanish priest and is in the Paramaque Church near Manila.

Miss Pilar's own newspaper's building, the Manila Herald, was one of the first buildings bombed in the islands.

"My editor, Carlos Romulo, saw so much of the cruelty in the Japanese treatment of Chinese prisoners when he was in China—and wrote about it in our paper," she explained with a sad shake of her pretty, dark head, "that those first bombers seemed to aim directly at that building on December 7 and it was completely demolished."

For the moment Miss Pilar has no home paper and is on the staff of Senor Elizade here. She also is not at all sure if she has any family or home left in the islands for she says the provinces where most of them lived and especially the one where a relative of hers was governor were among the first to be bombed.

Miss Pilar says, in speaking of the folk songs and dances, that these are kept alive in peace times at all the big society parties and official entertainments given on holidays.

'Scientific Twins'

10-Year Experiment Nears End

New York, April 13 (Wide World). On April 17 the reason for the goldfish bowl existence of the twins, Johnny and Jimmy Woods, comes to an end.

They were selected at birth to be the principal actors in a scientific show with a cast of nearly a hundred other children.

The show was a Rockefeller-endowed experiment in behavior development which was to have a ten-year run, closing on the twins' decennial birthday.

The so-called "scientific twins" are a couple of lively average city boys with a fondness for marbles and mumblety-peg.

They live on upper Amsterdam Avenue in a crowded apartment above a store with their father, a former taxicab driver; their mother, and six brothers and sisters.

They were chosen because of no particular physical or mental heritage but because the experiment required twins and their mother was willing for Johnny and Jimmy to participate in it.

The experiment was to find out at what period of human life the individual begins to profit by the experience or repetition of performance.

It previously had been held that the nervous system of infants is unresponsive to practice efforts.

So for the first two years of their lives the twins were taken daily to the Normal Child Development Clinic where Johnny's efforts were stimulated and accelerated and Jimmy's were restrained. The rest of the child cast was simply observed.

As a result of the training, Johnny when still less than 2 years old and 2 feet high, started speeding about the marble hospital floors on roller skates and swimming with his head under water.

The training part of the experiment lasted just two years. The following eight years were concerned only with checkups—at various intervals—on retention of the acquired skills.

The acquired skills were not always well retained. The checkups showed two reasons why: They weren't thoroughly mastered during the training, and as the child grows he has to master a new set of body mechanisms.

Johnny, for instance, as he grew taller, temporarily lost part of his skating skill because his static equilibrium changed.

The training in the experiment was purely physical. It showed that the motor control of children can be groomed if the training starts when the nervous system is ready for it. If the nervous system isn't ready, it is so much time lost.

For example, the doctors tried to teach Johnny to ride a tricycle when he was 11 months old, but his nervous system was unresponsive to this activity until he was 19 months old. Then he mastered it.

On the other hand, he was put on roller skates when he was ready for walking. The nervous system was responsive and away went Johnny on wheels.

The result of Johnny's training was not that he developed into an over-sized, over-strong child, nor was it mean to be.

The result was that his muscular coordination was above average. In athletic attempts he "worked like a well-oiled machine."

Today he's bigger than his brother, but that doesn't mean he can outdo him. Both can shin up a pole or jump off a wall, but Johnny's performance will rate a star higher than Jimmy's.

This was apparent when they were still babies and Jimmy was given an intensive two-month training on the heels of Johnny's two years of it.

The restraint that had been placed on Jimmy's activities during that first 24 months until his emotional and perceptive capacities had increased had made him more cautious and less coordinated in handling his body.

But the performer today—in another field—is Jimmy. He clowns and bids for the approval of his audience. He is a chatterbox and thoroughly unselfconscious. He has always seemed more at ease in the home situation and is closer to his mother.

Johnny, today, has a philosophical attitude and takes things as they come. He is not upset when he can't get his own way and is more self-sufficient. He has no fears and often alarms his mother, who thinks he ought to be more careful in crossing the street.

How to Select A Blouse for Your New Suit

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor.

THERE are few items in a woman's wardrobe as difficult to select as a blouse. With this being the suit year of suit years, blouses have come to the fore more than ever. "Should I select a frilly blouse with a dressy suit?" "Must I wear a tailored blouse with my tailored suit?" These are a few of the usual questions asked by women blouse customers.

To answer these queries Miss Jean MaColl, fashion expert and merchandise assistant of a local store, was consulted. Miss MaColl, whose own blouses have a faultless sartorial touch, says she has come to this conclusion, "Blouses serve two purposes. They furnish color and crispness and should be chosen accordingly."

Lapel Gadgets Help

"People notice the general lines of a suit," says this blouse authority, "but it is the color combination of the blouse that makes the suit stand out." She believes that gay lapel gadgets also help to carry out the color of the blouse. And she adds that a variety of different colored blouses can make one suit go much further.

Far from being subordinate to color, crispness is the main attraction of a blouse, in Miss MaColl's estimation. "Crispness is one reason women always like suits. A crisp blouse makes a suit look neat and clean," she stated. Cotton or organdy blouses are her favorites.

"We used to think," said this fashion expert, "that if a woman had a tailored suit, she had to have a tailored blouse. If she had a dressy suit, we thought she had to have a dressy blouse. But now we know that the soft, low-necked V-blouse goes with everything. Its notched lapels add the right effect against a suit."

Short Sleeves Cooler

The soft bow blouse that is now important as a fashion note is especially good to camouflage a thin neck, but it is not a hot weather style, as Miss MaColl cautioned. She believes that from a comfort standpoint, and not from the fashion point of view, the short sleeved blouse is cooler for summer. "Long sleeves can't be worn more than a half day before they look wilted," she said.

If you have to depend on blouses to give the distinction between your tailored and dressy costumes, here is another suggestion. Equip yourself with a supply of blouses, such as tailored and frilly, printed and plain, and rotate them. In the morning wear a crisp tailored version of cotton broadcloth or rayon sharkskin. After 5, wear the same suit but change to a blouse of confection lace and frills.

Blouse Types Simple and Crisp

Crispness, the main attraction in a blouse, is attained in this soft V-neck style with notched lapels. Actress Ellen Drew wears this one in chalk white silk jersey. It would be equally right in rayon crepe, cotton, broadcloth or sharkskin, and is wearable with virtually any type of suit. Choose white for that spick-and-span appearance, and gay colors for an occasional change

Convertible V neck blouses are as ideal for wear with slacks as they are with separate skirts. The crisp, long-sleeved rayon one (above), right for now, will probably be replaced by the short-sleeved one (left) later on

Firm Stomach Muscles Better Than Girdle to Keep You Flat

By Ida Jean Kain

WHAT IS the worst feature about your figure? Most likely it is that zone just south of the belt buckle which fashion mentions as the midsection and masculine joviality dubs "bay window." It is also occasionally called a "bread basket." To remove all doubt, it is simply the stomach, as one exasperated editor informed me when I tried to minimize matters by calling it a "tummy."

So you can name your own terms. But from the standpoint of health and looks, you should take steps to firm and flatten this portion of the figure. You have to stop overeating and take corrective exercise to tone the important muscles.

You can cut down on your abdominal girth from one meal to the next by making a practice of getting up from the table each time feeling as if you could eat a little more—would even like to.

You will have to exercise, too. Your muscular network must be strong enough to exert a counterpull against gravity and hold your organs up in their proper position. As far as health goese, these are your most important muscles. The weaker they are, the less efficient they are.

Strong Muscles Necessary

With a good set of calisthenics you can feel firmer within one week, look flatte rin two! Start off with these:

POSITION: Lie on your back on the floor with buttocks against the wall, legs straight up wall, arms straight out at sides on the floor.

MOVEMENT: Bring alternate knees hard down against chest, flexing and thrusting alternate legs in the "wall bicycle." Continue for 30 counts, increasing gradually to 50.

POSITION: Sit with back to the wall, legs straight out in front.

MOVEMENT: Press small of the back and shoulders against wall and just sit there for three or four minutes. Make a deliberate effort to pull up with the lower abdominal muscles to press small of back flat against the wall.

POSITION: Stand with upper back flat against the wall, heels together, toes turned slightly out, knees turned out.

MOVEMENT: Keep back flat against wall and slide downward to a semisquatting position. In doing this exercise correctly you are forced to roll the back of the hips down and under as you pull up hard with your lower abdominal wall. This strengthens these muscles and improvese your posture generally. Repeat five times.

This trio will keep you busy for a few days. Menus like the following reduce your weight and flatten your stomach:

Stitching Sisters Save Two Billion

Christiana, Tenn.—Assuming the Spence sisters' stitches—an estimated 227,500,000 in the past eight years—alone—were made at the proper time, then Misses Sallie and Ellen Spence have saved more than two billion stitches!

The white-haired sisters' domestic hobby developed into an unusual occupation: they make quilts and more quilts and their job is never done.

Turning out 328 quilts since their first order was received in 1934, they credit their success to their unique designs. No two quilts are stitched the same.

Plus Sizing Styles For Off-Figures In Summer Types

If you are one of the few two million women in America who have ideal figure proportions—height, 5 feet 6 inches; weight, 116 pounds pounds; bust, 34 inches; waist, 24 inches, and hips, 35 inches—then you have nothing to worry about in selecting your clothes. But statistics show that the other thirty-eight million women in the country are either taller, shorter, thinner or heavier than the "ideal."

Washington has its share of women and girls with these not-so-perfect figures, statistics also prove. Possibly this fact accounts for the great demand for clothes in the new "plus sizing" range, which takes into account all these little figure discrepancies.

So successful has been this size range of young sophisticated frocks that the collection of late spring and summer clothes is now available in a local store. Bearing the label of "Little Shepherdess," these frocks are seen in every style from navy prints to cool shantungs for varied occasions, such as town suits and daylight dancing dresses.

Shantung is a favorite in the suit styles, but there also are jacket dresses, long coat ensembles, apron front sheers, cool black laces, rayon and cotton meshes and the popular "basic" frocks.

Mary Haworth's Mail

In Planning to Marry Fine Man She Loves, Girl Is Uncertain Whether to Tell Him About Shameful Experience Suffered in Adolescence

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 22, and for four years I have been going steady with a boy who is now 24. I am very much in love with him, as I am sure he is with me. Our outlook on life seems to be identical and we have no bad habits. Everyone who knows me has praised my good character to him. I don't believe he has ever heard anyone express a critical opinion of me. He has often said he could never love another girl as he loves me, and his loyalty to me during the past four years would seem to prove his sincerity.

A few months ago, he gave me an engagement ring and we are planning to be married soon. But in my mind, a serious problem remains to be solved, before I can become his wife. When I was 15 years of age, two years before I met this boy, I dated a young man much older than I. I had agreed to go to the movies with him, but instead, he took advantage of my youthful ignorance to persuade me to drive out with him to a desolate country road, where he forcibly assaulted me. I was so shocked and frightened that I never dared tell anyone,—not even my mother,—what had happened. From that day to this, I have never mentioned the matter, and I never went out with him again. But I became extremely careful in my choice of men friends.

Now that I am engaged to this boy I love, I wonder if I should tell him of that sordid incident. There is no one ever to tell him, except myself. And I have always thought that marriage should be based on complete honesty and truthfulness. This is the only secret I have ever kept from him, and I know he could never imagine me having such an experience. If I should tell him now, he would wonder why I had waited so long. And, also, the confession probably would cause us to be unhappy forever after.

If I go ahead and marry him, keeping the secret, I feel I can be the good wife to him that he expects me to be; and as a result of that shameful experience, I believe I can teach my children to beware of wrong associations. Or am I just trying to make excuses to dodge the issue? Should I tell him the full truth? If so, how shall I go about it, after tacitly "deceiving" him, these four years? Your counsel will be much appreciated; for I have read your column for two years and have found it very helpful. Sincerely, E. M. A.

Treat Past Misfortune With Healing Silence

DEAR E. M. A.: To confess this brutal experience to your fiance (who is not qualified to judge it righteously) would be to resurrect it and clothe it with a significance it never possessed, in your moral and social history. Here was an instance of a lascivious crime committed against innocence;—a crime which, fortunately, neither damaged your personality nor smirched your reputation; and a crime which, in my opinion, it were morally healthful for you to forgive and forget. Consider the words of the Lord's Prayer; "—Forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us—." And bear in mind that one has not truly forgiven an offense until one has forgotten its commitment.

Any theologian would tell you, I think, that heinous transgression of moral law involves "consent of the will," in sharing wrongdoing,—a condition that did not obtain, on your part, in the instance referred to. The sin was entirely the man's, in deliberately taking brutish advantage of your childlike ingenuousness and defenselessness. So, therefore, you have no "secret" of personal wrong-doing to confess, in consequence of that episode. You have only the knowledge of another individual's stupid viciousness of character, as once displayed in relation to you.

And, obviously, no constructive purpose could possibly be served in disclosing that knowledge, by tattling the incident on which it is based, at this late date. Which brings me to the conclusion that, as a matter of decent reticence concerning another's now irrelevan weakness, and as a means of safeguarding your fiance's peace of mind against an onslaught of futile, destructive emotions,—such as rage, dismay and jealous suspicion, — you should herewith strongly resolve to perpetuate forever your erstwhile policy of "healing silence" regarding that ugly encounter. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Bonnet Posies

Flowers bloom in the spring. Maybe few in your garden, but many in your bonnets. Hat stylists knowing your need for the esthetic are using all varieties in trimming their new creations. Pert little sailors lose their severity of other years by the trim of a bouquet. Large cartwheels circle shallow crowns made of scattered flowers. And, as if that were not enough, one designer is making hats of a floral fabric, such as you might expect in a print dress.

Soybean Recipes

The soybean is a food that can be relied upon to fill a big bill, because it is a cheap source of excellent nutrition to make distinctive foods. I had almost forgotten about this Oriental revered food until I ate some roasted ones recently at a cocktail party. They recalled to me the parched corn that my dad liked to have around for nibbling in place of candy.

To make salted soybeans use the following recipe:

Use the varieties of soybeans that are good for cooked. dried beans. Wash the beans and soak overnight; drain and spread out in a single layer at room temperature to dry, or dry with a clean towel. Fry a few at a time in hot, deep fat, 350 degrees, for 8 to 10 minutes. Drain on absorbent paper and salt while still warm.

Soybean muffins are increasing fast in popularity. Try the following recipe for making them:

Soybean Muffins—Mix together 1 cup soybean flour, 1 cup white or graham flour, 1 teaspoon salt, 2 teaspoons baking powder and 2 teaspoons sugar, and sift. Combine ¾ cup milk, 1 well-beaten egg and 1 tablespoon shortening and add to dry ingredients, stirring only enough to moisten. Do not beat; batter should not be smooth. Fill greased muffin pans 2-3 full and bake in very hot oven, 425 degrees for 15 to 25 minutes, depending upon size. Makes 1 dozen muffins.

Cotton Rugs Brighten Home

FOR A FLOOR gone dingy, you are clever to make this braided cotton rug! Really clever! For cotton rugs are now in fashion for even the more formal rooms—partly because of the war and partly because they're lovely.

Braiding a rug is easy and inexpensive. You may use material you have on hand, cutting it in strips 1½ yards long and 3½ inches wide. Flowered fabric is pretty for an informal rug.

Prepare your strips of fabric by turning in the raw edges ½ inch and folding through center. Then pin 3 strips together and braid folding them again through center.

Faults you may have seen in other handbraided rugs are easy to avoid. You won't have lumps if you don't add new strips all at the same spot. Also your rug won't cup up if you keep the braids flat, in sewing together.

Start the center by folding one braided end in half, sew, and continue to wind braid around this center, sewing as you go.

FEEL FRESH AS A DAISY Tomorrow

TAKE PHILLIPS' MILK OF MAGNESIA Tonight

Do you want to wake up clear-headed—wide-awake—full of pep tomorrow? Then don't let your stomach go sour during the night because of overindulgence. Give that excessive acidity the one-two action of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

For Phillips' Milk of Magnesia is more than a first rate alkalizer. It does more than merely relieve the discomfort due to too much acid. Phillips' finishes the job. It acts as a very gentle laxative—promotes mild yet thorough elimination. It's an ideal laxative-antacid.

The next time you eat a little too much—stay up too late smoking and drinking—try Phillips' Milk of Magnesia at bedtime, and wake up feeling fresh as a daisy. Read the directions on the Milk of Magnesia package and take only as directed thereon or as prescribed by your physician.

ONE-TWO ACTION!

1 AN EFFECTIVE ALKALIZER. Gives speedy relief when your stomach feels "uneasy" or gassy due to too much acid. Rated among the most effective neutralizers of excess stomach acids known. Acts almost immediately.

2 A MILD LAXATIVE. Not a purge—merely promotes more thorough elimination. Does not leave you feeling "all wrung out". Take it at any time of the day because it does not act with embarrassing urgency. Many physicians recommend it for young children. There is no better mild laxative.

Wife of Film Star, on Flying Trip East, Finds 'Chivalry Is Not Dead'

IN A BRIEF interview before she boarded a plane westward yesterday afternoon Mrs. Edward G. Robinson (yes, of course, she's the wife of the movie star) talked of many things—wartime fashions on the West Coast . . . the U. S. O. conference on Sunday at the Mayflower . . . sailors on horseback, and soldiers afloat on some of the more fabulous estates in southern California . . . and chivalry in an age of priorities.

Mrs. Edward G. Robinson

Big homes, swimming pools and expansive gardens all up and down the West Coast are being turned over to men in uniform, she said. Soldiers and sailors have been given me run of many mansions, and every ranch worthy of the name in California has become sort of a second home for service men on weekend leave, she said.

Smartly turned out in a tailored suit, set off with a wide-brimmed straw hat, Mrs. Robinson averred that fancy dressing in and around filmland has been shelved for the duration. "Nobody 'dresses' for anything anymore—not even large dinners," she said. "We've put away our jewels and our fluffs and feathers until after the war is over."

En route East she traveled on the same plane with several young officers, who were coming from Camp Roberts to Fort Benning, Ga., and on the way, three or four stopped off for visits with relatives. At Pittsburgh, Mrs. Robinson wired her husband, "I'm now down to my last lieutenant."

It was at Pittsburgh, too, that she came dangerously near to being delayed so long she almost missed the Sunday meeting in Washington that had brought her 3000 miles across the country. "When there simply wasn't a single available seat on any Capital-bound plane, I resorted to the old tear act," she said, with a chuckle. "Simply dissolved in tears." Pretty soon, a man stepped forth and told her she could have his reservation. "And that," said Mrs. Robinson, "proves conclusively that chivalry is not dead, even in this Age of Priorities.

A WOMAN WHOM we may be addressing as "General' one of these days—Oveta Culp Hobby, who is slated to head the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps—proved she knew all the answers about the latter yesterday at an off-the-record luncheon. Sharing honors at the party with Mrs. Walter Ferguson, the two discussed the importance of a petticoat corps from diametrically opposite points of view.

Mrs. Hobby

Mrs. Ferguson wondered if a women's army would be worth the cost it would entail, and Mrs. Hobby pointed out that its purpose would be to replace men with women in Army jobs which they could handle, thus releasing thousands of men for fighting service. Mrs. Ferguson ventured the opinion that most women might be of as much help in winning the war if they stayed home and tended to the jobs already laid out for them. "Of course," Mrs. Ferguson went on, "I suppose I feel that way because I'm just old-fashioned."

"Unfortunately," Mrs. Hobby replied, "this is not an old-fashioned war." And that was only the beginning.

AROUND THE TOWN, they're talking about:

The recent dinner given by Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean at which Mrs. Denis Conan Doyle, the former Princess Nina Mdivani, sat across the table from her former husband, Charles Henry Huberich, international lawyer of Paris, whose visit to Washington seems to be another of those mysteries . . . Although Mrs. Doyle and Huberich scracely exchanged a glance during dinner, they were seen later conversing together at great length, apparently unconscious of the fact that most of the other dinner guests were watching them.

A luncheon was given by the Doyles the other day for Archduke Otto of Hapsburg. The guest of honor, apparently enjoying himself, lingered until 4:15. Meanwhile, a few others present, who had work to do, finally took matters in hand and excused themselves . . . There ought to be a law in Washington anyway—that after 3:30 p. m., anybody can leave any luncheon without making any apology whatsoever, no matter who the honor guest is, nor how long he chooses to linger.

The widespread report that William Howard Hueffer, the New York jeweler who paid the bill for that mammoth blowout at which Tregor's portrait bust of Gen. MacArthur was unveiled last week, may get his money back in a big way . . . Seems there's a plan under foot to place miniature copies of that bust in hundreds of stores throughout America.

Ilka Chase's autobiography, "Past Imperfect," which includes one of the most illuminating chapters on Hollywood and proves beyond a shadow of a doubt that Miss Chase is a firm believer that Hollywood is a firm believer in the creed, "My name, slurred or unslurred, but mention my name!" And that applies to Washington every bit as much as to Hollywood. In some cases, more so.

Miss Pettus Sets Nuptial Date

Gibson will be matron of honor and bridesmaids will be the Misses Charlotte Davis, Prusilla Gottshall, Adele Ritchie and Jean Iglehart.

Agent General of India Plans to Attend Concert Tomorrow

Some of the splendor of spotlighted India will be in evidence tomorrow evening in Constitution Hall when Krishna and Bhagwati, daughters of Sir Girga Shankar Bajpai, agent general for India and Minister Plenipotentiary to the United States, will occupy the White House box at a concert by the Philadelphia Orchestra.

Although Mrs. Roosevelt will be out of town, two more members of the official White House family have made reservations for the symphonic farewell of the season, the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Morgenthau and the Attorney General and Mrs. Biddle.

Since their arrival with their father early in the winter—he was appointed by the Marquess of Lithingow, Viceroy of India, last summer—the young ladies have become a striking and colorful addition to the Capital's international set, always appearing in the exquisitely embroidered saris and leather sandals of their native land. Like their mother, Lady Maharaj Dulari Bajpai, Kishna, the elder of the two, who is 22, has a diamond set in her nose, while both sisters bear the marks of their Hindu caste on their foreheads.

Lady Maharaj Dulari Bajpai has been in New York, but hopes to return to the Capital in time for Wednesday evening's concert.

Party Today Will Honor Miss Arnold

A wedding only a few days away is its own excuse for prenuptial parties, and a bride-elect traditionally makes a bright-eyed guest of honor. Just now, Miss Mary Alice Arnold, who will walk down that well-known aisle with Edward L. Hynes 2d, on Saturday, is the inspiration for a party to be given this afternoon by Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Given. Guests have been asked to drop in for cocktails during the late afternoon hours at the Givens' home, 3716 Morrison street.

Miss Arnold has planned a quiet wedding with just the immediate families present for the ceremony, which Msgr. Edward L. Buckey will perform at 4 o'clock at the Congressional Club. A reception will follow immediately for friends of the couple. The bride, who is the daughter of William W. Arnold, member of the Board of Tax Appeals, and Mrs. Arnold, will be given in marriage by her father.

The couple will have but the two attendants, Mrs. Richard W. Baker, of New York, and the bridegroom's brother, Thomas Hynes, of Boston, Mass.

A number of parties have been given for Miss Arnold since her engagement was announced recently. Among them was a combined tea and miscellaneous shower in her honor at which Mrs. T. G. Matthews, of New York, Mrs. Louis Bradley and Mrs. Frazier Hilder shared the role of hostess. The fete was at the home of Mrs. Hilder. Last week Mrs. Victor Knoop entertained in Miss Arnold's honor at a luncheon at Normandy Farms.

No Puppets, the Japanese Seek to Conquer The World, Warns Dr. Rhee, of Korea

"DO NOT BE misled. The Japanese are not puppets of Germany. They are not imitating the Nazis. They are a cruel and carefully planning people. Their single aim is the conquest of the world." With these simple, straight-from-the-shoulder words, Dr. Syngman Rhee, chairman of the Korean Commission, who spoke before members of the Woman's National Democratic Club at a luncheon meeting yesterday, warned his listeners not to underestimate Japan's strength and aims.

The provisional government of Korea is now exiled in Chunking, China. Dr. Rhee, its representative, is urging the United States Government to recognize Korea as an independent country.

"Japan," he said, has been preparing for this war against the United States for nearly 50 years. The civilized world needs every weapon it can place its hands on to stop the Japanese. Believe me when I tell you your own country is in grave danger."

Stressing the fact that Koreans are eager to fight against Japan, Dr. Rhee said: "We are ready and willing to fly at the throat of every Japanese the moment a little encouragement and aid are given."

However, he pointed out that recognition of the Korean government by the United States does not mean independence for his people, but that the Koreans would have to fight for it and were prepared to do so.

Recognition would mean that some of the planes and guns and munitions now being turned out here would not be denied Koreans, as they are now, according to the envoy, who was dressed in a handsome light gray suit with a shirt and tie that matched perfectly. "We offer you our tremendous man power," he said, "in the hope that you will accept it for the common cause. Remember, please, that every Japanese engaged in fighting Koreans is one less Japanese to fight an American soldier."

The calm-faced envoy reminded his listeners that the Japanese have long held the price of $100,000 on his head. He thinks that if the American public were informed of the true conditions and history of his country, it would demand that the United States recognize Korea.

"Even the returning missionaries," he said "have not told how the Christians are persecuted in that country and of Japan's insidious antireligious propaganda to uproot all the white men from not only Korea but the entire Orient."

In a gentle but firm manner, Dr. Rhee told how the United States had persuaded his peace-loving country to open up its ports and commerce to the world. Also, he recounted the fact that it was the United States who had sold Japan the scrap iron, planes and ammunitions to not only conquer his country but to wage the present war.

Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, wife of the late Senator from Illinois, presided over the club's luncheon meeting. Mrs. Charles Fahy, wife of the Solictor General, introduced the speaker. Hostesses for the day were Mrs. James Le Cron and Mrs. Milo Perkins.

Mme. Rhee, wife of the speaker, was the guest of honor.

Blackout Trouble

CANCELLATIONS and postponements—mostly the latter—trickled in yesterday. Tonight's total blackout is the reason for the clubs' change of mind. The Hollins Club will hold its spring meeting tomorrow instead of tonight, as originally scheduled. However, there's no change in hostess. The home of Mrs. W. Douglas Clark, 2816 Brandywine Street Northwest, is the place to go . . . The Alumnae Association of Alpha Omicron Pi Sorority has changed its informal reception from tonight until tomorrow night—still the blackout reason.

Editors Plan Discussion

"WHAT ARE Magazines Doing to Meet War Conditions?" This question will be answered in a symposium to be conducted at the District Home Economics Women in Business dinner, tomorrow at 6:30 p. m. at the Admiral Club, 1640 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest. On the panel will be Miss Elizabeth Woody, director of foods, McCall's; Miss Eleanor Howe, coeditor ,What's New in Home Economics; Miss Helen P. Hostetter, editor, Journal of Home Economics, and Miss Jean Guthrie, associate editor, Better Homes and Gardens.

'A. W. V. S. Fingerprints

The American Women's Voluntary Services requires that all its members be fingerprinted for their own safety and speedy identification. In line with the preparedness work of the A. W. V. S., a complete file of the fingerprints is being built up so that, in case of emergency, its members may be quickly identified.

This is a patriotic service in cooperation with the FBI's desire to build up a complete civilian file. The war experiences of England have proven that its women volunteers find themselves in dangerous and exposed positions and a worried family might be helped by the file of fingerprints.

The volunteers at the A. W. V. S. headquarters, 2170 Florida Avenue, are on duty from 10 to 12 a. m. and from 1 to 4 p. m. every day to fingerprint the members so that this file may be built up immediately.

Benefit Party

Mrs. Winfred Overholser is opening her home today for a luncheon to be followed by cards for the benefit of the women's board of George Washington University Hospital in their annual solicitation of funds for new and special hospital equipment. Many reservations are being received, and, aside from luncheon and cards, those who are interested in making a tour of the kitchens, bakeshop and other departments of the hospital will be personnally conducted.

Mrs. Overholser will be assisted by Mrs. Watson W. Eldridge, jr., and other members of the women's board including Mrs. Harry Anderson, Mrs. Ronald Cox, Mrs. George W. Creswell, Mrs. Walter Freeman, Mrs. Joseph Gilbert, Mrs. Ernest Hasdley, Mrs. Howard Kane, Mrs. Magruder McDonald, Mrs. William W. Sager and Mrs. Thomas Thompson.

Public Utility Commission's New Taxi Zone Proposal Will Be Aired at Hearing Today

Little opposition to the Public Utilities Commission's proposed new zoning system for taxicabs is expected at this morning's hearing, at which it will be submitted for public discussion.

Seven members of the District Cab Owners Association met yesterday afternoon and formally approved the P. U. C. plan, which sets new zone boundaries and fixes sub-zones within zones in an effort to equalize tariffs.

The only part of the proposed system which was disapproved by the taxi officials was the provision for a charge of 20 cents on a drive less than a mile in length. The company and association presidents stated that this was impractical, since there was no way for the passenger to gauge the distance without examining the speedometer upon entering and leaving the vehicle, which few will think to do.

"As a result," said John H. Royer, jr., president of the owners' association, "there will be all sorts of arguments and confusion over the mile journey, although the plan was designed to end the confusion caused by the present zones."

The association will request that the present scale of prices be retained in the new setup.

Lieut. Col. Milo Brinkley will appear at the hearing as counsel for the public utilities committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations. He reported last night that while the committee has not formulated any definite policy about the new zones, he will approve it in principle and in most of the details. He hinted that he might ask for changes in certain of the proposed boundaries at the request of some individual citizens' associations.

Other cab owners previously have gone on record as favoring the general scheme of the revised map.

The hearing, which will begin in the P. U. C. hearing room at 10 a. m., will be rather unusual in that the commission will present its evidence, then ask for witnesses who have rebuttals to make. The P. U. C.'s evidence will be based on a study of taxi costs and rates begun in November, following the cab drivers' petition for higher zone rates. This is the first comprehensive and scientific study the P. U. C. has ever made of the zoning system, according to its chairman, Gregory Hankin.

Symphony Drive Off Today

The National Symphony Orchestra will launch its sustaining fund campaign today at a luncheon for approximately 400 volunteer workers at 12:30 p. m. in the grand ballroom of the Mayflower. Active solicitation will begin tomorrow and will continue through Saturday, April 25.

A special feature of the luncheon will be a broadcast message from Dr. Dalter Damrosch, 80-year-old dean of American conductors. Speakers will include John Erskine, author, and Lieut. C. Leslie Glenn, rector of St. John's Parish, Lafayette Square, now serving with the Navy. Toastmaster will be Robert J. Whitehead, attorney, and E. R. Finkenstaedt, campaign chairman, will preside.

Honored guests include Mrs. Truxtun Beale, Harold A. Brooks, Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, Elsie Houston, Miss Alice J. Clapp, Mrs. George A. Garrett, A. F. E. Horn, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, Hans Kindler, conductor of the National Symphony; Rear Admiral Gilbert J. Rowcliff, Corcoran Thom, Matthew John Whittall.

The luncheon committee is comprised of Mrs. Reeve Lewis and Mrs. Emory Scott Land, cochairmen; Mrs. Foster Adams, Mrs. Clarence A. Aspinwall, Mrs. William Ayres Borden, Mrs. Alfred Johnson, Mrs. George Hewitt Myers, Mrs. A. Lloyd Symington and Mrs. Charles F. Wilson.

Chase Joy-Seekers, Grafters From Capital, House Urged

Charging that Washington is "overflowing with pleasure-seekers," Representative O'Connor (Democrat), of Montana, urged on the floor of the House yesterday that the District be converted into a "war area," excluding all persons not directly connected with the Government and the war program.

"Pleasure seekers, grafters and chiselers" as well as the "parasites" President Roosevelt has described should be purged from the Nation's Capital if the Government is to carry out its war effort in a "businesslike manner," he declared.

The Federal Government should take over all private homes and apartment houses here, paying the owners reasonable rentals, he said.

"The war can't be won by talking or making headlines at cocktail parties and banquets," O'Connor continued. "It can't be won by red tape, buck passing and shifting responsibility. But it can be won by fine cooperation, hard-headed thinking, drastic decisions and an all-out effort."

He warned that "Official Washington had better wake up. It had better wake up before it is too late."

Overcrowded living conditions here may cause tragedy "if Washington is bombed or an epidemic occurs," he said.

The climate in Washington he finds deplorable, O'Connor told the House, describing it as "about the most miserable in the country. What's going to happen to this sweltering mass of humanity here this summer when the temperature hits 90 or 100 degrees and the humidity goes up 60 or 70 per cent?"

Civil Service Record Theft Trial Delayed

Trial of five persons on charges of stealing confidential Civil Service Commission records was continued until next Monday by Judge James W. Morris, of the District Court, yesterday to allow physicians to determine the mental competency of one of the defendants.

Judge Morris postponed opening the trial upon request of Harold A. Garvey, attorney for Lawrence L. Haynes, 26, office manager of the Standard Business Service, 427 Tenth Street Northwest, a defendant.

Haynes at first demurred, telling the judge that he did not see the necessity of an examination as he did not propose to take the stand. He withdrew his objection when the judge pointed out that "in the interest of justice' it was necessary to establish his mental competency.

Judge Morris stipulated that examining physicians must report to him Thursday to enable him to determine what course he would need to follow.

The request for continuation came just as the court was to proceed with the impaneling of a jury.

Other defendants are Walter A. C. Camp, president, and Werner J. Orbach, vice president, of the Vita-Health Food Co., 1228 H Street Northwest; Harlan W. Crandall, 29, suspended Civil Service Commission employe, who is charged with having taken the records out of the commission's files, and Katherine Kay, Government stenographer and former secretary at the food company, who is alleged to have directed a staff in copying the records which included many of persons in defense activities.

Prosecutor is Assistant United States Attorney Charles B. Murray. The records, it is charged, were copied in the office of the Standard Business Service. Officers of the food concern are alleged to have been interested in getting copies.

Rally Speakers Demand Repeal Of Poll Taxes

Representatives of education, labor, government and religion addressed a rally to demand repeal of the poll tax last night in the National Press Club Auditorium, with all expressing the theme:

"The retention of the poll tax in the majority of our Southern States has always been a disgrace to our democratic form of government. Right now it is a national calamity."

These were the words of Edwin S. Smith, director, Oil Workers' Organizing Campaign.

Program of the National Committee to Abolish the Poll Tax, which sponsored the meeting, is principally aimed at the passage of legislation to this end which has been presented to the Senate.

Presiding was Edward Keating, editor of the magazine Labor. Other speakers were Prof. Lawrence Lee, University of Virginia; Representative John Coffee (Democrat), of Washington; Dr. Channing Tobias, member, President's Advisory Committee on Selective Service; Paul Scharrenburg, legislative representative, A. F. of L., and the Right Rev. Msgr. John A. Ryan, director, National Catholic Welfare Conference.

3 Boys Under 20 Held in 6 Cab Holdups

Three youths, all under 20, have been arrested by police in connection with six separate holdups of cab drivers here from Sunday to yesterday morning.

Police said the youths—two brothers and a cousin—have admitted the crimes.

They were apprehended yesterday afternoon on a parking lot at Keefer Place and Sixth Street Northwest by two members of the robbery squad. They had returned to pick up a car they had used in several of the holdups.

The two brothers, aged 18 and 19, were armed with revolvers. The cousin is 18 years of age. The six holdups netted the trio $18.25. None of the victims lost more than $6, and one escaped scot free when he jumped from the cab as the robbers pulled out their guns.

Victims of the gunmen, and their losses, were: Marcos G. Pernis, 35, of 1105 D Street Southeast, $2.90; John M. Braxter, Negro, 937 French Street Northwest, 85 cents; David T. Stimson, 1027 Ninth Street Northwest, $3; John Booker T. Cates, 35, Negro, 5029 Sheriff Road Northeast, $6; Willie Brown, Negro, 2009 Second Street Northwest, $3.50, and Walter Slade, Negro, 2033 Alabama Avenue Southeast, who foiled the gunmen by jumping from his cab.

Brown's wife, who was riding with him at the time of the holdup, lost a purse containing $2 to the robbers, and a passenger in Braxter's cab yielded an empty pocketbook.

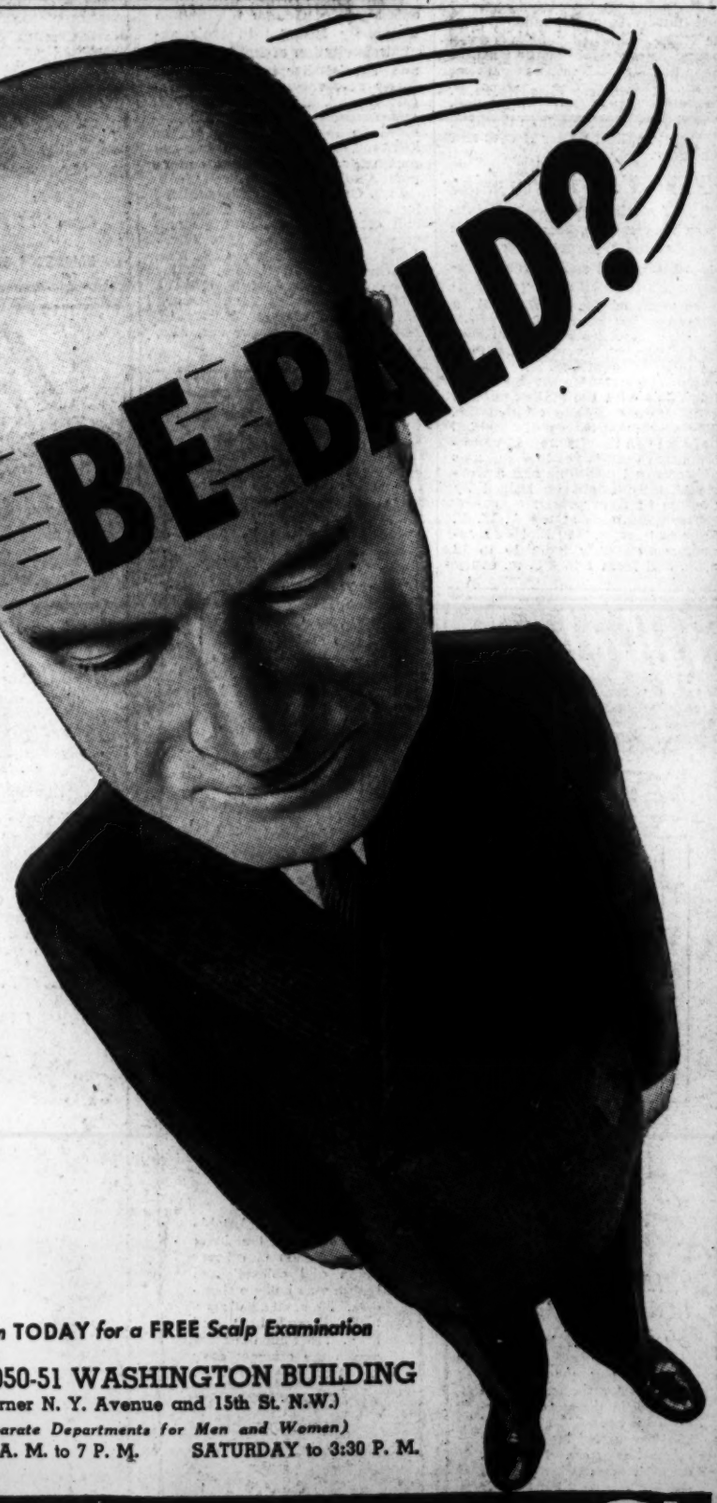
WHY BE BALD?



MANY authorities consider dandruff the major cause of baldness. Dandruff scales seem to clog the tiny follicles from which your hair grows, and may cause your scalp to itch and burn unpleasantly. You owe it to yourself to remove these ugly dandruff scales and give your hair a fair chance. The removal of dandruff scales may not in itself prevent baldness, because the causes of baldness are numerous, but without dandruff your hair will look better and your scalp will feel fresher, cleaner, and more full of life.

Haphazard methods of removing dandruff usually don't help—in fact they may spread the scales over a larger area. Precise, accurate treatment, such as administered by Thomas, is helping 1600 other persons each day and offers you, too, a most reliable, practical solution to your problem.

Consult a Thomas expert today—in private—without charge or obligation. Economic War Board Won't Hire $1 Men

Board of Economic Warfare is one war agency that has no dollar-a-year appointees. It won't have them. The board has many former big businessmen on its staff but Executive Director Milo Perkins makes them sever all outside connections before they are hired. The former businessmen are paid straight Government salaries . . . Farm Credit is dropping the 8th and 23d paydays. Employes will be given paychecks from the 8th to the 15th on Wednesday and after that the 15th and last day of each month will be paydays. However, many more employes are paid on the 8th and 23d than on the 15th and last.

Veterans Administration officials now are confident that the threat of forced decentralization is past. However, it will be the policy of the agency to decentralize voluntarily. Very few new employes will be hired here and when it's necessary to expand the staff the new workers will be taken on in the field. Only vacancies will be filled here. Veterans already has decentralized its work back to 1903 and the process is continuing. It's quite possible that the work of its insurance section will be decentralized as it will grow with the Army. The section is working day and night forces.

The transfer of veterans to Suitland, Md., is reported to have been discussed, but this move also was rejected. Navy was originally scheduled to get the new building there. Then it was assigned to OPA and now Census is stuck with it. Costly repairs must be made before Census moves in and some people would like to see the "white elephant" foisted off on another agency. Now there's a move to keep Census' tabulating section here and move all other operations to Suitland. In that event some other agency with about 1000 employes must be sent to the out-of-the-way building to fill it up.

One Lone Wolf

The No. 1 Federal worker, alphabetically speaking, is named Aabel. Zywaski brings up the rear. Odd names in between are Szuszczewicz, Ache, Allwork, Five Jumping Eagles, Red Boys, Redcherries and Redthunders. The Smiths lead the pack of Federal workers. There are more than 10,000 Smiths, one out of about every 170. Second in numbers are the Johnsons. There are 6600 of them. The Browns with 5700, 4800 Joneses, 4650 Williamses; 4400 Millers; 3750 Davises; 3300 Andersons, 3000 Wilsons, 2700 Taylors; 2700 Moores, and 2550 Thomases follow in order.

More than 250 Loves work for Uncle Sam along with 16 Peaces, 3 Lonesomes, and a single Lone Wolf. There are 6 Smiles and 4 named Happy. On the Federal payroll are 4 Pinks and 2 Reds (don't tell Dies); also 8 Oranges, 650 Blacks, 1425 Greens, and 2400 Whites. There's Always a First Time

Topeka, Kans., April 13 (AP).—Harry H. Woodring, former Secretary of War, appeared in court for the first time today—as a juror drawing $3 per day.

"I've never been in court before, not even as a witness in a case," he said.

They greeted each other with a hearty handshake—so hearty in fact that Seaman Hartwig had to go to Emergency Hospital to have four stitches taken in his index finger.

Army May Have to Release Recreational Workers for Home Needs, Forum Is Told

EARLY CROP OF SUN SPOTS WINS PRIZE—After looking over a select crop of freckled faces last night at the Central Branch of the Boys Club of Washington, Third and C Streets Northwest, the judges presented 9-year-old Billy Eckenbarger, of 132 Eighteenth Street Southeast, with the title for having the most sun spots and a brand new fielder's mit. It was all part of the celebration of National Boys Club Week which will continue through April 18. Youngsters from the three branches of the boys club participated and Billy represented the Eastern Branch Club in the finals

The possibility that the United States may be forced to follow England's example and recall drafted recreational workers to civil life was suggested last night by Miss Sybil Baker, director of District community centers.

The shortage of such specialists, particularly in the District, is that serious, she told a session of the Recreational Institute for Volunteer Leaders at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing annex.

The volunteer students, taking a course to fit them for filling gaps in the District's recreational staff caused by Army inductions and the population increase, heard Miss Baker and representatives of other recreational agencies describe their activities.

Charles Fyfe, managing director of the Boys Club of Washington, led the panel of Miss Baker, Hugo W. Wolter, who spoke on camping and defense recreation activities; Mrs. Xavier Vigeant, on Girl Scouting; Randolph Myers, on the Y. M. C. A.; Mrs. Flaxie Pinckett, settlements, and Ruth Green, Jewish Community Center.

Burleigh Asks 35th St. Home Project Probe

A report that the Alley Dwelling Authority plans to build 70 temporary homes for war workers on the grounds of the Convent of the Visitation, Thirty-fifth and Reservoir Road Northwest, moved members of the Burleigh Citizens Association last night to ask an immediate investigation.

A committee was appointed to look into the matter and will report back at the next meeting. Members stated that they will offer no objection to the construction if it is found to be necessary to the war effort.

However, it was stated, that this was not generally believed to be the case as the area is already crowded. Carl O. Romborg, president, presided at the meeting held last night in the Gordon Junior High School, Thirty-fifth and P Streets Northwest.

An appeal to the members to exercise caution and to cooperate in the blackout tonight was expressed by Vincent Plumpton, deputy air raid warden for the area, and Robert H. Engle, chairman of the civilian defense committee.

S. E. Businessmen's Ass'n

A resolution asking that the unemployment compensation tax for businessmen, now 2.7 per cent, be reduced to one-half of 1 per cent, was adopted by the Southeast Businessmen's Association last night.

They also voted to ask the Treasury Department to seek a solution whereby men working at the Navy Yard can get their checks cashed "soon" after receiving them. These men are paid by check, rather than cash, it was said, to save time.

It was moved to ask the District Commissioners to install a traffic signal light at the intersection of Branch Avenue and Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast because of the large number of accidents which have happened there.

Members voted to ask the Commissioners also to extend for one year the services of Capt. Joseph P. Morgan, of No. 5 Precinct, Metropolitan Police, whose case is now before the retiring board. It was stated that his experience is very valuable at this time in view of the emergency.

Annual election of officers was held and the following men voted into office: Adelbert W. Lee, president; Dolan Donohoe, first vice president; O. W. Rickard, second vice president; George T. McVeinnie, third vice president; Alex J. Berlin, treasurer; Louis F. Frick, secretary, and Joseph G. Herbert, sergent at arms.

The meeting was held in the Donohoe Real Estate Co. offices, 314 Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast.

Park View Citizens

Restoration of bus service on Warder Street between Irving and Quincy Streets Northwest was urged by the Park View Citizens Association, meeting last night in the Park View School, Otis and Warder Streets.

Benjamin Kroger, president, was authorized to name a committee which will appeal to the Public Utilities Commission to restore the service, discontinued when the crosstown system was inaugurated.

The association also authorized the appointment of a committee to conduct a salvage drive in the area.

West End Citizens Ass'n

To enable members of their organization to express their opinions by indorsing persons for public offices in the District government, the West End Citizens Association last night adopted a resolution to amend its by-laws to this effect.

A move also was adopted asking the Commissioners to purchase some vacant property adjoining the Third Precinct Police Station between Twentieth and Twenty-first on K Streets Northwest to be used for parking impounded cars. They have no space for this at present, it was said.

The association asked that no expense be imposed on property owners for the street widening of Twenty-third Street Northwest from Washington Circle to Constitution Avenue.

Hillcrest Citizens

A. W. Heinmiller, assistant superintendent of District schools, last night told the Hillcrest Citizens Association he would recommend to the school board immediate repair of the Stanton Elementary School.

Heinmiller also spoke on the recently announced plans for construction of a temporary four-room frame school building in the Hillcrest section to relieve congestion at schools in the area.

The association authorized its civilian defense committee to go ahead with plans for soliciting contributions for the purchase of equipment to be used in case of an air attack.

Metropolis View

Opposition to proposed shortening of the Twenty-second and Shepherd Street bus line was voted last night by the Metropolis View Citizens Association, meeting at 200 Rhode Island Avenue Northeast.

Walter L. Reich, chairman of the association's public utilities committee, was directed to appear before a Public Utilities Commission hearing Thursday and seek defeat of the plan to discontinue the line between Twenty-second and Shepherd and Fourth and Franklin Streets Northeast and between Sixteenth and I Streets and Eighteenth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest.

The association also heard Mrs. Hume Wrong, wife of the Canadian Minister, read a talk recently made by Eric Knight, author, over the Canadian radio.

Victory Sidelights

Deputy Warden Is the Boss, Raid Chief Murphy Warns

Speaking "very frankly" and airing his views on the subject publicly for the first time, Chief Air Raid Warden Clement Murphy said last night, "There are too many wardens here who do not seem to know there can only be one deputy air raid warden at a time in an area."

Chief Murphy was the principal speaker at a civilian defense meeting held in Central High School as the concluding session for a group of District government employes who have been taking a course in the handling of fire bombs and detection of gas.

"I want to say to you very frankly," the chief said, "that there have been too many groups set up under civilian defense in this city such as those in industrial plants, schools, hospitals, apartment buildings, etc., whose wardens don't realize they are under the direct supervision of the deputy air raid warden in that area."

He said that this would probably be a "revelation" to a great many wardens but that until he sees the order changed by someone of higher authority, "that's the way it will be."

It's fine to organize these groups within the various buildings, he asserted, but he added, "that crew won't be there at 3 a. m. in the morning." He pointed out that when a fire company responds on an alarm the first thing "a smart" fire department officer does is find the man there who knows where all the valves are in the building.

Likewise when an emergency arises from an air raid inside one of these buildings there must be cooperation between the building group and the area wardens. There can be only "one" civilian defense organization in the city, he asserted.

Capt. William L. Clemens also spoke. He told the District government employes he brought them the congratulations of both Commissioner John Russell Young and Col. Lemuel Bolles, OCD director here. E. O. Akers, deputy warden of the District government presided. The class was taught by Joseph A. Danos.

After the showing of several motion pictures dealing with civilian defense topics the group adjourned to the school yard to see a real demonstration of fire bombs given by James L. Bailey, assistant deputy warden under Akers.

Police precinct commanders will attend the ceremonies.

Gibson Addresses Bethesda Auxiliaries

Col. A. Gibson, U. S. A., retired, an investigator with the OCD, last night spoke at "graduation" exercises in the Leland Junior High School, Chevy Chase, for 80 auxiliary firemen of the Bethesda fire department.

Col. Gibson described his recent visit to England and urged civilian defense workers to prepare fully for the possibility of a bombing attack on the Capital.

The civilian defense oath was administered to the new volunteers by Police Justice James C. Christopher, Bethesda district air-raid warden. Other talks were given by Clement Murphy, District chief air-raid warden; John Oden, chief of Montgomery County's fire service; A. A. Brault, Montgomery defense director, and Harry M. Stull of the District defense office.

Kalorama Citizens Suspend Meetings

Because of the pressure of civilian defense activities, members of the Kalorama Citizens Association last night voted to suspend meetings until next October.

Mrs. Joseph Miller, representing the National Symphony Orchestra, spoke at the association's meeting at the Adams School, Nineteenth and California Streets Northwest. Milton Zeiler, president, presided.

Cox Tells Federal Bar How Lawyers Can Help in War

The lawyer can perform a valuable war service by guarding the constitutional liberties of the Nation, Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, commander of the Washington Provisional Brigade and a District lawyer in civil life, told the annual conference of the Federal Bar Association last night in the National Archives Auditorium.

"Liberty is the outgrowth of law," he said. "Neither can exist without the other."

Dr. Hu Shih, Chinese Ambassador to the United States, told the conference how law and lawyers have evolved in China, "despite traditional prejudice and opposition to them."

The conference, of several sessions in previous years, was confined to a one-night meeting because of wartime. Approximately 150 members and guests of the association were present.

Youth Arrested In Tire Theft

Elmore J. Horton, 23 years old, colored, of 921 Eleventh Street Northwest, was held in $3000 bail for grand jury by Judge John P. McMahon in Police Court yesterday on charges of stealing four tires and tubes and three wheels owned by the Universal Credit Co., 261 Constitution Avenue.

Tax Increase Is Unlikely, Says Young

House Group Begins Budget Hearings; Water Rate Boost May Be Necessary

Commissioner J. Russell Young forecast yesterday that the District's real estate tax would not be increased this year "unless unforeseen circumstances arise," as a House Appropriations Subcommittee began hearings on the District's 1943 budget of $56,500,000.

Representative Mahon (Democrat), of Texas, the subcommittee chairman, said the hearings will resume at 10 a. m. today and are expected to continue through next week.

Young, first to testify at yesterday's executive session, told reporters it is "doubtful" how the District will raise its revenues after the 1943 fiscal year, when the local tax coffers will feel the expected decline in gasoline taxes and personal property taxes on automobiles. Then, he inferred, it may be necessary to raise the present real estate tax rate of $1.75 per $100 assessed valuation of property.

Subcommittee members favor an increase in the local water rates, it is understood, in order to expand existing supply and distribution systems affected by the rapidly increasing population. The present rate is $8.75 per year for the first 7500 cubic feet, plus 7 cents for each additional 100 cubic feet used.

The Water Department has spent all but about $50,000 of the two-million-dollar reserve and a means must be found to increase the amount, it was said.

Among the chief items in the revised estimates for the District budget is one of $250,000 for a large dual purpose water main to serve the Capitol Hill and Anacostia areas.

Originally set at 55 million dollars, the District budget, which takes effect next July 1, has been continually revised up until last week due to perpetually changing local conditions induced by the ever growing number of war workers residing here.

Others testifying at yesterday's hearing besides Young were Commissioners Guy Mason and Brig. Gen. Charles W. Kutz, Budget Officer Walter L. Fowler, and Deputy Budget Officer William G. Wilding.

Warner Brothers Unroll Their Best Red Carpet

Notables of Theater Move to Their Studios; C. U. Options Kerr Hit to Broadway; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

GEORGE S. KAUFMAN

Confined to the six whose primary association for years has been with the cinema, the list would be more than ordinarily impressive, but when it reaches out and embraces George Kaufman, Herman Shumlin and Vinton Freedley, it becomes slightly monumental. Here are three of the theater's top showmen. Mr. Kaufman, former Washington newspaper columnist, save the mark—and I don't mean Hellinger!—with his past record of comedies, satires and musicals; Mr. Shumlin, with an almost unblemished record of smash dramatic hits, and Mr. Freedley, with his fine taste in tuneful pastiming, should bring something worth shouting about to any man's shooting gallery.

But the name that must give the man who bears it and the Warners the biggest shock is Norman Krasna. It wasn't so many years ago that the Freres Warner gave the youthful Mr. Krasna the old heave-ho as a considerable package of excess baggage. And now look who's bragging about him!

That long-cherished dream finally has come true. Father Gilbert V. Hartke, director of the Speech and Drama Department of Catholic University, is walking on the thin April air as a result of the sale of Walter Kerr's "Art and Prudence," in which Julie Haydon currently is starring in the University Theater, to Michael Meyerberg for Broadway production. Mr. Kerr, of course, is the young man with a rare gift for the theater who serves as one of Father Hartke's numerous right hands at the university. Mr. Meyerberg, perhaps, may be most quickly identified in the Washington mind as the mainspring of the All-American Youth Orchestra movement, known familiarly to his associates in the arts as "Mike." And another thing. Deeply impressed by the production of "Brighton Rock," Gilbert Miller still is immensely curious about "Art and Prudence" and has avowed his purpose to slip into Washington in time, and especially, to see it. Congratulations all around is what I always say.

Corroborating the Current Newsreels

When "Joan of Paris," costarring Michele Morgan and Paul Henreid, opens as the next screen attraction at RKO-Keith's, it will have as its companion feature that new "March of Time" release, dedicated to "America's New Army." Following close on the heels of the "Army Day" newsreels now on the local screens, the new documentary will give civilians a glimpse of some of the striking changes introduced into this country's fighting forces. The news pictures have rather more than hinted at it, but this new Time business will depict in some detail how all military activity, centralized under Gen. George Catlett Marshall, chief of staff, has been unified in three streamlined commands—Services of Supply, Ground Forces and Air Forces. You ain't seen nuthin' yet!

All that concentrated lung-power you will be hearing at the opening melee out at Mr. Griffith's ballyard this afternoon probably will be emanating from the pent-up enthusiasm of Sidney B. Lust's annual, inaugural-day baseball party. Among his guests will be Representative Lansdale Sasscer, Frank Smith, member of Maryland's Democratic State central committee; Judge Charles Marbury, of Upper Marlboro; William Carson, chairman of the Montgomery County board of commissioners; Commander Spitzel, U. S. N., and a considerable group of Washington and Maryland newspaper guys. Mr. Lust always includes a sufficient number of local drama desks to bring his party down to a normal intellectual grandstand average.

Having peddled his Lincoln apples and nut-filled, chocolate Easter eggs with unfailing punctuality, Managing Director Harry P. Somerville, of the Willard, the premier showman among the Capital's bonifaces, yesterday handed out invitations to a late-afternoon preview of the new Willard Room, the last word in lounging in the lap of luxury to do your lapping. With a new entrance chiseled through the Fourteenth Street side of the Willard bastion, no cover and no minimum, this genteel groggery should become THE spot practically overnight. There was even room for us to ride in on our sprinkling cart, the place is that capacious! The seltzer water was delicious.

Now There Are Two!

Hollywood, Calif., April 13.—With one roaring success, "The Maltese Falcon," behind him, another starring Bette Davis — "In This Our Life" — soon to be released, and "Across the Pacific" in production, John Huston is the directorial "red hat" of the Hollywood studios; yet to see him ambling about the set, you'd think this lanky, unassuming son of Walter was just a visitor gawking at the sights. John dates the start of his career with the day the little town of Nevada, Mo., burned down. John had been appointed fire chief, and was half way through a correspondence course in fire-fighting when the holocaust left him out of a job—with the unanimous consent of the citizenry. He did a stretch in the Mexican army, studied art for a while in Paris, became a professional boxer, meanwhile authoring a play which won him a writing job in Hollywood. Sounds like a pretty crazy preparation for a directing career, but there was nothing crazy about Warners when they grabbed him.

MARLENE DIETRICH

That feud the newsboys tried to cook up between Marlene Dietrich and Margaret Lindsay while they were working together in "The Spellers" was an awful fizzle. Every time they'd ask Maggie a leading question, she'd r'ar back and sound off about what a good egg Marlene is.

Ann Baxter, driving onto the Twentieth Century lot the other day, caught a glimpse of Jean Gabin, and was so busy trying to yoo-hoo to him that she smacked right into the car ahead of her—which happened to contain her boss, Darryl Zanuck!

Bob Taylor was the fall guy at the Palm Springs Desert Circus. In a raffle he won an entire car—fenders, doors, rims, wheels and everything—dumped into his lap piece by piece.

Johnny Hill, who came out to serve as technical advisor on "Eagle Squadron" while recuperating from a crack-up in England, has been promoted and will return to service.

Winston Churchill's daughter, Sarah, makes her American screen debut in "Three Smart Brides," an Associated British production released by Monogram . . . Van Heflin has seven leading women for "Tulip Time."

Those Andrews sisters have been signed for four more pictures, which will keep them here until the end of summer.

New York, April 13.

The President is expected soon to establish, by executive order, a board to supervise the insurance companies. Jim Beha, who was New York State's superintendent of insurance during the reign of Govs. Smith and Roosevelt, is being mentioned for the job . . . Tyrone Power, who enlisted in the Navy, will be commissioned as a lieutenant, junior grade . . . Donald Nelson's new financial consultant at the War Production Board is Mark Brown, of the Harris Trust Co., of Chicago . . . Harold Rome, who wrote the hit song, "Mr. Franklin D. Roosevelt Jones," has written a new adaptation, pursuing the same theme. The new song is about quadruplets—and the title is "Franklin D., Winston C., Joseph V., Vic-tor-y Jones."

EDDIE CANTOR

At the Newspaper Guild's Page One Ball Eddie Cantor was one of those who received an award. His citation explained that it was issued to him because of his 25 years' work both as an entertainer and humanitarian . . . Cantor made a speech of acknowledgment. "Frankly, I'm sure there must be someone else who deserves this award, instead of me," said Eddie, "but it's hard to find who that other person is—so I'll accept it."

Although John Steinbeck's "The Moon Is Down" received disappointing reviews, Producer Oscar Serlin is asking $300,000 for the movie rights—and will get it. The show is playing to standees . . . Steinbeck feels that he was justified in refusing to have his Nazi characters portrayed as inhuman "Huns." The movie version, when it's made, will alter that . . . Gov. Lehman's recent luncheon with the President concerned the coming gubernatorial campaign . . . The former residence of Vice President Curtis at 890 Park Avenue is being refurbished. The new establishment there will be the headquarters of a club called "Club Car"

Butch Tower, the Broadway gambler after whom Damon Runyon has patterned his film characters, will wager on football games, horse races, track meets, polo—in fact, on anything. It was Tower who once told Runyon about listening to the broadcast of a football game on which he had wagered heavily—and of his minding a baby while listening to that broadcast. From that incident Runyon evolved his newest movie, "Butch Minds the Baby" . . . Butch still listens to the radio. And of late he has been hearing frequent assertions by an announcer that "It's Luckies, two to one" . . . "If he lays 2 to 1," says Butch, "I'll lay 8 to 5, and take 11."

The Office of Emergency Management has leased several floors in the Empire State Building. A large portion of the Washington office will be moved here . . . Lou Alter, who wrote "Manhattan Serenade," now is at work at his Hotel Mayflower apartment writing a new cantata for voice and orchestra, based on Theodore Dreiser's poem, "My City" . . . When Irving Berlin appears in the 1942 version of his "Yip, Yip, Yaphank" for the United States Army he'll wear an Army uniform of regulation issue. Berlin can't find the uniform he wore in 1918, when he appeared in the original Army musical.

Lael Laird, of the London staff of Time Magazine, recently went to Cambridge to interview King Peter of Yugoslavia. After they had lunched Peter announced that he was going to initiate her into the art of drinking Turkish coffee . . . Mrs. Laird sipped the coffee, grimaced, and asked: "Is this the idea?" . . . King Peter shook his head. "As in so many other things in this world," he explained, "in sipping Turkish coffee the idea is to make as much noise as possible."

Not Even Poison Ivy Halts Riot That Is 'Hellzapoppin'"

By Richard L. Coe

"HELLZAPOPPIN'." Olsen and Johnson present the revue in two acts, featuring Billy House, Eddie Garr, Grace and Nikko, Ben Dova, the Sterner Sisters, the Read Sisters, the Oxford Boys and many others. Book by Olsen and Johnson, music and lyrics by Sammy Fain and Charles Tobias. Dances by Gae Foster. Production staged by Edward Duryea Dowling. Reviewed Monday evening. At the National Theater.

Even poison ivy can't stop "Hellzapoppin'."

Though peppered here and there with salve and bandages himself, featured comic Bobby Jarvis pinch-hit last night for ailing star comic Billy House as the Olsen and Johnson madhouse antic opened its second two-week run of the season at the National. The pesky green leaf didn't keep peppery Jarvis from holding down his end and, with Co-star Eddie Garr, the riot went on as scheduled.

For, as every soldier knows—and there were plenty of them in the house last night—"Hellzapoppin'" is a loud, bang-bang riot that makes no sense whatever and manages to be uproariously funny. It's about as delicate as a 40-ton tank. Its inmates, beg pardon, participants, work like 77 furies armed with props that include washbasins, mops, ladders, bananas, beer bottles, bags of flour, eggs, cigars and what have you. Yes, it's wonderful stuff having the real "Hellzapoppin'" to laugh with after that shadowy effort Olsen and Johnson made to put the thing on celluloid.

Boops-A-Daisy!

Too much already has been said about the things that go on in "Hellzapoppin'," so we'll leave it to you to find out about "Boops-a-Daisy," "Oscar," "Mrs. Jones" and "Napoleon." They're all there as they have been since 1938, even the newsreel that starts things off with its jabs at this big-wig and that.

It's in the audience participation stunts that "Hellzapoppin" failed to come to life on the screen (pay the reviewer $32 for that remark, Mr. Willoughby!) and it's with them that the stage original triumphs. The gags may be corny as a midsummer field, but they're there in such profusion that they get laughs they haven't gotten since cavemen started drawing funny pictures on the walls of their neolithic caves.

Take, for instance, Eddie Garr's drunk. That amiable dipsomaniac has been around more or less continuously ever since Eddie first brought him out of his bag of tricks. But he's still the most friendly drunk there ever was.

Rotund Billy House was missed last night. There's no doubt of that, but he's hoping to be in shape for tonight's performance, at least well enough to do some of his stints from a wheel chair, which he did about two years ago when the same painful ailment laid him low.

Oxford Boys Score

Even though he's been a member of the cast for a year or so, Jarvis has been so busy with his own particular chores that he hasn't had time to watch all the roly-poly House tricks, so the wonder is that he remembered all the multitudinous props and gags he inherited for the evening. Bobby's about one-fifth the size of House, a slightish fellow who reminds you of Jack Haley. He's played stellar roles in the Schwab and Mandel musicals, "The New Moon," "Follow Thru" and "The Cat and the Fiddle." Washington also saw him in "Roberta." His style doesn't contrast so sharply with Garr as does the effusive House, but he's a knowing, able comedian and most of last night's audience probably didn't realize he was pinch-hitting. His own current touch of that old ivy is, he hopes, as passing as Billy House's more painful illness.

The supporting company is largely the same as the National saw in early January. Best act in the vaudeville-like proceedings is the novel music of the Oxford Boys, whose tunes all but stop the show. Grace and Nikko present their comedy dances and the Read Sisters sing most of the songs. They benefit immensely with a mike. The bendable Ben Dova is on hand, the Sterner Sisters dance and Buddy Ferrard sits it out with his newspaper.

So here it is, folks, "Hellzapoppin'," in its original guise, a boisterous excursion into the lowbrow, lusty and merry, hearty and slaphappy. Someday a little child will climb up on your knee and say "Grandpappy, tell me about 'Hellzapoppin'."

Actor's Hobby Is Paying Business

What started as a hobby turned out to be a successful business enterprise for Leo Gorcey.

The young actor built a printing press in the garage of his Hollywood home. In his spare time, he printed cards, stationery, etc., for his friends.

Recently Gorcey gifted the soldiers stationed in his neighborhood with monogrammed stationery. The demand grew so rapidly that he called in a helper.

Now, there is a printing shop in North Hollywood called the Gorcey-Howell Print Shop, where Leo spends his evenings after completing a day's work on M-G-M's new "Maisie" picture.

THE TIME: 25 YEARS AGO

It was also a war year when the Nats staged their opening game of 25 years ago. World War I was 14 days old on April 20, 1917, a crisp sunlit afternoon with Washington playing the Athletics. The U. S. Army air force consisted of four combat planes. The Nation was not concerned with blackouts and air raids, but with U-boats operating near Atlantic shores, and German spies. The most-circulated war poster was a brief, stern command to "Keep Your Mouth Shut."

POVICH

Vice President Thomas Marshall apparently believed that the Nation needed baseball as well as a good 5-cent cigar. He threw out the first ball at Griffith Stadium, then known merely as American League Park with its seating capacity of 20,000. A future President also assisted with the opening-game ceremonies. Assistant Secretary of the Navy Franklin D. Roosevelt led the march to the center-field flag pole, where he took off his kid gloves and hoisted Old Glory to the heights.

You could buy a flashy looking Saxon, complete with demountable rims, for $815, f. o. b. Detroit. Heavyweight Champion Jess Willard (himself in the flesh) was advertised to appear with Buffalo Bill's Wild West Circus at Fifteenth and H Streets Northeast that week. Galli-Curci was singing at the National at $3 tops. Belmont Park's grandstand burned to the ground within a week after the track had been offered to the Army as a drill field, and German plotters were suspected.

The French had launched an offensive in the Argonne, but there were disquieting reports that the Russians had asked Germany for an armistice. Teddy Roosevelt was rebuffed by Secretary of War Newton D. Baker in his offer to lead a volunteer division to France, and before a Senate committee, Jeannette Rankin and Carrie Chapman Catt were emphatically demanding votes for women. Diamond Jim Brady had died during the week at Atlantic City within sight of the boardwalk where he liked to take his preening strolls.

Steve Early Enlists Early

German horror stories were a daily feature of the newspapers. The latest to reach print was the one about the Germans rendering the bodies of dead soldiers to obtain needed fats and fertilizer. The island of Guam was in the news, but happily. A German gunboat had been interned there at the war's outbreak. The first Washington newspaperman to join the Army after the declaration of war was Stephen T. Early, an Associated Press reporter, whose address for the last ten years has been the White House.

A New York recruiting incident made all the front pages. When a woman protested to a recruiting officer that "he is my only son," the answer she got was, "Yes and your only son has only one country." Airplanes were still called flying machines and there was no rubber shortage because most rubber production went into raincoats. The English Embassy broke out American and French flags and Italy was on our side.

At Griffith Stadium posters in conspicuous places showed the rules for enlistment and a color guard of soldiers marched with all flags of the Allies. Hitler was a corporal in the German army and Mussolini was being hospitalized with a bullet wound in his posterior which indicated he wasn't advancing at the time the shot was fired. Congress was up to its neck in tax legislation and the compound word "all-out" had not been heard as yet.

The fashion was to call the Germans Huns, and a best-seller was Guy Empey's "Over the Top" with its lurid passages of no-man's land and trench warfare. American diplomats were handed their passports by Austria, Bulgaria and Turkey. No city had a parking problem, but the new soldiers were having a horrible time learning how to wrap their puttees. The few Army fliers were beginning to support swagger sticks and looking very dudish. The popular conception was that an aviator couldn't weigh more than 110 pounds.

Cicotte Pitched a No-Hitter

Clark Griffith was managing the Washington ball club. The White Sox were leading in the first week of the American League pennant race with six wins and one defeat. Eddie Cicotte had pitched a no-hit, no-run game against the Browns. Walter Johnson had pitched two games before Washington opened the home season. He had held the Athletics to three hits and won a 3-0 shutout from Bullet Joe Bush, and he had given the Yankees two hits but was licked on errors, 2 to 1. A pretty good pitcher named Babe Ruth had won his first start for the Red Sox.

Twenty-five years ago, Washington lost the opening game. A Philadelphia catcher named Wally Schang won the game with a single in the thirteenth inning. Baseball moved through its 154-game schedule without interruption despite the war fever. Not until the fag-end of the 1918 season did baseball succumb to the war, and then it was a victim of the famous order "Work or Fight!"

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, April 13.—Baseball was made by the Civil War, spread its wings during the Spanish-American War, proved how close it is to the Nation's consciousness during the first World War, and tomorrow it embarks upon another war period with a presidential blessing upon its head.

Overlooking for the moment the fact that it would have been a great and smart gesture on the part of the big leagues to give the opening day's receipts to the Army and Navy relief funds, we think the public will welcome the sport with loving arms. The loss of such stars as Feller, Greenberg, Travis and the others won't matter greatly in general scheme of things. It looks like a good season with a lot of interesting and always honest competition. Barring bombings or serious transportation bottlenecks, there is no reason to believe that the season will be shortened as it was in 1918.

President Roosevelt covers a two war span, as far as baseball is concerned. A sick, tired Woodrow Wilson turned over to Roosevelt the job of opening the 1917 and 1918 seasons in Washington, Roosevelt was Assistant Secretary of the Navy, and a handsome, active figure as he marched briskly to the center field flagpole with Clark Griffith, the manager of those war-time Senators. If it is at all possible, Roosevelt will be back in Griffith Stadium tomorrow to make it 10 times in a row that he has launched the major league end of the game he has termed essential to civilian morale.

Cartwright Kept Baseball Rolling

Abner Doubleday is popularly supposed to have invented baseball. He didn't, of course, but it is a harmless fable of the sort Parson Weems inveigled into folklore. The man who did more than any other individual to get the game rolling was Alexander Cartwright, who formed the first regularly uniformed team in 1845 and who made up most of the rules, determined shape of the field and distances between bases, etc etc.

But it was the Civil War that gave the sport the impetus that made it national in scope. Union troops from the New York area took bats and balls with them when they marched off to the war and played the game at camps. Union prisons, or concentration camps, installed the game as a kind of pacifier and healthful exercise for captured Confederate soldiers. These Confederates, when exchanged for prisoners held by the South, took the game below the Mason-Dixon line. After Appomattox, home coming soldiers carried the game to villages and cities and outposts strung all across the land.

It was during the fresh-money days of the Spanish-American War that a group of National League players first began plotting the formation of a second major league. They were underpaid, underprivileged and rebellious. There had been a couple of attempts before that, but nothing as stubborn or as well-founded as the plan of Ban Johnson, Charles Comiskey, Griffith and their patient angel, Charles Somers. Thus was born the American League, partly by bribery of National League stars, partly by a general players' revulsion against the poor pay and working conditions of the lone big league. It was the best thing that ever happened to baseball, though for a time it was severely boycotted.

Clark Griffith Did Game Most Good

The "fight or work" plan of 1918 presented baseball with the grave problem of proving its right to exist. A good chunk of the public believed that like every other trade, baseball should either give up its able-bodied men to the armed services or put them to work in shipyards and munitions factories. There was no thought of Wilson's coming out and saying that baseball should continue because it amused and relaxed the war workers. Nor did Wilson suggest a way in which baseball could make a little more money, as did Roosevelt when he recommended more night games. Instead, the Secretary of War, Newton D. Baker, and Gen. Peyton C. March, Chief of Staff of the Army, threatened to close down baseball on July 4, 1918. Griffith's valiant plea is now history. The War Department permitted baseball to operate until Labor Day of 1918, a month short of the Armistice, and thus gave the game an aura of permanence and importance that will last it through all time.

New York, April 13.—Baseball will get its first real test of the public's attitude toward the sport in wartime tomorrow when the major leagues open their 1942 campaign.

All indications have been that the fans are favorable to the national pastime in war as in peace and if the weather is suitable a turnout of 200,000 is expected in the eight cities where in augurals are scheduled.

Suitable ceremonies—flag raisings and first-ball pitching—are planned for all the games in both the National and American Leagues, although it is not known whether President Roosevelt will officiate at Washington's debut, or call for a pinch pitcher.

50,000 to See Dodgers, Giants

In any event the two contests sure to receive the greatest public attention are the World Champion New York Yankees' bow against the Nats in the Nation's Capital, and the clash here of the Brooklyn Dodgers, defending National League champions, and their familiar feudists, the New York Giants.

Polo Grounds is ready for a 50,000 crowd, perhaps larger, for what seemed certain to be the biggest throng of the day.

There is some question whether the Dodgers can repeat their spectacular conquest of last year, and the hard-bitten Brooklyn fans naturally want to see for themselves.

On the other side of the picture the Giants are making their first start under the management of Mel Ott, the veteran rightfielder who has been called "Master Melvin" ever since John McGraw brought him up from New Orleans at the age of 16, 17 years ago.

Reds' Park Sold Out

Carl Hubbell, "Old Longpants," who has been pitching the Giants' openers for years, will officiate again with the veteran Curt Davis opposing him.

There also will be a sentimental touch about the Yankees' first pitcher. Manager Joe McCarthy announced a surprise choice today, naming Charley (Red) Ruffing to face Sid Hudson of the Senators in the important tussle at Washington.

Ruffing reported late and has not looked too good in his exhibition tests, but he is the dean of the World Champions' mound staff and has a great competitive heart.

Crosley Field at Cincinnati has long been sold out for the fracas between the Reds and Pittsburgh Pirates and temporary seats have been added to accommodate a crowd of 39,000. Bucky Walters will be on the mound for the Reds, facing big

Pete Reiser Reclassified; Is Now in 1-A

By the Associated Press

New York, April 13.—Ending the confusion that has existed about the draft status of Pete Reiser, the Brooklyn Dodgers' great young center fielder and National League batting champion, New York Selective Service officials said today he had been reclassified 1-A, but that his parents had appealed.

In the original draft the 23-year-old baseball star had been classified 3-A because he contributed to the support of his parents and four sisters and a brother who live in a home he is buying for them in St. Louis.

Reiser, a bridegroom of two weeks, said Saturday that he still was in 3-A, but Frank T. Kelliher, chairman of Draft Board No. 133, where Reiser registered, said today that the ball player had been transferred to a 1-A classification in February.

"To give Reiser the benefit of the doubt," Keliher added, "the postal card notification may have been mailed after he went to Cuba to train with the Dodgers and it might never have caught up with him. But he subsequently took and passed a physical examination and two or three weeks ago his parents filed an appeal."

Alsab Beaten by a Neck As Colchis Wins Trial

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Havre de Grace, Md., April 13.—"They won't beat him again this year"—that was the cry of a colored clocker here this afternoon as Alsab turned on a burst of stretch speed that lacked a neck-margin of giving him a victory in the first running of the $2500 added Chesapeake Trial. The winner was R. Sterling Clark's Colchis, a 3-year-old which battled Alsab to a dead heat here last autumn. Third money went to Mrs. Walter M. Jeffords' Seamanlike with Marksman, Bright Willie and Baby Dumpling finishing in the order named.

Jockey Al Schmidl probably rode to instructions on Mrs. Al Sabath's 1941 juvenile champion. He appeared content to allow the colt, carrying 126 pounds, to run on his own courage in the early stages. In the stretch, however, he began to hand ride Alsab and the colt responded with a move that seemed to have everything needed by a Kentucky Derby or Preakness candidate. At the end of the six furlongs, Alsab virtually was flying and Schmidl carried him on to work out to a mile.

Colchis Pays $7.30

With Bright Willie installed a lukewarm favorite, Colchis, making his debut of the year, paid $7.30. He was clocked in time of 1:12 2-5, a fifth of a second better than the time registered by John L. Sullivan's Transfigure in winning the $5,000 added Harford Handicap, the next race on the program.

The crowd of 12,000 saw Bright Willie and Baby Dumpling battle along for the pace. Seamanlike was close up as was Marksman. Schmidl allowed Alsab to lob along, saving ground and he was five lengths off the next-to-last horse, Colchis, leaving the backstretch.

Approaching the stretch, Colchis moved up on the outside and the leaders began to wilt. In midstretch, Colchis bumped into Seamanlike and that one swerved in and his rider was forced to take up. Colchis went on to open a lead and then Alsab, in the center of the track, put on his bold but late move.

Eagle 3 and Torrid Rally Takes Play-Off; $1500 First Prize To Lord Byron

By Romney Wheeler

Associated Press Sports Writer

Augusta, Ga., April 13.—Anything can happen on Monday, the 13th of April, and it did today on the Augusta National golf course as tall Byron Nelson, of Toledo, beat Ben Hogan for the Masters' Golf championship in a bitter 18-hole playoff.

A gallery of 1500 popeyed fans saw Nelson win the hard way, with left-handed golf, an eagle-three on a hidden hole, and a tremendous rally in which he shot 6 under par in eight holes, starting on the sixth.

It was that eagle on the 510-yard, uphill eighth which broke little Ben and gave Lord Byron his margin. Coming up one stroke back of Hogan, after whittling two from Hogan's lead on the short sixth, he whipped a perfect spoon shot uphill and to rest a bare 6 feet beyond the flag. He was down with one putt while Hogan chipped to the green over a mound and took two putts over regulation five

Stayed In Lead

They turned the first nine with Nelson one stroke ahead, and the man whose colleagues picked him to win the Masters' never lost the initiative. He ran the margin to three strokes on the back nine, saw it cut to two and finally to one stroke as Hogan fought gamely all the way to the last pin.

They finished just as the touring golf pros predicted they would in a ballot two weeks ago—Nelson first and Hogan second—for the second consecutive year. In 1940 the pros picked Craig Wood to win and he did, beating Nelson over 72 holes by three strokes. Nelson now joins

Lewis Worsham Double Victor in Kenwood Pro-Amateur

J. S. Brookes, Bergelin Win In Pro-Am

Burning Tree Pro Takes Sweepstakes With 1-Over Par 72; Bass, Partners Next

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Burning Tree pro Lewis Worsham, jr., received a maximum of help from two of his partners, John S. Brookes and John E. Bergelin, and swept honors in the first Pro-amateur tournament of the season yesterday at Kenwood Country Club. Worsham also won the pro sweepstakes.

The young professional dropped two birdie putts on the last four holes, both comparatively short ones, to finish with a 1 over par 72 and with both Brookes and Bergelin posted best ball 65s. Twelve pros and a total of 33 pro-am teams competed, although only eight pros entered the sweepstakes.

Wind and Rough Boost Scores

The treacherous wind and the trifle rough early-season surfaces on Kenwood's well conditioned putting greens boosted the scores and not a single player match par figures of 71. Johnny Bass, the Clifton Park pro from Baltimore, was two over par going out but matched regulation figures coming back for a 73, sceond best score of the day and good for runner-up money in the sweepstakes.

Bass and two of his partners from the Baltimore public links course finishd in a deadlock for second prize in the pro-am play. The lanky former sectional P. G. A. champ paired with W. M. Moran and Charles Pfiel for best ball 67s. That completed the prize list.

Brookes, a senior member of the exclusive Burning Tree club and Washington attorney, started with five straight fours and gave his pro partner ample assistance at the start. Bergelin, a former host club champion, had an individual round of 75. Brookes used five handicap strokes to advantage and Bergelin two.

Scoring Error Discovered

Bergelin did not discover an error on the scorecard until nearly an hour after they had completed the round but he was allowed to rectify the mistake as the tournament was on an informal basis. He and Worsham had originally reported a 66.

Al Jamison was in a position to contend for the first money as he played eight holes in par golf but a double-bogey five on the par three tenth hurt Jamy's chances. Wiffy Cox and Jamison both posted 74's to miss the cash circle by a shot. Worsham and Earle Skinker and Al Houghton and Forrest Thompson were a stroke too high in the pro-amateur best ball scores.

Worsham also ran into a two-over part five on the tenth, but Lew birdied the eighth and came back with his two late birdies to win out. He pulled a muscle in his back practicing in the morning, but outside of an occasional pain it had little affect on his golf.

Ruth Leaves Bed; Selects Yanks, Pirates

By the Associated Press

Hollywood, April 13.—Babe Ruth got out of his hospital bed long enough today to receive a few visitors and voice two predictions about the 1942 major league baseball campaign—one of them a surprise.

The big bambino, recuperating after a pneumonia attack, said he figured his old team, the New York Yankees, would again capture the American League pennant.

And the surprise?

"I kinda like Pittsburgh in the National League. Looks to me like Frankie Frisch's Pirates might upset the dope this year," said Ruth.

"Sure," he continued, "I know most of the boys are picking 'em to finish fourth or even fifth, but I think Pittsburgh is going to be a big surprise."

The mighty Babe, taken sick last week during the production of a motion picture based on the life of his former teammate, the late Lou Gehrig, said he hoped to leave the hospital in midweek, and possibly return to his home in New York in another week or so.

He'll miss the major league opening tomorrow for the second successive year. He was on a fishing jaunt last season when the big show got under way, absent for the first time since he went into baseball "too long ago to remember."

"Yea," he went on, "I hate to miss the opener in New York, but I'll pick 'em up later when I get back home."

Ruth looked in fair condition. His color was good. His hand was a little shaky as he toyed with a large, curved stem pipe, but that was to be expected after five full days in hospital bed.

Grand Rapids Loses Coach Ford to Navy

Grand Rapids, Mich., April 13 (AP).—The University of Grand Rapids today lost its second football coach to the Navy within a month with the announcement that Gerald R. (Jerry) Ford had been commissioned an ensign in the Naval Air Cadets and ordered to report to Annapolis.

Ford, who starred as a University of Michigan center and was assistant line coach at Yale for six years, succeeded George (Potsy) Clark as coach here March 23 when Clark was commissioned a lieutenant commander in the Naval Reserve.

Cunningham Becomes Aide Of Wiffy Cox

Walter Cunningham, who served as Burning Tree Club professional for several years prior to 1938, has been made an assistant in the Congressional Club golf shop, Wiffy Cox announced yesterday.

Cunningham assumed his new duties yesterday. Reds worked at Manor Club last year as caddymaster.

Chevy Chase Pro Bob Barnett is en route from his winter job in Miami to Chevy Chase. At least, he was in the gallery at the Augusta Masters Tournament yesterday, plainly outlined in a Associated Press Wirephoto picture. . . . Raymond Willett, the Woodmont assistant pro until inducted last Monday, is now in Fort Knox. . . . Ben Hogan and Byron Nelson, along with another big-name pro, are slated for a May match in Baltimore for a sizable purse to be posted by the Country Club of Maryland. All proceeds will go to charity.

Eastern High Scores, 9 to 5, Over Bethesda

All the baseball talent at its disposal was trotted out by Eastern High yesterday for the first time this season, the net result being a 9-5 decision over Bethesda-Chevy Chase in an error-splotched game on the winners' lot.

Two full teams and three pitchers saw action for Eastern, preparing for its big interhigh rivalry with Anacostia Friday. They reached a trio of Bethesda hurlers for 11 hits, but their margin was solely the outcome of a seven-run splurge in the second inning.

Eleven batters went up in that frame, managed for only three hits, but benefited appreciably from two bases on balls, a hit batsman, five errors, a wild pitch and a passed ball.

Garland Curles, brother of last year's Tide star, tossed three innings of hitless ball to start matters. Wible got out with a three-hit performance in the next three stanzas and then Curt Harris took over. He did all right until the ninth, when, hurt by two errors behind him, he was victim of the Barons' biggest spree. With two out and one run in, Stephens reached first on Bond's misplay and was chased the rest of the way home by Porter's triple, the only extra-base blow of the game.

Kuster, Latimer and Shoemaker shared the Baron pitching assignment. Latimer's four-inning work was by far the most impressive, what with four strikeouts going to his credit. He gave up six scratch singles, while Kuster allowed five.

St. Albans Beaten, 9 to 6, By Coolidge

A five-run splurge in the second inning gave Coolidge High nine its second triumph of the season yesterday, a 9-6 victory over St. Albans in a 22-hit slugfest.

Both teams collected 11 hits as the Colts got their bats in shape for tomorrow's interhigh opener with Roosevelt. And seven of the safeties were for extra bases into the far reaches of the Saints' outfield.

Hanson started on the mound for the victors, but after giving up ten hits and all the Saints' runs in seven innings, was relieved by Shankman. The latter clamped down with a one-hit effort in the last two innings.

Despite Coolidge's spree in the second, Phillips lasted five and a third frames for the losers, also giving ten hits. Trimble's relief work limited the winners to one safety until the end.

Georgetown Golfers Host to Catholic U.

Georgetown University golfers will meet a virtually unknown opponent today in Catholic University over the Hoyas' home Bannockburn layout. It will be the third match for the hosts, who dropped earlier decisions to Duke and North Carolina, while C. U. will be opening its season.

Virginia Nine Beaten, 6 to 4

Charlottesville, Va., April 13.—Everett Schneider's three-bagger in the eighth inning, with two runners on the bags, enabled Washington and Lee to defeat Virginia here today, 6-4, in a Founders' Day game. To complete his hero role, Schneider succeeded Jay Cook on the mound after the seventh and blanked the Cavaliers in the last two frames.

Despite his wildness, Scarfuro, who started on the mound for Virginia, yielded only 6 hits, but was replaced by Cave after two were out in the eighth. After Cavalier had walked, Cavanna secured a single and Johnson doubled, scoring Cavalier. Schneider then drove Cave's first pitch to the running track in the deep leftfield. The two runs scored proved the margin of victory. In the final inning, Cave retired the side on strikes.

Hydrographic Pinmen Earn Title Roll-Off

The Hydrographic boys in the Navy Department League at Arcadia broke a tie with Aeronautics for the second half and won three games from opponents while the latter was dropping the odd tilt. The wins of last night now pits Hydrographic against Navigation, first half victors, for the league flag. The roll-off is carded for next Monday night during the annual singles tournament. Last night Johnny Fogleman, Navigation, had 142-367 to lead with Commandants and Navigation sharing team highs after respective totals of 600 and 1692.

PENN RECREATION

A 138 by Vince Jordan, Land Bank, and a 378 set by Jack Fowler, Mortgage Corporation, were the best efforts in the Farm Credit League with the former's team winning three from Examination and also posting high team set of 1673. Purchase won three from F & F and G & D No. 1 took a pair from Mortgage Corporation, the leaders.

BROOKLAND

The Diamond and Premier cabbies battled it out with the former emerging victorious by the score of 1767 to 1694 in the team match when Wes Hopkins paced the win with a 149 game and despite Waldorf Reid's 132-377. The twosome of Corcoran-Reid totaled 784 in the doubles to but 755 for the Diamond duo of George Simons and Wes Hopkins, while Johnny Ressa took the measure of Southpaw Elmer Wesley in the singles.

Mid-Atlantic P. G. A. Plans 3 Tourneys

Middle Atlantic P.G.A. members made provisions for three major tournaments but left dates open and also left the course unnamed for the National P.G.A. Qualifying rounds to be held over a District course May 4 at a meeting last night at Kenwood.

The sectional P.G.A. championship, Washington and Baltimore Opens were placed on the pro's card but Gene Larkin, Woodmont pro and secretary who attended the meeting, said the host courses would have a say as to the dates. The Washington Open will again be at Indian Spring and the Baltimore Open at Woodholme.

The pros will work with the Maryland State Golf Association on the already placed ten pro-amateur tournaments, five here and five in Baltimore. Wiffy Cox, Al Houghton and John Flattery will work with the State body on the financial cut.

No provisions were made for any tournaments in Virginia as in the last few years the Old Dominion pros have been lax in cooperation with the District and Maryland members. The next meeting will be held at the C. C. of Maryland, June 1, and Ed Dudley, national president, will be invited to attend.

The pros discussed the ball and club situation and may put into effect an agreement where an old ball must be turned in on a new one, such as toothpaste tubes at present.

A. U. Nine Bows to Washington College, 4-3, on Lapse in 7th

3d Straight Eagle Loss Sustained

Grove, Jr., Tosses Brief Stint; 3-Run Rally of Invader Result of Errors

By Jack Munhall

American University's infield sprung a series of leaks in the seventh inning yesterday and through the cracks seeped three enemy runs, enough to give Washington College a successful 1942 inaugural and the Eagles their third straight defeat. The score was 4-3 and A. U. was the scene of a pretty good ball game.

Lefty Bob Grove, jr., right-handed throwing son of the former great A's and Red Sox southpaw, opened on the mound for the visiting Sho'men, but retired for a pinch hitter in the fourth, so that no true line could be obtained on him. In his three innings the slim, bespectacled freshman yielded three singles—one in each frame—and two unearned runs. He fanned three, walked two.

Grove gave way to two more right-handers, first Magire and then Lentz, who evenly divided the last six innings between them, Lentz getting credit for the triumph. Each was pried loose from three of the nine hits by to A. U.

Herman Byer, tall, right-handed transferee from Georgetown University, was the Eagles starting hurler and he pitched tolerably well during his 6 1-3 inning stay. When he left the game with one out in the seventh for Freshman Rube McNab, Byer had surrendered nine hits and three runs. He left runners on first and third and the latter scored later on an error with what proved to be the winning tally.

Washington College, held to one run during the first six innings—Stevens' misjudged drive to center for a home run in the fifth—took advantage of three A. U. errors for its winning uprising in the seventh.

Singles by Catcher Frank Cline and Benjamin, plus errors by Bob Lanzillotti, second base, Bunny Rabbitt, shortstop, and Mac Potter, first base, accounted for the three runs. English carried over the decisive marker when Potter dropped a peg.

American University scored unearned runs in the second and third and its final counter in the seventh on successive doubles by Harry Newby, the team's captain and outstanding player, and Hertz. This inning was the big scare for Relief Pitcher Lentz, of the Sho'men, for A. U. got all three of its hits off him—the third a fluke infield single—after two were out. Shanty Shepherd, big A. U. catcher, who is in a miserable batting slump, ended the threat by tapping to the pitcher.

Dick Zarbock, promising A. U. center fielder, turned in several nice fielding and throwing plays, but then spoiled his performance by misjudging Stevens' towering liner, opening the eighth inning, and allowing it to sail over his head for Washington's first run.

Newby, with three hits in five trips, boosted his season's batting average to .583. He has made seven safeties in 12 tries.

Murray, one of the finest prospects among the lightweight and welterweight boys in the game today, has won 50 out of 52 matches, and his record includes a previous victory over Guggino down in a Tampa ring.

Meers, a southpaw, was with Nashville of the Southern Association last season.

Terp Lacrosse Squad Defeats Duke Here, 12-1

Special Dispatch to The Post

College Park, Md., April 13.—Using its regulars sparingly, Maryland's lacrosse team won its fourth straight victory of the season by defeating Duke today, 12 to 1. The Terps scored three goals in each quarter.

Steele made Duke's lone goal in the second period by picking up a loose ball and shoveling it in. The Blue Devils really had only one wide-open shot during the game and that went outside.

Eight stickmen shared in the Maryland scoring with Grelecki, who got the first two, leading with three. Vandenberg and Taylor were next in line with a pair apiece.

Vandenberg now is the leading scorer on the Maryland team with 13 goals, followed by Grelecki's 10.

Maryland will put in some heavy licks during the next two days for its invasion of West Point Saturday when the Terps will get their first real test of the campaign.

Ducky Medwick To Bat Cleanup For Dodgers

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, April 13.—Manager Leo Durocher pared his Brooklyn Dodger squad to 28 players today by sending half a dozen performers to Montreal, the club's International League farm.

Durocher also created a surprise by announcing that Joe Medwick not only would be in leftfield, but would bat in the cleanup spot against the Giants tomorrow.

Jack Graham, outfielder who had been hinted as a possible starter for the Dodgers in tomorrow's opening game against the New York Giants, was sent out under a 24-hour recall option.

Catcher Herman Franks and Pitchers Jack Kraus and Ed Albosta were released under ten-day options and Charley Gelbert, the veteran of many seasons with the St. Louis Cardinals, Washington Senators and other clubs, who was signed during the winter as infield "insurance," was released to Montreal outright along with Pitcher Al Sherer.

Fritzie Zivic Wins Easy Decision In Berger Bout

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, April 13.—Former Welterweight Champion Fritzie Zivic won an easy, 10-round decision over Maxie Berger, of New York, tonight as Berger's rock-ribbed durability saved him from a seemingly inevitable knockout by the sharp-shooting Pittsburgher. Zivic weighed 149; Berger, 146.

A crowd of 5000 paid a net of $7645 to see the one-sided bout.

Berger, who claims the Canadian junior welterweight championship, was floored seven times over four rounds—the fourth, sixth, eighth and tenth—for counts ranging from one to nine. The New Yorker rallied in the tenth after being down for a one-count and fought Zivic even.

4 D. C. Boxers Advance in A.A.U. Meet

Boston, April 13 (AP).—Rangy Jimmy Mulligan, the Lowell, Mass., schoolboy and the National A. U. U. Boxing Tournament's only defending champion, pounded the body of Warren Outlaw, Hammond, Ind., Negro, as if it was a bass drum to qualify for the middleweight class quarter-finals during tonight's opening bouts at the Boston Garden.

Mulligan, forced to set the pace by his overcautious rival, clubbed him with such two-fisted fury that Outlaw was toppled in each of the three rounds.

Only once did the Midwesterner land a heavy blow, a right to the head, late in the second round. Thereupon the aroused champion really stepped on the gas and battered Outlaw to the canvas with lefts and rights to the head just as the round ended.

Profiting by three draws, the Washington, D. C., contingent was forced to undergo only two bouts, winning one and losing the other. Charles Maimone, 160-pounder, survived when he decisioned Grover Shelton, of St. Louis, in a close bout. Warren Dougherty, the other D. C. fighter, bowed to Frank Best, of Fredonia, N. Y.

A total of 85 amateur battlers, the smallest national field in many years, weighed in and 34 of them automatically entered tomorrow night's quarter-final round by drawing byes.

Browns to Keep Don Gutteridge

St. Louis, April 13 (AP).—The St. Louis Browns announced today they had completed a deal with Sacramento of the Pacific Coast League for the services of Infielder Don Guttteridge.

The club announced Southpaw Albert (Boots) Hollingsworth would be retained conditionally. The Sacramento club had set April 15 as the date for consummation of both deals.

Gutteridge, former Cardinal infielder, will start at second base for the Browns in the season's opener at Chicago tomorrow.

Maryland Fish Commission Sets New Trout Regulations

Season Opens Today, With Times From 5:30 to 8 o'Clock, Standard; Streams Listed

By Jack Bell

The Nation is now operating under war time but it seems our wildlife does not recognize any other time than the rising and setting of the sun, and, of course, trout are no exception.

Recognizing this fact the Maryland State Game and Inland Fish Commission has issued new official regulations that will be enforced with the opening of the season tomorrow morning.

The season on trout—brook, rainbow and brown—is from April 15 to July 15, inclusive. The hours for trout fishing are from 5:30 a. m. to 8 p. m., standard time. By war time it is 6:30 a. m. to 9 p. m. While these hours are set for streams generally throughout the State, the commission has established special regulations on streams that are known as "Fishermen's Paradise," these streams are as follows:

At Beaver Creek

Beaver Creek, Washington County, at a point below Doubs Mill Dam, extending downstream to the floodgate at Upper Toms Meadow. Fishing is permitted only by means of an artificial fly—spinners prohibited. Creel limit, not more than five trout each day, all of which must be over 7 inches in length.

Savage River, Garrett County, fishing from the dam down to the mouth of the stream by means of artificial flies only—no spinner allowed. Creel limit, five trout, all of which must be over 7 inches.

Big Hunting Creek, Frederick County, lying on the south side of the road within the boundaries of the Catoctin recreation demonstration area.

The Army, to whom this area has been turned over, recognizes the fact that fishermen have certain rights to fishing in the area, inasmuch as the stream has been stocked by both State and Federal departments, decided to permit fishing. Fishing will be allowed only in that portion to the south of the road through the restricted area.

Fishing is permitted only by means of artificial flies—spinners prohibited. Creel limit five trout per day, all of which must be over seven inches. Fishing hours 7:30 a. m. to 7:30 p. m. April 15 to April 30, and between the hours of 7:00 a. m. and 8:00 p. m., from May 1 to June 30. Standard time.

Jones Falls and its tributaries, below Stevenson Road to Falls Road at Rockland. Fishing is permitted between the hours of 5:30 a. m. and 8:00 p. m. Standard time. Fly-fishing only, no spinners permitted, creel limit five trout, that must be over seven inches in length.

Cherry Creek, Garrett County, beginning at a point about 300 feet below the dam, to the mouth of the creek where it empties into Deep Creek Lake. Fly fishing only—spinners prohibited. Creel limit five trout per day, all of which must be over 7 inches. Fishing hours between 5:30 a. m. and 8 p. m. Standard time.

The closing of both forks of Fishing Creek above the reservoir, also the reservoir, to fishing was due to the scarcity of chlorine, which is used to purify the water. As a result the State game and inland fish commission stocked only that portion of the stream below the dam, with the additional fish that would have been planted above the reservoir.

Costantino Wins 55th Bout in Row

New York, April 13 (AP).—In spite of the first knockdown of his three-year professional career, Charles (Lulu) Costantino ran his streak to 55 straight fights without a setback tonight by winning a close decision over the former world bantam and featherweight champion, Harry Jeffra, in a sizzling eight-rounder in St. Nicholas Arena. Constantino weighed 128½, Jeffra 127.

Giants Whip West Pointers Again, 12 to 3

By the Associated Press

West Point, N. Y., April 13.—Mel Ott and his New York Giants did the expected today and walloped Army, 12-3, for the thirteenth consecutive time since the teams first met 28 years ago.

The game was a 2-2 deadlock until the sixth inning when the big leaguers sent ten men to the plate to convert five hits and two walks into six runs. Jim Studer entered the game as Army's new hurler just in time to bear the brunt of the Giants' barrage.

It was towering Bob Whitlow, of Hollywood, Calif., a junior, who scattered six hits to hold the Giants in check during the first half of the game.

Johnny Guckeyson helped the Cadet cause by poling a 350-foot homer in the fourth inning to knot the count after the Giants had scored twice in the third frame.

Before the game, Maj. Gen. Francis B. Wilby, U. S. M. A. superintendent, presented the Giants with an ash tray on behalf of the Corps of Cadets as a token of its "appreciation of the Giants' traditional interest in West Point baseball."

Redsox Win, 6-5

Worcester, Mass., April 13 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox ran into good college pitching here today and were hard-pressed to gain a 6-5 victory over Holy Cross in their annual baseball exhibition.

Southpaw Ernie Ford, who toiled the first five innings, limited the American Leaguers to four hits and they made only as many more against Ed Murphy, who finished. But three successive errors by Second Baseman Manny Merullo tossed the Sox a trio of unearned runs in the fourth.

Then, after Holy Cross bunched five of its six hits off Tex Hughson for four runs in the fifth, Johnny Peacock inserted a pinch double between singles by Newsome and Campbell for Boston's winning margin.

Air Current, Paying $11.10, Takes Feature at Jamaica

Opening Bid, The Favorite, Runs Second

Eire Five Lengths Back in Show Spot; Crowd of 16,834 Is On Hand for Sport

By the Associated Press

Jamaica Race Track, Jamaica, N. Y., April 13.—Seasoned by four races at Hialeah Park, one of which he won over the turf course, Louis Lee Haggin 2d's Air Current toyed with four other 3-year-olds to win the Boniface Purse by four lengths here today. The son of Carlaris, only Kentucky Derby eligible in the field, gave his trainer, Knox Osborne, his second success of the afternoon.

W. W. Crenshaw's Opening Bid handed favorite players their fifth setback in as many races decided in earning second position, five lengths before the Wheatley Stable's Eire, a winner here opening day over sloppy footing.

The track was fast for the first time since Thursday's opening. The sport attracted a banner crowd of 16,834. They saw Air Current romp the mile and 70 yards in 1:44 flat under Don Meade. The combination paid $11.10 for $2.

Eire started out as if he meant to repeat his recent victory. The Hard Tack colt sprinted right to the front and pulled several lenghts clear of Air Current. Opening Bid, meanwhile, had the others distanced. There was little change until the top of the stretch. There, Meade called upon the eventual victor. Air Current quickly collared Eire and pounded off by himself for a hollow score. Eire weakened so badly in the final furlong that Opening Bid merely romped into the runner-up spot. Blue Gino and Court Manners never were serious contenders.

Alsab Beaten By Colchis in $2500 Trial

The stewards who fined Jockey Mora $100 for claiming a foul last Saturday should have fined somebody today for not claiming a foul.

Transfigure Is Strong

Transfigure ran a strong race from a luckless beginning to win the thirtieth running of the Harford. The son of Espino, winner of the MacArthur Handicap at Bowie, was pinched back leaving the gate, but gained steadily after getting clear and won by three-quarters of a length under good handling by Jockey Johnny Deering. The Brandywine Stable's Madigama was second and a length and a half in advance of Victor Emanuel's Omission. The latter was the favorite in the field of seven by a slight margin over Cape Cod.

Cape Cod was a keen disappointment. Fresh from victories in the Rowe Memorial and the Bowie Handicaps at the Prince Georges track, the son of Bostonian failed to get to running at any stage and beat only one horse, the tired Designator.

Transfigure paid $14.10 and was clocked for the 6 furlongs in 1:12 3-5, slowest time since 1936 when Jay Jay won for Howard Bruce in the mud. Jay Jay, incidently, was scratched out of today's Harford and went inthe third race which he won in the same time as the Harford. Jockey Beverly Hacker got Jay Jay up to win by a neck from Sobriquet, with Happy Lark third.

Alaking Scores

The Perryville Handicap, the day's fourth event, was taken by Alaking, owned by C. E. Nelson, of Washington, D. C. Jockey Henri Mora rode his first winner of two for the day aboard this son of Equipoise which galloped to the wire four lengths ahead of the nearest opposition. Mora later piloted the Christiana Stable's Ice Water home in front. Alaking paid $5.80 and Ice Water returned $10.70.

Well played horses figured in the daily double which paid $28.40. J. S. Archer's Nilon won the first at a $7.60 mutuel and Ariel Beam took the second at $8.

80 Nominated For Belmont Stake June 7

By the Associated Press

New York, April 13.—A total of 80 3-year-old colts and fillies have been nominated for the historic Belmont Stakes at Belmont Park June 7, but Al Sabath's Alsab, Col. Ed. Bradley's Bless Me and Ben Whitaker's Requested are not among them.

These three, as well as any other 3-year-old colt or filly, may be made eligible for $2500 through a supplementary nomination before May 15.

Most of the other better-known 3-year-olds are in the list for the mile and a half grind which makes up the third race in the American turf's triple crown. Among them are William Woodward's Apache, a favorite for the Kentucky Derby; Warren Wright's Sun Again and Some Chance, the Arlington and Belmont Futurity winners of last year; Walter Chrysler, jr.'s Ramillies, Sam Riddle's Soldier Song, a good-looking son of Man o' War; Mrs. Payne Whitney's Devil Diver and Shut Out, both well-liked in the Kentucky Derby field, and William Ziegler, jr.'s Wait a Bit. Although Bradley did not nominate Bless Me, his chief Derby hope, he named four others for the race—Better Hurry, By Constript, Bin Bin and Bliss.

Selections at Havre de Grace

Dear Al:

If you think the housing situation is bad in Washington, you should try to get a stall for a race horse at Charles Town. In the area around the West Virginia track there are approximately 700 stalls. So far the track has received applications for some 1400 stalls. Looks like the best thing to do is put all the names in a hat and draw, but we'll have to let Leeds Riely, Frank Cronan and Henry Erickson worry about that. Despite the fact that Al Schmidl rode Alsab yesterday, his jockey in the $15,000 added Chesapeake on Saturday will be the capable Basil James. This boy was injured in New York last Saturday but says he will be shipshape for the big race. Mrs. Sidney Zell, wife of the owner of Incoming, wants the 3-year-old named for the Preakness. Zell says the horse will have little chance except if the track is muddy. Mrs. Zell has consulted the Hagerstown almanac, ancient publication, and it says there it will rain on Preakness Day. I don't believe it but those were harsh words somebody said after the foul claim made by Jockey Mora against Pictor after the finish of the Southern Maryland Handicap. This guy said, "Mora couldn't win that foul if Jockey Woolf had pulled out a gun and shot him approaching the finish." I still maintain that, with all his faults, Mora is honest and will give a poor man's horse a rich man's ride. That's more than I can say for some of the big-shot jockeys who ply their trade around the Maryland tracks. Pictor will be pointed for the Dixie Handicap, Trainer Ed Christmas said yesterday. And right here let me extend congratulations to Christmas for the fine manner in which he has brought the Brann horses along. Alsab is held at 5-1 in the latest list of odds on the Kentucky Derby. Forget all those stories about how turf fans are clipped for millions in the future books on the Derby. Fact is that there isn't enough money bet this way to buy 100 bags of peanuts. And I have the word of men who have made these books. I have heard much talk about betting in the future book but in all my experience I haven't seen more than a half dozen such wagers made. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—CITY MAN, a first-time starter, may turn up a good thing in the day's opener. This one has worked well. ZACABRAND should go alright; was educated in New Orleans. LEO'S BRANDY could be the third one.

Second race—TROON hasn't been postward since he was second at Delaware Park last summer. He is reported ready, however, and I'm going to string along. HALF CROWN was slightly injured at Bowie, but has recovered and this Derby candidate may be prominent.

Third race—ANONYMOUS was a winner in Florida, but was disqualified. Appears best of these Maryland-breds. IVA MAE and WHITE TIME are deserving of attention in this rather open affair.

Fourth race—SIR KID is dropping down after running a fair race in fair company. Should be able to handle the 116-pound assignment. EXARCH was a beaten favorite last out and can do better. LONG LEGS ran a fair race at the other town.

Fifth race—GREY WING appears suited by conditions in this field and has all the earmarks of a winning favorite. BLUE STEEL and PHARIEN should chase the top one home.

Sixth race—FIREBROOM looks like any price in this distance event. Needs only the right saddle help. ELTORADOR has a good Florida effort as a recommendation. CASSIS for the minor money.

Seventh race—PHARA FROST won three races here last fall. May start the ball rolling again in this. DINGMANS won at the other town. DICTY STEP is a possible surprise.

Eighth race—SAY JUDGE, ROUGH GOING and MISRULE is the way I prefer them in the day's finale. However, these horses belong to the "We Beat Each Other" Club.

Best Bet—FIREBROOM.

Seven Derby Horses Meet At Keeneland

Lexington, Ky., April 13.—Seven Kentucky Derby candidates, including Mrs. Payne Whitney's Shut Out and Emerson F. Woodward's Valdina Alpha, are to hook up in a six-furlong test tomorrow at Keeneland track.

Shut Out, well-regarded colt, is a stable-mate of Devil Diver, which which projected himself in the Derby picture by beating Whirlaway in Thursday's opening program at Keeneland.

Should Valdina Alpha make a good showing, it would give Woodward, Texas sportsman, a third likely Derby prospect. Two of his four Derby nominees—the Irish-bred Hollywood and Valdina Orphan—won six-furlong events at Keeneland last week. He still has another Derby horse, Rounders, to be tested.

Mrs. Whitney hasn't yet tried out her third Derby nominee, Buckskin, on the local track.

Completing the field tomorrow in the $1500 Woodvale, a 3-year-old allowance event, are Milky Way Farm's Dogpatch, R. C. Stable's Cloak, E. B. Johnston's First Prize, George T. Williams' Put In and J. W. Marchbank's Gallant Laddie, all Derby eligibles, and noneligibles Light Lady and Blue Chips.

ARIEL BEAM forged to front on outside after a furlong, disposed of DIRECTION and drew out under hand riding in final eighth. UNCLE BILLIES improved position gradually on inside and came with good energy in closing test. FOUR LEAF moved to contention boldly entering stretch and hung in closing stages. WAR SHY unseated rider and ran off for 6 furlongs before start. She broke on top and showed good effort.

The latter raced head and head with HAPPY LARK, shook off the latter but could not resist winner. HAPPY LARK went to front at once, set good pace and then weakened. BASILEUS had some early speed.

ETERNAL PEACE could not reach contention at any stage.

SEAMANLIKE was always forward factor, was squeezed back sharply when bumped by winner and rallied to close gamely. MARKSMAN saved much ground entering stretch and closed with good energy. However, these loans, officially classified as commercial, industrial and agricultural loans, were $1,481,000,000 higher in the 101 cities than they were a year ago. The total on April 8 in the 101 cities was $6,975,000,000.

Steel Output Dip Laid to Repairs, Scrap Shortage

New York, April 13 (AP).—The American Iron and Steel Institute reported today steel mills were scheduled to operate this week at 97.2 per cent of capacity, a drop of 1.4 per cent from last week, but still equivalent to an output of 1,651,100 net tons of ingots, a total greater than that of any week in 1941.

Last week operations at 98.6 per cent of capacity indicated a total of 1,674,800 tons of steel made. A month ago the rate was 97.9 per cent and production 1,663,000 tons, and a year ago operations were at 98.3 per cent of a smaller capacity for 1,586,500 tons.

The drop, chiefly due to a slowdown in Middle West operations, at a high rate recently, was believed to result from a slackening of scrap deliveries and possibly some repair work which had been put off as long as possible to keep the steel pouring out.

Soviet Orders Given Priority by U. S. Mills

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, April 13.—Daily Metal Trade today says: "Heavy allocations of alloy bars, heat treated stock for Russia under lend-lease and given preference in rolling, is raising hob with production schedules and has set back deliveries of high-rated tonnage with several mills. Deliveries in some instances now extend through the third quarter and into the early fourth.

"This lend-lease tonnage, however, is being expedited to enable producers to clear the allocation in the shortest time possible. Demand for bars for war needs is steadily mounting, new orders for shell steel supplementing heavier specifications against old orders."

Yarns Not Available, Carpet Mills Warned

By the Associated Press

The War Production Board notified rug and carpet manufacturers yesterday that it was "extremely unlikely" that they would receive any allocation of jute yarns after this month. The board told representatives of the industry of the present jute shortage and the "improbability of obtaining additional supplies from Calcutta." This was done, WPB explained, to prevent manufacturers from putting virgin wool into process for floor coverings which they might not be able to finish for lack of jute.

Government officials asked the industry to prepare an estimate of stocks of carpet wool in this country which could be diverted into blankets, apparel and other more essential civilian goods.

Transportation Crisis Seen in Detroit Area

Detroit, April 13 (AP).—Ernest Kanzler, chief of the automotive division of the War Production Board, asserted today that the Detroit area, swinging into steadily mounting war production, would encounter a transportation crisis some time between July and September of this year.

Addressing a conference of the representatives of various agencies, Federal, State and local, concerned in the problems of transporting war plant workers, Kanzler said:

"Seventy per cent of Detroit workers are still riding to work in private cars and you can make up your mind there will be no rubber for civilian use before 1944."

Trade Barometer Dips

Business conditions in Washington as of April 1 stood at 4 per cent above normal, representing a decrease of 5 per cent from the standing for March 1 of this year, according to the monthly survey of 147 trading areas, viz., Brooke, Smith, French & Dorrance, Inc., advertising concern.

Failures Total Drops

New York, April 13 (AP).—Business failures in the week ended April 9 numbered 215 compared with 243 in the preceding week and 240 in the like week of 1941, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

Can Women Fill War Jobs? Age-Old Prejudice Rapidly Dispelled by Actual Experience

"Women in war industry should be looked upon not as a problem but as a solution."

With such bold words, officials responsible for mobilizing America's human skills to man the machines of war production are whacking away at the old, hard-to-kill prejudice against women in industry.

It is predicted now that hiring for new jobs in war industry will offset the loss of jobs through curtailment of civilian lines by mid-year and employment will expand rapidly in the last half of 1942. By year's end the search for job-takers will be in full cry.

To meet the needs of American industry, labor supply experts argue, employers will have to forego prejudices against the weaker sex, as well as color, racial and religious prejudices.

Can women help with the job?

Thelma McKelvey, chief of the women's labor supply service of the War Production Board, has this answer:

"In general, the only restricting factor in the employment of women is the physical requirements of certain jobs which require a worker to lift heavy objects. Aside from that, women can bring to their jobs an accuracy and a deftness that are invaluable in manufacturing operations. In many kinds of precision work, they are superior to men."

Even the problem of lifting loads may be overcome, she remarks, by mechanical aids, such as roller conveyors and pedestal lifts. In some cases, benches may have to be made lower for women assembly workers, on tools scaled to their needs.

Writing in "Domestic Commerce," a weekly bulletin of the Department of Commerce, Miss McKelvey argues that the uses of women workers hardly have been tapped.

For instance, the number of women working in the aircraft factories today is a small fraction of all aircraft workers, and yet, she says:

"It is estimated that a third of all jobs in aircraft assembly plants could be filled satisfactorily by women."

Much of the riveting, which with drilling, countersinking, dimpling and bucking constitutes the main job in airplane assembly, could be done by women if they were trained for it, she argues.

Among the jobs which women might fill as machine operators, Miss McKelvey says, are:

Drilling, reaming, countersinking on single, multiple or pneumatic drills; small milling machines; small turret lathes; small and medium size punch presses; small angle bending machines and brakes; light grinders; riveting and dimpling machines; spot welding.

In bench work, she says, they could do:

Burring and filing of all kinds; soldering, hand forming over templates and blocks; tube cutting, bending and assembly; electrical assemblies; wiring and bending; subassemblies in jigs at benches.

At present, women are employed in the aircraft industry mainly in sewing covers for rudders, ailerons, wing tabs and other control surfaces. A few make parts and do minor jobs on electrical assemblies or wrap and identify gas lines.

Industrial managers are the key to women's success in war production jobs, Miss McKelvey declares.

"It is up to them to see that these women make good, both by careful job analysis and selection of employes, and by providing the right kind of in-plant training and supervision.

"It is necessary to emphasize," she adds, "that there are few employe problems which apply exclusively to women, and management will find that they can deal with women in about the same way that they deal with men workers.

". . . a new woman worker is just a new worker. Careful selection of personnel must be made, whether you are dealing with men or women. New women workers need training—but so do men. Many women who take war production jobs will be entering a new environment—but so are farm hands who take factory jobs."

By the Associated Press

Last year's shipments in the first, second, third and fourth quarters were respectively, $56,619,168; $75,180,914; $115,879,493 and $158,469,698.

The corporaion said it had undertaken production of more than 10 per cent of the country's requirements of all war materials fabricated from metal and is now in mass production of important war materials.

While production is going up, the corporation said, costs to the Government are decreasing.

ICC Approves Florida Railway Capital Slash

By the Associated Press

The Interstate Commerce Commission announced yesterday its approval of a plan of reorganization for the Florida East Coast Railway Co. providing for a reduction in capitalization from $95,616,000 to $37,000,000 and in fixed interest charges from $2,823,480 to $507,260.

Holders of present first-mortgage bonds will receive in exchange a similar principal amount of new first mortgage 3¾ per cent bonds. Holders of present first and refunding mortgage bonds will receive for each $1000, principal amount, and all accrued and unpaid interest, $100 of new general mortgage income 4½ per cent bonds and 10 shares of new no-par common stock. This will account for the entire 450,000 shares to be issued.

The equities of the holders of stock and general unsecured claims, not entitled to priority, were found to have no value and no provision was made for their participation in the plan.

Equipment trust certificates outstanding will be assumed by the reorganized company.

Anaconda Sales Set New Record

New York, April 13 (AP).—The Anaconda Copper Mines Co. reported its 1941 production of war-essential copper and zinc had reached new highs.

The company, in the annual report to stockholders, also announced new records for copper and brass fabrication.

The company's 1941 net income was $43,433,660, equal to $5.01 a share on outstanding capital stock, compared with 1940 net income of $35,052,699, or $4.40 a share.

Gross sales, the company said, amounted to $354,773,917, an increase of $111,111,016, or 45 per cent above 1940 sales.

New York, April 13 (AP).—Robert L. Stott, of Wagner, Stott & Co., was renominated today for a one-year term as chairman of the New York Stock Exchange by the Exchange's nominating committee.

Other nominees for positions to be filled at the annual election May 11 included these candidates for three-year terms as governors: Percy W. Brown, of Hornblower & Weeks, Cleveland; William W. Cabell, of Branch, Cabell Co., Richmond, and James J. Minot, of Jackson & Curtis, Boston.

Charles S. Garland, of Alex Brown & Sons, Baltimore, was chosen for the new nominating committee.

Mail Houses Suspend Sales of Tubed Items

Chicago, April 13 (AP).—Major mail-order houses have suspended temporarily sales of tubed toothpastes and shaving creams, pending a specific ruling on their status under the War Production Board order requiring a turn in of a used tube by the customer.

Spokesmen for Montgomery Ward & Co., and Sears, Roebuck & Co., said today they had asked for a clarification for the mail order business, not mentioned in the order of last week, establishing the turn-in requirement as of April 1.

Anti-Inflation Plans Depress Grain Futures

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 13.—Grain prices were on the skids again today after Saturday's modest rally in some cereals.

Wheat and rye slumped about a cent a bushel and soybeans even more. Prices in all pits closed at or near the day's low points.

Washington reports that a new Governmental drive on inflation is planned chilled buyers. Many dealers who bought wheat Saturday also were disappointed by failure of flour and milling trade activity to expand after indications of improved demand late last week.

Wheat closed ⅝ to ⅞ lower than Saturday, May, $1.22¼; July, $1.25⅛ to $1.25; corn, ½ to ⅝ down, May, 87⅛ to 87¼; July, 89¾ to 89¾; Oats, ⅜ to ½ off; soybeans, ½ to 1½ lower, and rye, ¾ to ⅞ lower. Lard prices held unchanged at ceiling levels, where they have been for more than a month.

Latest Government figures showed farmers still are paying off loans on 1941 stored wheat even though prices are not high enough to permit much, if any, profit. Grain men said they believed the bulk of the grain being redeemed is in farm storage since producers may be clearing room for the new crop, although these loans can be extended for another year.

On April 4 there were still 310,463,804 bushels under loan, repayments having been made on 35,771,296 bushels while 11,063,874 were turned over to the Government. This meant that about 2,500,000 bushels were redeemed during the week ended April 4 while slightly less than two million bushels were turned over to the Government.

Late Earnings Statements

Tidewater Associated Oil Co. earned $15,564,093, or $2.09 a common share last year, after preferred dividends, William F. Humphrey, president, said today in his annual report to stockholders. This compared with $7,269,063, or $1.14 a share in the preceding year, the report showed. Total revenues from operations last year were $148,675,853, compared with $136,645,279 in 1940.

United Fruit Co. estimated "apparent" earnings for the first quarter, ended April 4, at $3,802,000, before income taxes and not including any earnings from European or United Kingdom sources.

Consolidated Oil Corp. and subsidiaries reported 1941 net income of $16,472,494, equal, after provision of $2,500,000 for contingencies, to $1.25 a share on common stock, compared with 1940 net income of $3,792,602, or 28 cents a share.

R. H. Macy & Co., and subsidiaries reported net profit for the year ended January 31 of $3,641,427, equal to $2.20 a share of stock, compared with the preceding year's adjusted net profit of $4,269,009, or $2.97 a share. Jack I. Straus, president, said that if the corporation had followed its previous inventory method profits before taxes would have been $2,390,868 higher for the year, the company last year put into effect the last-in-first-out method of inventory valuation.

Gimbel Brothers, Inc., and subsidiaries for the fiscal year ended January 31 reported net profit of $3,174,336, equal to $2.08 a share on common stock, compared with the preceding year's profits of $2,348,055, or $1.20 a share. Profits were reduced by $556,469 as a result of adoption of last-in-first-out method of inventory valuation.

Pullman Co., sleeping car subsidiary of Pullman, Inc., reported net of $1,071,625 for the two months ended Febraury 28 against $868,061 in the like 1941 period.

Stocks Drift Irregularly as Traders Await Clews to Roosevelt Inflation Control Plan

New York, April 13.—Stocks leveled off today from last week's downward spiral and in a few groups negligible rallies were recorded.

In certain industrial blue chips further selling brought new lows for the last three or four years. Some other leaders, including United States Steel and Bethlehem, were unable to retain narrow gains scored in the early proceedings. Fractional advances and declines were approximately in balance at the close.

Many of the market's speculative followers remained inclined toward a policy of nonaction for the present in view of lively conjecture as to what President Roosevelt's promised program for inflation control would involve for leading corporations and their shareholders.

The Associated Press 60-stock average was unchanged at 34.1, the lowest level for this composite since March 31, 1938. Transactions were close to the lightest since last May at 237,710 shares compared with 295,190 Friday.

Fresh indications that stocks as a rule were slow to work up response to favorable earnings statements were given on the appearance of Anaconda Copper and Consolidated Oil annual reports.

Anaconda moved up only ⅛ on its showing of $5.01 a share earned for 1941 in contrast with $4.04 in the preceding year. Consolidated was unchanged in the face of profits equal to $1.25 a share for the year, after a charge-off of $2,500,000 for contingencies, against 28 cents a share in 1940.

Closing slightly on the improved side were United States Rubber preferred, Chrysler, Youngstown Sheet, Western Union, Cerro de Pasco, Westinghouse and Standard Oil (N. J.). Losers included Paramount, Dow Chemical, Air Reduction, American Can, United Aircraft and Pennsylvania.

Bonds were mixed; hogs again highlighted commodities with an early climb of 10 to 15 cents a hundredweight to new 16-year tops, with some recessions before the close. Chicago wheat finished ⅝ to ⅞ of a cent a bushel off and corn dipped ½ to ⅞ cent. Cotton futures were up 15 cents a bale to down 5 cents.

American Cyanamid, Gulf Oil and Glen Alden Coal showed gains in the Curb, while Fairchild Engine, American Gas & Electric and St. Regis Paper retreated. Transfers here were about 56,000 shares against 52,000 Friday.

Jobless Show 85,000 Drop In February

New York, April 13 (AP).—The National Industrial Conference Board, Inc., today reported there was a decline of 85,000 in the number of jobless persons in the United States in February, bringing total unemployment down to about four million.

The decline, the board said, was the first check in an upward unemployment trend which began from a low point of 461,000 last September and climbed to 4,100,000 in January. Total unemployment in February, 1941, was 7,300,000.

Although job displacements because of plant conversions to war production appear to have been checked "at least temporarily," the board said. "Sweeping limitation and conversion orders by the War Production Board during the past month (March), however, may have again increased the current volume of priorities unemployment."

Jewel Tea Sales Up 42%

New York, April 13 (AP).—Sales of Jewel Tea Co. in the four weeks ended March 28 amounted to $3,910,884, an increase of 42 per cent over $2,757,417 in the comparable weeks of 1941. Sales in the first 12 weeks of 1942 aggregated $11,786,600, a gain of 46 per cent over $8,045,597 a year ago.

Trial Deferred In Light Bulb Anti-Trust Suit

By the Associated Press

Trenton, N. J., April 13.—Federal Judge Phillip Forman, acceding to a request from the War and Navy Departments, today ordered indefinite postponement of the Government's anti-trust case against 12 major companies charged with exercising monopolistic control over the electric light bulb industry.

Robert P. Paterson, Undersecretary of War, and James V. Forrestal, Undersecretary of the Navy, had telegraphed to Judge Forman:

"We desire time to study the question of whether trial at time time of United States vs. General Electric Company and others would interfere with war production. If satisfactory to you, we request that trial be postponed for about a month pending such study."

Forman said that if the War and Navy Department studies showed no need of postponing the trial, Government counsel could apply to him for a new starting date.

Samuel Isseks, head of the New York office of the anti-trust division of the Justice Department, opposed the postponement.

Trial of the case, which was expected to take several months, had been scheduled to open today before Judge Forman.

Nelson's 69 Wins Play-Off In Masters'

Horton Smith as the only two-time winners in the Masters' nine-year history.

He also maintained unbroken his record of having beaten Hogan every time they have met in tournament play. He won by a stroke in a double nine-hole playoff for a caddie club-championship, won again in 1940's playoff for the Texas Open, and a third time in match play when Hogan met him in the 1941 P. G. A. tournament.

Up Two Strokes

Hogan gained a spectacular lead on the first hole today when Nelson sliced his tee shot into the woods and took six strokes to Hogan's four before holing out. He gained another on the long, dog-leg fourth when Nelson drove into a trap.

It was on the fifth hole, which they halved with 4's, that Nelson felt his game come back, he said tonight.

"On the first four holes," he observed, "the breaks all went against me. When I got to the sixth I could feel I was in the groove again. I was hitting the ball true every time."

To the gallery it was the eagle-eighth which won the match, but Nelson said the sloping tenth marked the turning point.

There, he recounted, Hogan lost a stroke with a faulty chip—which previously he had been handling well—and from then on he felt he had the championship.

Two Virginia Golf Tourney Dates Settled

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., April 13.—The Virginia State Amateur Golf tournament will be played on the Cascades course at Hot Sprngs on July Fourth weekend and the annual State team tournament will be played on Sunday, September 13, on the Farmington course at Charlottesville.

The Virginia Golf Association will poll women golfers as to their preference of a date and site for their State tournament. Three Richmond clubs—Lakeside, Hermitage and the Country Club of Virginia—and the Homestead course at Hot Springs have bid for the women's event.

The association members were agreed that the entry lists for the men's events probably would be much smaller than usual, but decided to stage the tournaments anyhow during wartime and give all entry fees to the Red Cross. Winners will receive medals or certificates instead of the usual costly trophies.

State Amateur Champion Walter Cushman, of Charlottesville, is now in the Navy, but said he would be on hand to defend his title at Hot Springs July 2, 3, 4, 5, if he could get leave then.

Middie Nine Is Relegated To Doghouse

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, April 13.—Navy's spring sports squads, roaring into the third week of the season, have lost only two intercollegiate contests in 15 starts and it's the baseball team that's in the doghouse.

Maxie Bishop's nine, which until last Saturday was well on the way toward assembling a fine starting record, has been beaten by Harvard and Penn but not another Middie squad has tasted defeat.

Coming through with flying colors last week the sturdy lacrossemen turned back Penn State for their third straight win; the tennis squad trounced Temple without losing a game; the international dinghy squadron sailed home ahead of Penn, Lafayette and Haverford, and the track team opened its season handily taking Villanova and Catolic U. into camp.

The baseballers get a chance to redeem themselves this week against the Baltimore Orioles, Michigan and West Virginia. The Oriole tilt, tomorrow, is listed as an "exhibition" and won't count on Navy's Official records.

Eight Baseball Regulars Lost By Frostburg

By the Associated Press

Frostburg, Md., April 13.—Coach "Gimp" Carrington, of the State Teachers College, has had his 1942 baseball plans slightly upset by the draft and defense work.

He said eight expected holdovers, around whom he was going to build his squad, were either in the armed services or working in war plants.

Six games are lined up for the season, despite loss of men. Carrington said he wanted more games, but so far he had been able only to schedule the half-dozen opponents.

Pitcher Hank Bell, First Baseman Jake Carrington and Outfielders Ed Athey and Willie Shuff were the veterans he had on hand, the coach reported.

Last year, his classy club carried off honors in the Tri-state collegiate conference. Unless Fairmont continues in the wheel, however, the circuit would be abandoned for the duration, Carrington asserted.

The teacher's schedule (games at home unless otherwise designated):

April 22, Indiana Teachers, Indiana, Pa.; April 25, Shepherd Teachers, Shepherdstown, W. Va.; May 5, St. Vincent's College Latrobe, Pa.; May 9, Shepherd.

Nats, Yanks to Give Baseball Its 1942 Christening Today

First Baseman Mickey Vernon will take the field as the only holdover from Washington's 1941 infield. Playing beside him at second base will be a Mexican lad, Jose Gomez, who was a stranger even to Bucky Harris until four days ago. Gomez was imported from Mexico, where he had been playing winter ball, after Harris faced a critical second base situation due to the sore arm of Frank Croucher. In previous big league trials with the Giants and Phillies, his fielding was adequate, but his hitting was not.

At third base, Harris is presenting another of his Latin Legion—Bobby Estalella, who has been batting around the American League and high minors for five years as an outfielder. His conversion into a third baseman was one of Harris' chief experiments in the Nats' training camp. Estalella's bat is expected to offset his fielding deficiencies.

The prize development of Washington's rookie crop will be at shortstop—Bob Repass, drafted from the Columbus (Ohio) club last winter. Repass comes up from the South after a sensational training period in which his fancy fielding was the high mark of the Washington infield. He comes to the Nats with a .317 batting average at Columbus.

Two-thirds of the Washington outfield will also present new faces with George Case the only familiar figure. In rightfield, Bruce Campbell, much-traded veteran of 11 seasons in the majors, will lend his hitting power to the Nats in the cleanup position. He was acquired from the Tigers in a winter trade. In centerfield, the fleet, sharp-throwing Stan Spence, obtained from the Red Sox, has no rivals for the job.

Jake Early, who graduated to the No. 1 catching role after understudying Rick Ferrell for three years, will be Hudson's battery mate today, hitting fifth in the batting order.

It's a team that has impressed critics as a potential first-division club that could attain such estate chiefly because of its pitching power. It is not a team that will knock down any of the league's fences despite the spring training successes which netted them 20 victories in 28 games against big league opposition.

The Yankees will be taking the field with two cogs missing from its pennant-winning machine of 1941. At first base, vacated by Johnny Sturm, now an Army private, Manager Joe McCarthy has installed Big Ed Levy, angular infielder who has been Yankee property for four seasons and performed last year with Newark, Yankee farm team.

Replacing the ailing Red Rolfe at third base is Jerry Priddy, a converted second baseman who has apparently beaten out Frankie Crosetti for the job until Rolfe, a month late for spring training, recovers. Priddy was with the Yankees last year, coming up from Kansas City as one of the famed shortstop-second base team of Rizzuto and Priddy, but he found no liking for big league pitching.

Yankee power, which has featured the New York club's pennant triumphs, is concentrated in the veteran outfield of Joe Di Maggio, Charley Keller and Tommy Henrich, married men who were deferred in the draft. At second base is the redoubtable Joe Gordon and at shortstop sensational little Phil Rizzuto, now beginning his second season as a Yankee regular. Bill Dickey, veteran of a dozen Yankee campaigns and regarded as one of the more dangerous batters in the league with men on bases, remains the No. 1 Yankee catcher.

Max Butcher. Both teams will present several line-up changes.

The Cardinals, whom sports writers have established as the favorites to win the National League pennant this season, hope to have 15,000 followers in Sportsmans Park, St. Louis, for their first battle with the Chicago Cubs. Morton Cooper will be on the mound. Claude Passeau, veteran pitching ace, will start for Chicago.

The Boston Braves will help the Phils get going at Philadelphia, with 10,000 fans expected and Al Javery facing old Si Johnson of the tailenders on the mound. The Phils have a new pilot, 61-year-old Hans Lobert.

The Cleveland Indians and Detroit Tigers, who a year ago were rated contenders for the American League crown and now are not even certain of finishing in the first division, will be the attraction for some 35,000 fans at Briggs Stadium in Detroit. Jim Bagby, who has been promoted to Cleveland's No. 1 pitching spot formerly filled by Bob Feller, will oppose big Al Benton, of the Tigers.

The Boston Red Sox, generally rated second to the Yankees in the American League, will be hosts to Connie Mack's Philadelphia Athletics before an expected turnout of 25,000 at Boston. Dick Newsome, who surprised everybody by winning 19 games for the Sox last year, has drawn the opening pitching assignment opposite Phil Marchildon.

At Chicago the White Sox and the St. Louis Browns expect to entertain about 15,000 fans with Johnny Rigney on the mound for Chicago against either Elden Auker or Bob Muncrief, of the Browns.

Pitcher Washburn Returns to Newark

Newark, N. J., April 13 (AP).—The Newark Bears, of the International Baseball League, announced today it had obtained George Washburn, ace of the Bears pitching staff in 1940, from he Kansas City Blues, of the American Association.

Manager Bill Meyer said he expected to have the big right-hander back here in time for opening of the season Thursday. Last year Washburn spent half the season with the New York Yankees and came back to the Bears, out of condition, to win nine and lose seven.

Judge Landis Calls Meeting For Game Plans

By the Associated Press

New York, April 13.—A meeting of baseball's advisory council composed of Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis and Presidents Ford Frick and Will Harridge of the National and American Leagues will be held here Wednesday ,probably for arranging for this year's two all-star games.

Arrangements to convert the annual all-star spectacle into a double feature to aid the Nation's war effort were made at a special winter meeting of the major leagues, but sites and some other details have not yet been determined.

The all-star game, originally scheduled for Brooklyn's comparatively small Ebbets Field, is expected to be transferred to the Polo Grounds, home of the New York Giants, and the second game is considered most likely to go to Cleveland's mammoth Municipal Stadium.

The first game will be played in the afternoon of Monday, July 4, and the second probably will be at night, Tuesday, July 7.

Sam Snead Hopes To Enter Armed Forces Very Soon

By the Associated Press

Hot Springs, Va., April 13.—Sam Snead, second leading money-winning golf professional in the Nation, expects to enlist in some branch of the armed services within the next few weeks, it was learned at the Bath County draft board office today.

Miss Virginia Sively, board secretary, said that it was understood that Snead would enlist before mid-May. Ed Lowman, a member of the board, said that no definite date had been set yet for Snead's induction in case he does not enlist.

Snead is interested in entering the aviation branch and has talked to officials about it.

Indications are that the Augusta masters was Snead's last golf tournament as a civilian since the next major event, the National P. G. A. is set for May 25.

D.C. Recreation Bill Before House Group

The House District Committee will meet at 10:30 a. m. Tnursday to decide whether to accept the Senate version of the District recreation bill or send the measure to conference, Chairman Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, announced last night.

At the same time the committee will take up three other local legislative matters, he said.

As passed by the House and with technical Senate amendments, the recreation bill provides for the creation of a seven-member board of recreation to be appointed by the District Commissioners. Members would include a representative of the Commissioners, the Board of Education, the National Park and Planning Commission, and four private citizens.

The District Committee also will consider a bill introduced by Representative D'Alesandro (Democrat), of Maryland, to remove a provision of the local income tax law which requires out-of-town manufacturers to pay a 5 per cent tax on their net profits earned in the District.

Two measures introduced by Representative Randolph will be taken up. One would permit an unlimited number of boarding and rooming houses in District areas zoned as residential "A" restricted and "A" semirestricted, provided the houses comply with present fire regulations.

The other bill would permit persons charged with driving while drunk in the District to submit themselves to scientific tests to determine whether they are intoxicated.

Two Workmen Fall to Death On Jobs Here

Two District workmen, one a painter and the other a quarry laborer, fell to their deaths yesterday.

Harry Albert Murray, 45, of the 7200 block of MacArthur Boulevard (Stop 28), was killed when he apparently slipped at the top of a 65-foot, enclosed bucket chain elevator at the Edmonds Art Stone Co., 2135 Queens Chapel Road Northeast, and crashed to the bottom. Thoburn Wheeler, 45, 55054 Third Street Southeast, fell from a fourth story fire escape on the Allan Lee Hotel, 2224 F Street Northwest.

Murray was found at the bottom of the elevator shaft about 12:45 p. m. by a fellow worker, John Smith, 2404 Twenty-second Street Northeast, who said he had last seen him about half an hour earlier working at the top of the shaft. The shaft extends about 60 feet above the ground and has its base five feet below the surface. Murray's body was extricated by members of the police homicide squad and removed to the morgue. A workman for the company for almost two years, he leaves his wife, Mrs. Katie Murray, and three small children, Vada, Ralph and Shirley. Four of their seven children have died. He is also survived by his mother, Mrs. Bessie B. Murray, of Hagerstown; five brothers, William and Raymond, of near Glen Echo; Jesse, Frank and Charles, of Hagerstown; four sisters, Mrs. Anna Harris, of Great Falls, Md.; Mrs. Myrtle Cunningham, Mrs. Florence Robinson and Mrs. Rosie Peck, of Hagerstown. A native of Hagerstown, he went to Montgomery County about 17 years ago.

Wheeler, a member of the painting firm of Wheeler Bros., 504 Third Street Southeast, was found dead about 2:15 p. m. by Kellop Cartwright, 1223 Tenth Street Northwest, lying on the ground on the Virginia Avenue side of the hotel. Cartwright, who was painting the structure with Wheeler, said he last saw him going up the fire escape with a bucket of paint. He expressed the belief that Wheeler fell from the fourth landing, probably after fainting or sustaining a heart attack. The body was removed to the morgue.

Wheeler leaves his wife and two daughters.

Congress Gets Bill to Change Police Setup

A bill to extend the probationary period of a police officer from one to three years, to create a three-man probationary board and to establish a rank of police corporal between those of private and sergeant was sent to Congress yesterday by the Commissioners.

This move was prompted by the report of a special committee on reorganization of the Police Department appointed June 25, 1941. The Commissioners accepted the 40-odd recommendations of the committee last winter and have been putting them gradually into effect.

The extension of the probationary period was held necessary because a year has not proved long enough to make a "thorough check and appraisal of the character, attitude and efficiency of the new members before making them permanent members of the force."

The probation board, which is to review the cases of all probationary officers before they are submitted to the Commissioners, is designed to help the Commissioners and the officers in question by presenting an impartial review of the individual cases.

The corporalcy is intended to enable men thought qualified to rise from the rank of private to demonstrate their abilities and qualifications without being given prematurely the full responsibility of sergeant. The corporal's job would pay $2600 per year—$200 more than the highest private's pay.

Detective Sergt. George E. Thornton, incapacitated from further active duty because of disabilities suffered in line of duty, was retired by the Commissioners, effective April 30. Private Avonia H. Cochran was ordered retired at the same date for the same reason.

Some one of these days we all may remember the date, April 14, as well as we do July 4th.
It won't be called Independence Day, but Interdependence Day—the day on which, in the words of Vice President Wallace, we all shall celebrate the ideal that the well-being of one American nation is closely interwoven with the well-being of all others, the plan which substitutes for the balance-of-power theory of Europe, which has continuously inflicted war on the world, the concept of understanding, co-operation and peace among nations.
It is with the aim of furthering this ideal that two broadcasts will be heard over WJSV today—Pan American Day—intended to further the amity of the North and South American nations.
From 10 to 10:45 p. m., WJSV will carry the Columbia network program, which also is being short waved throughout the Western Hemisphere and the world. Its highlights will be some remarks of Vice President Wallace, read by Edward Arnold—the Vice President originally was scheduled to speak, but other commitments prevented—and an address by Amaral Peixuto, Governor of Rio de Janeiro State and son-in-law of Brazil's President, Getulio Vargas. The reminder of the three-quarter-of-an-hour program is musical, featuring popular songs of both continents by the highlights of C.B.S.'s entertainment staff.
Between 6:30 and 6:35 p. m., Lee Vickers, whom you hear daily over WJSV with Latin-American news, is to devote his stint to telling you what Pan American Day means.

Contract Bridge

This question concerns your play of today's hand. You are North, the contract is six no trump, and East opens the five of spades. Carry on from this point so as to take 12 tricks. The solution is presented below.

Today's Hand

NORTH DEALER

NORTH: ♠AK7 ♡K8 ◇AKJ2 ♣AQJ10
WEST: ♠J98642 ♡1096 ◇865 ♣7
EAST: ♠5 ♡AJ542 ◇Q973 ♣832
SOUTH: ♠Q103 ♡Q73 ◇104 ♣K9654

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
2 NT.	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
4 ♣	Pass	4 NT.	Pass
6 NT.	Pass	Pass	Pass

The Solution

When one expert played the hand he made the slam contract by an end play, postponing the finesse against the diamond queen until the opponents' cards made him certain that the end play would succeed where the finesse would fail.

Declarer won the spade lead with the king, and at once played a heart to the queen. East followed small and the queen held. Now came five leads of clubs, then the ace and queen of spades. On the queen of spades East threw the jack of hearts, indicating that he was trying desperately to keep the diamond queen guarded. Declarer cashed the diamond king and played the king of hearts, forcing East to take the ace and lead a diamond into declarer's ace, jack for the last two tricks. North made six no trump, losing only one heart trick.
